Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Senator Mead (D.-N. Y.), chairman of the Senate War Investigating Committee, expressed concern today over a reported proposal by Canada to pay the United States for its investment in the Goose Bay airport in Labrador and to control this highly developed property after the war ends.

Senator Mead told Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economic Administrator, during a committee hearing: "If my information is correct, our interests are not being protected."

The chairman said that if reports reaching him were true, Canada desired to perfect an agreement under which she would pay the United States $77,000,000 for this country's investments in airport facilities in that country and Newfoundland. This nation originally agreed, he said, to pay for the improvements on a 50-50 basis with Canada, but it appears, he said, that Canada and Newfoundland now do not want the United States to pay its part.

He stated that of all the airports in the section, Goose Bay is most important as a post-war commercial aviation post.

Mr. Crowley told Senator Mead that his agency had nothing to do with airport matters—that it was the concern of the military.

Outlines Policy.

Outlining lend-lease policies before the committee in connection with disposal of surpluses abroad, Mr. Crowley told the committee it would be his policy to continue to supply lend-lease goods to the United Kingdom, Russia, France and other Allies after the war with Germany ends, to help win the war against Japan.

He took the position that lend-lease cannot be cut off abruptly when the war terminates, but must be continued during the transition period and gradually tapered off.

Vast amounts of surplus goods can be used for lend-lease and the United National Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, Mr. Crowley said.

House Committee Rejects Plea For Broader Postwar Benefits

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 — (AP) The Administration's program for broader postwar jobless benefits was rejected flatly today by the House Ways and Means committee as it approved a demobilization and reconversion bill emphasizing economy in peacetime federal expenditures.

Unemployment compensation administration is left entirely in the hands of the states.

The committee voted down a proposal by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes that the government set minimum standards for unemployment benefits, with payments of at least $20 weekly for 26 weeks for top pay workers.

Rep. Knutson (R-Minn), ranking committee Republican, said: "We have protected the public purse."

Revamping a Senate-approved measure, the committee knocked out provisions for federal retraining of war workers for lower jobs and removed 3,500,000 government workers from unemployment compensation coverage.

While the House group acted on this measure, the Senate debated stormily a proposal that the government be authorized to renegotiate sales of surplus property in the way that war contracts have been renegotiated.

SOLDIER BALLOT

MAY KEEP VOTE RESULT IN DOUBT

11 States Will Not Count Poll of Those in Service on Election Day.

DELAY OF A MONTH POSSIBLE

In Event of Close Race Nebraska Could Hold Up Winner of Presidency Until Dec. 7.

Copyright, 1944, by Associated Press.

Because eleven States will not count their soldier votes on election day, November 7, it is possible that the outcome of the 1944 presidential election will remain in doubt for several weeks after the polls close.

Should the election be unusually close, the winner might not be known until as late as December 7, when the canvass of Nebraska's absentee vote could determine whether the State's seven electoral votes would be cast for President Roosevelt or Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

These possibilities grow out of an Associated Press survey which indicates that more than 2,000,000 men and women in the armed forces have applied for absentee ballots and that, by the most conservative estimates of State election officials, approximately twice that number will vote in November.

Soldier Vote May Decide.

The soldier vote is likely to be decisive in most of the eleven States, which do not immediately tabulate it, and the eleven—including Pennsylvania with thirty-six, California with twenty-two and Missouri with fifteen—have a combined electoral vote of 116. President Wilson's electoral margin over Charles Evans Hughes in 1916 was only twenty-three.

In Pennsylvania, where officials expect 200,000 to 300,000 soldier ballots, the absentee vote will be counted on November 22. "The votes of 100,000 to 125,000 persons could easily swing a close election," commented a member of Gov. Edward Martin's official family. "We may not know who has won until the absentee votes are counted."

California, whose Secretary of State predicts a service vote of 175,000 to 200,000, will not canvass it until November 24. Missouri, receiving more than 1,000 ballot applications daily, will start counting absentee votes the Friday after Election Day.

Gave Roosevelt 99.

Of the States which will defer their soldier-vote count, eight gave President Roosevelt a total of 99 electorial votes in 1940. The other three gave Wendell L. Willkie 17.

Besides Nebraska, Pennsylvania, California and Missouri, the States which will add up some or all of their soldier votes after election day are Colorado, six electoral votes, November 22; Delaware, three, November 9; Florida, seven, November 17; North Dakota, four, December 5; Rhode Island, four, December 4; Utah, four, November 27, and Washington, eight, November 27.

Florida's canvassing boards usually meet the Friday after election although the law gives them until November 17. Utah counts State ballots on Election Day, but Federal ballots may be counted until November 12 and would not be shown in the total count until the official canvass November 27.

4,000,000 SOLDIER VOTES MAY BE CAST

NEW YORK, Aug. 24 — (AP) If the admittedly conservative estimates of most state election officials are correct, approximately nine per cent of the votes in the November election will be cast by men and women in the armed forces.

An Associated Press survey determined that some 2,000,000 applications for absentee ballots have been received from battlefronts, ships and training camps, with thousands of others engulfing employes of nearly all the 48 states.

Estimates of the number of GI votes to be cast in each state indicated a nation-wide total of at least 4,000,000 although some estimates would add up to a higher figure.

Only nine states have up-to-date registration figures. These, with recent primary election returns and estimates based on the last presidential election, point to a total of 43,000,000 persons qualified to vote in November, compared with the 49,548,221 who voted for major party candidates four years ago.

Illinois' secretary of state, Richard Yates Rowe, estimates service men and women from that state will cast up to 12 per cent of the total vote—"enough to swing any election," he says. Charles K. O'Connell, who holds the same office in Kentucky, predicts the election "will depend on the way the absentee voting goes."

WILSON QUITS WPB; SAYS NELSON AIDES IMPAIRED HIS WORK

Charges Group Spread Stories That He Opposed Reconversion Plans.

LAUDED BY ROOSEVELT

'Aware of Some Dissention' Says President in Accepting Resignation.

AUG 23 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 — (AP) The lid blew off a bitter row in the War Production board today when Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman, resigned and charged that he was the victim of "unfair attacks and criticisms" by aides of Chairman Donald M. Nelson.

AUG 25 1944

Wilson, former president of General Electric company, accused Nelson's personal assistants of inspiring stories that he was acting as spokesman for big business and industry to a peacetime basis.

Sends Letter to FDR

"The dissension within the organization does harm to the war production effort and, therefore, to the country," Wilson wrote President Roosevelt. "I am unwilling to be a party to such a controversy."

The resignation was accepted with expressions of regret by the President, who said he was "aware of some dissension" within WPB, key agency in charge of the country's mammoth output of war materials.

The development confronted Nelson with one of the most serious crisis in WPB history, just as he was preparing to depart on an economic mission to China at the behest of Mr. Roosevelt.

The President tonight named Lt. Commander J. A. Krug to be acting chairman during Nelson's absence in Chungking. Krug recently left a WPB vice chairmanship to take a naval commission.

High sources said Nelson planned to take the helm of WPB personally on his return and would not again delegate full authority over WPB operations to any vice-chairman, as he did in the case of Wilson.

Tells Views to Committee

Wilson who quit the $175,000-a-year presidency of General Electric to take the vice chairmanship two years ago, went to Capitol Hill late in the day to tell his views to the Senate War Investigating committee. The committee chairman, Senator Mead (D-NY), later issued a statement saying rumors of a Nelson-Wilson row over reconversion were "unfounded and unfair to both men."

Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) added that the government should have stopped the rumors that cost it Wilson's services. He also asserted Nelson should not be sent to China at a time when the reconversion problem is to the fore.

"I think it is a calamity to have him out of the country, with Mr. Wilson out of the picture, when the European war might end before he can get back," Ferguson said.

During the day Wilson personally announced his decision to resign at a closed "unity" meeting of nearly 200 top WPB officials called by Nelson. Nelson, who addressed the WPB session first, had no advance knowledge that Wilson planned to make the announcement. The meeting broke up in a burst of cheering as the men shook hands.

Holds Nelson Responsible

However, at a news conference later, Wilson indicated that he held Nelson at least partly responsible for the prolonged undercover dissension.

"Our staff has been continually pilloried with the story that we were holding back reconversion, favoring big business, and other stories that were completely untrue," Wilson asserted.

The reports of big business opposition to a start on reconversion now, had been to the effect that larger industrial units generally are tied up with high-priority war orders not likely to be cancelled, and want an even start with smaller enterprises whose facilities might be freed earlier.

Failed to Keep Promise

"Nelson has repeatedly promised to hold a press conference and completely vindicate the staff and myself," Wilson said.

"The promises were never"—Wilson repeated the word with emphasis—"never carried out."

The departing vice-chairman said that his general program for reconversion—centering in the WPB production executive committee headed by him—had been laid before Nelson early in the year.

30. 24— 18265

"Twenty weeks elapsed before we could get the agreement of Nelson to put it into effect," he said.

Accusations that he had opposed issuance of Nelson's program for limited civilian goods production were unfair, Wilson continued.

He acknowledged he had recommended delaying the program until the Manpower commission agreed it could be instituted without hurting war production, but declared: "I was ready and willing to put it into effect on July 1, as Nelson requested. Mr. Byrnes (War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes) instructed me not to put it in on July 1."

Wilson declared himself fully in accord with the principles of Nelson's program, whose four elements went into effect on a staggered schedule which delayed the last and most important order until August 15. This was the action permitting limited civilian goods production in plants not needed for war work.

A complete blueprint of plans prepared by his staff and intended to be thrown into immediate effect upon Germany's collapse, has been placed in Byrnes' hands, Wilson said.

Nelson Silent

There was no immediate comment from Nelson on Wilson's news conference remarks and reporters' attempt to get in touch with him were unsuccessful.

Krug, who is to be temporary WPB chief, was formerly power manager of the Tennessee Valley authority. He joined WPB in June, 1941, and quickly rose in the organization. He was made chief of the power branch shortly afterwards and later director of the office of war utilities, then vice-chairman in charge of programs. He is 37 years old.

On Capitol hill today a row between Nelson and Lieut. General Brehon Somervell, head of the Army service forces, was laid bare in bristling testimony from Nelson that military opponents of civilian reconversion sought "blunderbuss" labor edicts to cure isolated munitions shortages.

Testimony Released

The War Production board chairman told the Senate War Investigating committee that with rare exceptions all military demands "are being met." The committee released Nelson's story, told at a secret meeting last week, as the aftermath of publication of testimony by Major General Lucius D. Clay, army materiels director, stressing artillery and other deficits he attributed primarily to manpower shortages.

Nelson declared that:

1. Somervell complained to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes about "a great shortage of manpower" just prior to announcing the recent airplane cutback releasing thousands of workers for other jobs."

2. War production "does not need more than 100,000 of the 700,000 workers already released from munitions industries.

3. The War Production board is not kept advised of military reserves at the front and must accept Army and Navy requests at face value.

4. Tremendously-increasing requirements for heavy artillery was due to the army's delay in acknowledgement that aircraft bombing could not take the place of artillery.

Asserting that the recent airplane cutback would solve manpower shortages in the forging industry, Nelson testified the army had anticipated the cut for three months prior to its announcement.

In the airplane industry, he said, unemployment "will be acute and by the first of January will affect three to four hundred thousand workers."

"I feel confident that the assurance that civilian production is being planned in every area and shop where it is not interfering with war production will serve to defer any haste in leaving a war job," Nelson said.

NELSON TAKES ISSUE WITH HIS ARMY CRITICS

WPB Head Says Somervell Called Man Power Short on Eve of Cutback.

EMPLOYMENT DECLINE NOTED

Drop in Man-power Requirements by Another 300,000 at End of Year Is Forecast.

Washington, Aug. 24 (A. P.).—Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, was disclosed today to have told Senate investigators that Lieut.-Gen. Brehon B. Somervell complained of man-power shortages on the eve of a recent cutback in airplane production which released thousands of workers for other jobs. Though acknowledging the need of men to meet the expanded requirements of specialized items, Mr. Nelson said in his testimony last week before the Senate War Investigating Committee that virtually all critical military programs were being met.

He added that the remaining problems would not be solved "by letting loose a blunderbuss against the whole man-power situation or by general edicts and broad limitations on the use of labor." Testifying that the airplane cutback would solve the man-power situation in the forging industry completely, the war production chief said that the army had anticipated the cutback for three months.

Cannot Be Explained.

He added that when Gen. Somervell, chief of the Army's Services of Supply, was talking with James F. Byrnes, war mobilizer, "about the great shortage of man power, and so forth, I told Gen. Somervell, 'You have an airplane cutback coming soon, probably next week.'"

Asked by Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) how he reconciled the man-power shortage statement and the subsequent cutback announcement, Mr. Nelson replied: "We just don't, sir."

The release of the testimony also disclosed a statement from Mr. Nelson that he was not kept informed as to military reserves at the front.

Farewell Conference.

"There are no figures available to us at all," he said. "Once they leave storage in this country, you have no figures available as to what the reserves are."

While his testimony was being made available on Capitol Hill, Mr. Nelson spent an hour with President Roosevelt in a farewell conference before his departure on a special mission to China. He declined to discuss the talk with reporters and gave no indication when he would leave.

Mr. Nelson's side of his row with the Army was released by the Senate War Investigating Committee today as the aftermath of earlier publication of testimony by Major-Gen. Lucius D. Clay, Army material director, placing primary blame on man power shortages for big deficits in heavy ammunition and other items.

Stability and Security.

"The decline in employment," Mr. Nelson told the committee last week, "must be recognized as a decline in labor requirements, even though there is an urgent demand for about 100,000 workers in direct war production and another 100,000 in sustaining civilian production. "Our own estimate is that overall man power requirements will go down by at least another 300,000 by the end of the year, even though both Germany and Japan continue at war with us and all our production schedules remain in effect."

Mr. Nelson said that war production "does not need more than 100,000 of the 700,000 workers already released from munitions industries, that war plants could not employ the 700,000 and that the millions needed at their war jobs "should be given the assurance that civilian jobs will be available when war production eases up."

"I feel quite confident that the assurance that civilian production is being planned in every area and shop where it is not interfering with war production would be regarded as a factor of stability and security by war workers, and therefore will serve to defer any haste in leaving a war job," he said.

Answer to Army Complaint.

Asked about the Army's complaint that people are deserting wartime for peacetime jobs, Mr. Nelson replied: "If that is true, why haven't they been gravitating into the tire industry? That is one of the best-paid industries in the country."

Questioned about the recent resignation of the rubber director, Bradley Dewey, upon what Mr. Dewey said was the completion of the rubber program, Mr. Nelson declared: "It was completed—all but getting the tires."

"Then you don't agree that the job was completed?" asked the committee counsel, Rudolph Halley. "No sir. It is like the Army saying they are completed except for the shooting."

Text of Wilson's Letter Of Resignation to FDR

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—(AP) The texts of Charles E. Wilson's letter of resignation as Executive Vice Chairman of the War Production Board, and President Roosevelt's letter of acceptance:

My Dear Mr. President:

Two years ago you requested me to accept an appointment with the War Production because you thought I might contribute to war production, particularly to aircraft and shipping programs, which production programs you then believed to be lagging. We agreed then it would require six months service.

Last December when I had been with the board for more than a year war production had progressed so satisfactorily I felt my job was completed and I asked you to permit me to return to my business. You insisted upon my remaining.

Again in April I felt that the production programs generally were in such condition that I could be asked to be released, but you prevailed upon me to remain, indicating that you might consent to my leaving about the end of July. Last Saturday you again presented the same request. You asked that I remain until Germany capitulated or the several production programs now lagging had improved. I agreed and I left you with renewed inspiration.

Since Saturday when you issued your public statement regarding Mr. Nelson's trip to China and your request that I assume direction of the War Production Board, there has been renewed circulation in the press and over the radio of stories to the effect that because of my former position as a president of the General Electric Co. from which company I resigned when I joined the War Production Board, I am opposed to reconversion. These statements, like many similar statements that have appeared in recent months, were, in my opinion inspired by subordinate officials of the board connected with the personal staff of Mr. Nelson. Many of my immediate staff and I have presented to Mr. Nelson urgent requests that these individuals be forced to discontinue their unfair attacks and criticisms of members of the organization.

Mr. Nelson has disclaimed any responsibility for these attacks, asserting that they were made without his knowledge or approval. He has acknowledged many times to us that there has never been any issue in the War Production Board as between small and large business and that no problem was ever decided on that basis. He has also repeatedly acknowledged that the staff and I have been fully cooperative in reconversion.

"I need not tell you that I favor reconversion and have approved and set in operation many steps which have already affected reconversion to a large degree. I have done this without publicity because I believe publicity might interfere with war production. I have again and again expressed the view that I am opposed to any interference with war production as its necessities are presented to me by the commander in chief and by the joint chiefs of staff.

"It is apparent to me that instead of being discontinued these attacks upon me and upon members of my staff will be increased. I cannot answer them unless I employ publicity experts. I am unwilling to do that. A continuance of the attacks will impair the efficiency of key men and will more than offset any contribution that I can make to the improvement of the lagging programs. When the minds of men are diverted from their tasks to answering criticisms they believe to be unfair the war effort will suffer.

It is obvious that the unjust attacks upon me do me great personal injury. However, that is important only to me. The thing that is important is that the dissension within the organization does harm to the war production effort and, therefore, to the country. I am unwilling to be a party to such a controversy. I feel that anything I can do to end the controversy would be a service to my country.

I appreciate the great honor you bestowed on me when you gave me the responsibility of war production. You have supported and inspired me. I have given my best. For the reasons stated above, I have reached the definite conclusion that I can best serve the country and you by resigning. Therefore, I tender herewith my resignation to take effect today.

Mr. Roosevelt's Letter

The text of Mr. Roosevelt's letter of acceptance:

August 24, 1944.

Dear Charlie:

I have your letter tendering your resignation.

You are correct in stating that originally I requested you to come to Washington to solve some of the problems connected with the aircraft and shipping programs. The wonderful record we have made in aircraft production and shipping construction is evidence of the splendid contribution you made to the war effort.

It was because of your success in these two important programs that I would not accept your resignation last December and again in April persuaded you to remain. For the same reason I requested you last week to remain until the surrender of Germany.

Of course, I have been aware of some dissension within the War Production Board. I had hoped it would disappear. I have accepted your judgment in other things. I must accept it in this matter.

With reluctance I accept your resignation. In doing so I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the patriotic service you have rendered at great personal sacrifice to yourself.

At a critical time in our war effort your expert knowledge of mass production methods contributed to the success of vital programs that today are reflected in our successes on many battle fronts. Those who are charged with the direction of our armed forces have frequently expressed to me their appreciation of your intelligent cooperation. I am sure I speak for them and for the people generally when I say you have rendered outstanding service to your country.

Sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

U.S. BOMBER BASE IN ENGLAND, AUG 24-(AP)-WOMEN IN SOUTHERN FRANCE WERE DOUBLY PLEASED WHEN U.S. FLYING FORTRESSES DROPPED GUNS AND SUPPLIES TO THE MAQUIS--THEY USED THE SILK PARACHUTES TO MAKE UNDERDRAWERS.

FACTS BEHIND THREE FORTRESS MISSIONS TO THE GUERRILLAS, KEPT SECRET FOR MONTHS, WERE DISCLOSED TODAY. AN AMERICAN INFANTRY GENERAL AND AMERICAN MARINES WERE ON THE GROUND WITH THE MAQUIS.

"THE FRENCH WOMEN REALLY WENT FOR THOSE SILK PARACHUTES," SAID COL. KARL TRUESDALE, JR., WASHINGTON, D.C., WHOSE GROUP LED THE FIRST TWO MISSIONS. "THEY MADE DRAWERS OUT OF THEM. THEY HAD A CHOICE IN COLORS, TOO. RED, WHITE AND YELLOW PARACHUTES WERE USED."

BY A PRE-ARRANGED SIGNAL THE MAQUIS ON THE GROUND TOLD THE FORTRESS CREWS WHERE TO DROP ARMS AND AMMUNITION USED IN THE FIGHT AGAINST THE NAZIS. ON SEVERAL OCCASIONS SERGEANTS HUNG BY ONE HAND OVER OPEN BOMB BAY DOORS TO CUT THE SHROUDS OF PARACHUTES WHICH OPENED UP INSIDE THE PLANES.

ASSISTING IN THE DRAMATIC OPERATIONS WERE A FEW MAQUIS AND PARATROOPERS RIDING IN THE FORTRESSES.

Nazis Give Up After Bitter Battle With Allies in Streets—Parisians Wildly Welcome Troops Entering to Rescue Them.

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—The Free French radio announced that Gen. Charles de Gaulle entered Paris at 7 P. M. (1 P. M., Eastern war time) today.

BULLETIN

AUG 26 1944

The German commander of Paris has surrendered to Brig.-Gen. Jacques le Clerc and the commander of the French Forces of the Interior, the Paris radio reported today in a broadcast recorded by Columbia Broadcasting System.

AUG 26 1944

Under terms of the surrender, German commanders were ordered to cease firing immediately and hoist the white flag.

"The weapons will be collected and the men gathered without weapons in a determined place, until new orders are given," the terms stipulated. "The weapons will be surrendered intact."

Allies Seize Heart of City.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—French and American forces seized the heart of Paris today just as it was falling from the failing grasp of patriots.

The first French column to enter the city reached the Luxembourg, near the center of the city, at 10:20 A. M. and engaged in a battle with the Germans and collaborationist militia.

In the fog of early morning, American infantry—the first of this second American Expeditionary Force within a generation to enter Paris—battled to Notre Dame, whose ancient bells a few hours before had welcomed the first French patrols to the city.

On all sides the liberating French and Americans were greeted by hungry Parisians, mad with joy, who had fought alone against the German oppressors since they were called to arms last Saturday.

Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc, hero of the Fighting French in the North African campaign, was in the forefront of the battle, leading the tanks to the rescue of patriots who had been frantically calling for help as the Germans fought back throughout the night.

Those on the outside had heard the electric cry over the radio "To the barricades!"—historic call to arms of the French Revolution—which testified to the plight of the patriots.

Soon fighting raged throughout the city, along the Place de la Concorde, before the Chamber of Deputies, toward Les Invalides, as Americans and French drove the Germans from their barricades and buildings converted into fortresses.

When the last enemy rear guards blocking entrance to the city caved in under the shock of American and French attacks, the capital went wild with joy. Men, women and children lined the path of the Allied advance.

Storms Into Versailles.

A. P. correspondent Edward D. Ball reported earlier that an Allied column, driving due east toward the capital, had stormed into Versailles, ten miles from the center of the city.

The Germans were driven from many strategic parts of the city by the combined onslaught of the French military and the fury of citizens fighting for their liberties, and themselves fell back behind barricades for a last-ditch stand.

Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, Commander in Chief of the French Forces of the Interior, announced in a communique that all the main official buildings and most of the highways were now under the protection of Le Clerc's Second Armored Division.

The first patrols of the French division reached F. F. I. headquarters at the Hotel De Ville at 10 P. M. last night (4 P. M. yesterday, Eastern war time), an F. F. I. broadcast said.

Allied Flags Flying.

Then another liberating force rumbled into the city this morning, passing through the Chatillon gate at 7:15 A. M. and along streets draped by Allied flags, as the bells of Notre Dame Cathedral and other churches throughout the city rang out a welcome.

[The Germans admitted for the first time "street fighting in the center of Paris" and said that Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton had shifted his entire Third Army attack to the capital and had reached the outskirts. This wholly unconfirmed report might have been a fishing expedition, for the enemy was believed to have lost track of Patton's movements.]

Gen. de Gaulle's Chief of National Defense, Gen. Alphonse Pierre Juin, declared the whole area around the capital a battle zone early today and barred all traffic into the city.

Some main buildings had been converted into fortresses by the Germans, the FFI reported, and women joined men in manning firing posts, as they have done in revolutions in Paris before.

Situation Critical Last Night.

The FFI commander within the city said that for a time last night the situation of the Parisians was critical, their ammunition was low, and the Germans seemed to be gaining the upper hand, but the French regulars arrived dramatically just in time and went into action.

An FFI broadcast from Paris said officials met the first regular Army tanks in the courtyard of the Seine police prefecture, and the national anthem of "La Marseillaise" echoed through the streets.

The advance detachment went through the Boulevard St. Germain in the heart of the city, accompanied by about fifty German prisoners rounded up en route, and moved on to the Place de la Concorde, on the east bank of the Seine and attacked an enemy resistance center.

Meanwhile, Allied troops smashed German rearguards on the south during the night, and fought into the city by way of Ponte d'Orleans, the southern entrance to the capital, Associated Press Correspondent Harold V. Boyle said.

LeClerc Himself Enters.

Gen. LeClerc himself entered by this gate with small groups of Americans at 10:50 A. M. this morning.

Four Frenchmen who had escaped through the German lines said the Nazis had brought up artillery into the streets and were blasting at F. F. I. forces.

They drew a picture of streets filled with flying bullets as patriots clashed with squads of Germans. Some of the heaviest fighting was in the Latin quarter, on the left bank of the Seine, where the Liberal and Bohemian population long has gathered.

As the core of German resistance crumbled before the French armored attack, and Allied tanks rumbled into the city through the fog the population went mad with joy.

General Tells Populace, "We Will March Into Enemy Territory"

AUG 26 1944

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Speaking to cheering crowds in front of the prefecture in Paris, Gen. Charles de Gaulle tonight proclaimed the liberation of Paris and declared "we will not rest until we march into enemy territory as conquerors."

The President of the French Committee of National Liberation, back in the capital after four years of fighting from exile, told his listeners that "France will take her place among the great nations which will organize the peace."

His speech was broadcast by the Paris radio, and the shouting and singing of the crowd could be clearly heard, repeatedly interrupting the French leader.

French Rights Cited

"France has rights abroad," de Gaulle continued. "France is a great nation and she has rights which she will know how to make heard.

"She has the right to security.

"She has the right to insist that she never again be invaded by the enemy who so often has invaded her.

"She has the right to be in the first line among the great nations who are going to organize the peace and life of the world.

"She has the right to make herself heard in all four corners of the world.

"France is a great world power—she knows it and she will act so that others may also know it, because this is of supreme interest, that is the interest of humanity.

"Paris Which Stood Erect"

"Men and women, we are here in a Paris which stood erect and rose in order to free herself—a Paris oppressed, downtrodden and martyred, but still Paris.

"Paris is free now—freed by the hands of Frenchmen—the capital of fighting France, of France the great eternal.

"It is not enough that with the aid of our dear and splendid allies we should drive the enemy from our soil. After what happened to France, we will not rest or be satisfied until we enter—as is only right—upon the enemy's own soil as conquerors.

"We are going to fight on to the last day—to a day of total and complete victory."

PATTON'S FORCES WITHIN 130 MILES OF REICH BORDER DAY

Doughboys Approach Marne River, Battleground in First World War.

DRIVE ON ROCKET COAST

Pilots Report Nazis Pulling Out of Fortifications, Planes Harass Retreat.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Saturday, Aug. 26—(AP) American tanks in a 23-mile advance yesterday rolled into Troyes, 85 miles southeast of Paris and 163 miles from the German border at the Rhine, while far behind them Allied armies were stamping out the last sparks of German resistance south of the Seine.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's armor, now racing toward soil known to Americans who fought the First World War, was cutting across the last German communication lines to southern France and raising fresh perils to the Reich's frontier.

At Troyes the Doughboys stand 130 miles south of the German border at the Saar, 163 miles west of it where the Rhine winds northward near Strasbourg, and 138 miles west of Belfort gap, which the Germans are expected to defend strongly because it leads into the industrial Rhineland.

Near Last War's Battlefields

At Troyes they also are 37 miles south of the Marne, scene of many a bloody battle in the first war, and 50 miles west of Chaumont, Gen. John J. Pershing's headquarters in that war.

There were signs that even more momentous fighting was impending on the plains north of Paris, with the Germans possibly falling back to a battle line along the Somme river, another scene of heavy engagements in the First World War.

At least part of their forces were pulling out of the rocket coast fortifications, pilots reported, probably before the menace of the American bridgehead 30 miles northwest of Paris which the Germans have failed to wipe out despite the heaviest fighting.

Fighters and fighter-bombers in clearing weather struck hammer blows at these forces along and beyond the Seine, destroying or damaging 105 tanks and 158 other vehicles.

They shot down 41 enemy planes trying to protect these movements, probably got six more, damaged 21 others and lost 18 of their own number.

Allied ground forces, closing in on such forces as the Germans still have south of the Seine, cracked the final enemy line before the river and closed in from every direction.

Allied planes by night were attacking German trucks moving away from the rocket coast toward Amiens, indicating the 15th German army might be pulling out of its fortifications to meet the Allied threat along the Seine or heading east to man a line somewhere amid the battlefields of the First World War.

Quiet About Seine Crossings

Supreme Headquarters said little about its bridgeheads across the Seine, one at Mantes little more than 100 miles from the border of Belgium and Germany, others southeast of Paris.

The thrusts were opposed by harassed German forces which showed little sign of putting up more than the usual stiff rearguard action short of the Somme-Marne lines of the first war.

Meanwhile, onrushing Canadians on the west were trying to foil a clever German defense which has held open a gap of 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine, for its beaten Seventh army to cross.

Enemy positions in the loop were little more than 15 miles deep and 25 miles wide, but they had held the Americans back on the south around Elbeuf while the bulk of their forces apparently got across.

Canadians, in a lightning advance, joined up with the Americans on this sector between captured Brionne, 14 miles west of Elbeuf, and Le Neubourg, nine miles southeast of Brionne.

This lunge smashed the Risle river line—the last the enemy has manned west of the Seine five to 15 miles to the east along this sector.

Belgian forces driving up the coast captured Honfleur, five miles southwest of the great port of Le Havre across the Seine estuary. They also took Villerville and mopped up the last resistance in Trouville.

Allied advances below Honfleur kept pace. Beuzeville, 7 miles southeast of Honfleur, fell as did Liurey. Thirteen miles farther southeast the town of St. Georges du Vievre was seized and Canadian elements pushed two miles farther east to within two miles of the Risle river.

The first crossing of the Risle river—where the Germans were expected to make a determined rearguard stand—came when the Canadians carried Brionne and entered the hamlet of Nassandres, five miles south.

Canadians Take Bernay

Seventeen miles east of where the Germans were holding out yesterday around Lisieux, the Canadians captured Bernay. This gauges to some extent the swift pace of the Allied advance.

British units of the Canadian army cleared the last snipers from Lisieux itself and, dashing nine miles northwestward, seized Cormeilles, which is 13 miles in from the sea.

In all these sweeps there was little German resistance, bolstering a belief that the Germans have got most of their forces across the Seine unless they have sizeable forces lurking in the forests along the west bank.

(Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, the Nazi commentator, said it was assumed that the German command had extricated all but rearguards from the Seine pocket.)

Between bad weather and the excellent cover of the forests, it seemed likely the Allies had been cheated of a victory comparable with those they achieved with their traps in the Cherbourg peninsula and around Argentan. The forest of Brotonne alone is large enough to hide a small army.

But credit also was given the German command, which threw the bulk of its strength against the Americans who had driven to Elbeuf and prevented them from sealing off the Seine river crossings. The capture of Elbeuf was claimed yesterday, but the announcement was premature and it last was reported still in German hands.

AUG 26 1944

Bombers Attack Crossings

The crossings were kept under daylong aerial attack, and American artillery was in position to command some of the crossings near Rouen.

Every mile of advance now will cut down the coastal front from which some robot bombs have been launched against England, but SHAEF had no word on the number of launching sites already seized south of the Seine.

(The Germans said the Americans had thrust some tanks across the Seine in a new bridgehead near Elbeuf, but this was without Allied confirmation.)

A senior air officer predicted that the wholesale destruction of Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's armor in the retreat to the Seine never would be repeated in this war unless the Germans elect to stand this side of the German border, perhaps along the Somme and Marne rivers.

Nazis In Paris Surrender To NIGHT Gen. Leclerc

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The German commander of Paris has surrendered to Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc and the commander of the French Forces of the Interior, Paris radio reported today in a broadcast recorded by Columbia Broadcasting System.

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Paris appeared to be in Allied hands tonight with the French Second Armored Division operating in the city. Fighting, however, still was going on in and around the French capital.

General Eisenhower's supreme command declared that Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc's armor was operating in the capital and a broadcast from a reporter with American forces spoke of the liberation of Paris as "a fact."

As fighting continued, the French Forces of the Interior appealed by radio for Parisians to come to the barricades.

Yanks Reported In City

Broadcasts from the city said the joyous citizens already were celebrating their freedom. Other radio dispatches said American troops had entered the city in support of the French.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior, announced at 6.02 P. M. that Leclerc's tanks were operating in the very heart of Paris and that the Patriots were holding all the main official buildings and most of the highways.

Standoff Fight

Koenig said the Germans had barricaded themselves for a standoff fight in several places. He declared that first French armored patrols reached FFI headquarters in the Hotel de Ville (city hall) just off the Rue de Rivoli at 10 P. M. last night and that the bulk of the French armored division entered Paris this morning.

Both FFI and German broadcasts said heavy fighting was raging inside the city and that an American tank column had driven into the Paris outskirts from Versailles in the west and along the Paris-Etampes road leading south.

The Germans said the heaviest clashes with tanks and Patriots were near the Arc de Triomphe and the Palais Luxembourg.

General Leclerc entered the Orleans gate at 9.43 A. M., broadcasts from Paris said.

The bulk of the French general's Second Armored Division—30,000 strong—was massed in the Pont de Sevres sector in southwest Paris and already had begun to march in, said one Allied transmitter broadcasting from Paris.

De Gaulle Outside City

Gen. Charles de Gaulle was said to be at Bagneux, a southwestern suburb six miles from the center of Paris, waiting to be conducted into the capital where the carillons of Notre Dame and church bells throughout the city already heralded the entry of one spearhead.

In the courtyard of the Seine police prefecture "The Marseillaise" was sung and soon the anthem was taken up through the neighboring streets. Streets of the capital were draped with Allied flags.

Control Of Suburbs

Fighting was said to be dying down in the old tapestry manufactory, the Gobelins and the French were mostly in control of the suburbs—the Red Belt.

The FFI was ordered to hold its positions "at any price" until relief arrived in strength.

Patriots in the town hall of the 11th ward in the northeast called for reinforcements and ammunition replenishment during the night.

But "a great part of the capital has been liberated," a Colonel Rolle, identified as an FFI commander, broadcast.

The Patriots were in control of several bridges and all barricades were declared manned.

To Place De La Concorde

Leclerc went through the Boulevard St. Germain and moved on the Place de la Concorde.

American forces stationed at Bourg la Reine and Bagneux started moving into the city at 8.15 A. M.

Other tanks and vehicles of Leclerc's command entered by the Chatillon gate at 7.15 A. M. and traveled the Boulevard Brune.

The arrival of a detachment in the center of the city was reported by an American correspondent in a broadcast.

The correspondent, whose broadcast was heard here by Reuter, said he was speaking from the Hotel de Ville—the Paris city hall. His words came over the radio of the French Forces of the Interior in Paris.

Sounds Of Battle

"From the Hotel de Ville from where I am speaking to you I hear the explosion of shells and the spatter of machine guns of the regular army and the machine guns of the FFI," said the reporter, who was not identified immediately.

The broadcast said Leclerc's first patrols—several Sherman tanks, two infantry sections and a section of engineers—entered the capital just before midnight, passing through the Port d'Italie.

The Morocco radio said the "bulk of German armor is leaving Paris."

The German high command, in its first mention of Paris in one of its communiques, told of heavy fighting in the suburbs, which it said had been reached in strength by Allied armored and motorized forces.

Transocean said the Americans breached German lines at two places between Versailles and Longjumeau on the west and south.

Fight For Paris

Both enemy and Allied reports indicated the Nazis were making a fight for Paris. But there was no sign they were throwing any large number of fresh forces into the city.

A dispatch by Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball, dated at 11.15 A. M. yesterday at Rambouillet, 20 miles west of Paris, said resistance forces were reported in control of most of the Paris suburbs, but the Germans were firmly in control of a triangular area in the heart of the city.

This area covered the Champ-de-Mars, Place de la Concorde and the Champs-Elysees.

The Germans, even with small forces, retreating from street to street, could inflict considerable casualties on the attacking force with a minimum of effort, as well as cause extensive damage to the city.

It was from this type of warfare that General Eisenhower had hoped to spare Paris by wide flanking movements.

Forced To Change Plans

It was clear that the premature uprising in Paris and the subsequent call of the FFI inside the city for help had forced an improvisation in the military plans of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley of the American army group, causing him to divert forces to Paris.

At supreme headquarters, correspondents sought to establish the command chain in connection with General Koenig's premature announcement of the city's liberation. Koenig's FFI is a part of Eisenhower's command.

The controversy ended with a ranking supreme headquarters public relations officer declaring, "there are no official communiques other than those issued by supreme headquarters."

This seemed to leave the status of any communique issued by Koenig on operations in France in the "unofficial" class.

Patton's Troops Now Only 130 Miles From Reich Border—Brest Battle Flares As Warships And Planes Bombard Garrison

As the Paris radio reported last night that the German commander of Paris had surrendered, American tanks, in a 23-mile advance, rolled into Troyes, 85 miles southeast of the capital. This thrust placed Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's forces only 130 miles from the German border.

To the north, Allied forces cracked the final defense line before the Seine and closed in from every direction on enemy troops still left west of the river.

DAY

Americans Reach Troyes, 37 Miles From The Marne

London, Saturday, Aug. 26 (AP)—The News Chronicle said today an unofficial report had reached London placing the Americans at Reims, 85 miles northeast of Paris and 15 miles north of the Marne. The source of the report, unconfirmed at Allied headquarters, was not given.

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Saturday, Aug. 26 (AP)—American tanks in a 23-mile advance yesterday rolled into Troyes, 85 miles southeast of Paris and 163 miles from the German border at the Rhine, while far behind them Allied armies were stamping out the last sparks of German resistance south of the Seine.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's armor, now racing toward soil known to Americans who fought the first World War, was cutting across the last German communication lines to southern France.

At Troyes the Americans stand 130 miles south of the German border at the Saar, 163 miles west of it where the Rhine winds northward near Strasbourg, and 138 miles west of Belfort Gap, which the Germans are expected to defend strongly, because it leads into the industrial Rhineland.

37 Miles From Marne

At Troyes they also are 37 miles south of the Marne, scene of many bloody battles in the last war, and 50 miles west of Chaumont, Gen. John J. Pershing's former headquarters.

There were signs that heavier fighting was impending on the plains north of Paris, with the Germans possibly falling back to a battle line along the Somme river, another scene of heavy engagements in the first World War.

At least part of their forces were pulling out of the rocket coast fortifications, pilots reported, probably before the menace of the American bridgehead 30 miles northwest of Paris which the Germans have failed to wipe out despite the heaviest fighting.

Fighters and fighter-bombers in clearing weather struck at these forces along and beyond the Seine, destroying or damaging 105 tanks and 158 other vehicles.

41 Planes Shot Down

They shot down 41 enemy planes trying to protect these movements, probably got six more, damaged 21 others and lost 18 of their own number.

Allied ground forces, closing in on such forces as the Germans still have south of the Seine, cracked the final enemy line before the river and closed in from every direction.

The Americans seized Elbeuf, 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine, whose capture was erroneously announced Thursday.

They then branched out six miles to the west and linked up with Canadian forces pressing in from the west. French civilians said the Germans in the pocket were so short of transport they had commandeered everything with four wheels or four legs.

100 Miles From Belgium

Supreme headquarters disclosed that the Americans were on or across the Seine most of the 175 miles from Elbeuf to Troyes.

Both at Troyes and north of Mantes, the Americans were barely a hundred miles from the Belgian border and the German Alsace-Lorraine.

Allied planes by night were attacking German trucks moving away from the rocket coast toward Amiens, indicating the 15th German Army might be pulling out of its fortifications to meet the Allied threat along the Seine or heading east to man a line somewhere above the battlegrounds of the first World War.

AUG 26 1944

Brest Attack Launched

Far to the west, the battle to clear the port of Brest flared up, with Allied warships pouring in salvos on the garrison from offshore and artillery bombarding it from the east. More than 300 medium bombers joined the battle.

Meanwhile, the Canadians west of the Seine were trying to foil a German defense which has held open a gap of 25 miles from the mouth of the river for its Seventh Army to cross.

Enemy positions in the loop were little more than 15 miles deep and 25 miles wide, but they had held the Americans back on the south around Elbeuf while the bulk of their forces apparently got across.

The Candians, in a quick advance, joined up with the Americans on this sector between captured Brionne, 14 miles west of Elbeuf, and Le Neubourg, nine miles southeast of Brionne.

Risle Line Smashed

This lunge smashed the Risle river line—the last the enemy has manned west of the Seine.

Belgian forces driving up the coast captured Honfleur, five miles southeast of the port of Le Havre across the Seine estuary. They also took Villerville and mopped up the last resistance in Trouville.

Allied advances below Honfleur kept pace. Beuzeville, seven miles southeast of Honfleur, fell, as did Liurey. Thirteen miles farther southeast the town of St. Georges-du-Viervre was seized, and leading elements pushed two miles farther east to within two miles of the Risle river.

The first crossing of the Risle river — where the Germans had been expected to make a determined rear-guard stand—came when the Canadians carried Brionne and entered the hamlet of Nassandres, five miles south.

Canadians Take Bernay

Seventeen miles east of where the Germans were holding out yesterday around Lisieux, the Canadians captured Bernay.

British units of the Canadian army cleared the last snipers from Lisieux itself and, dashing nine miles northeastward, seized Cormeilles, which is 13 miles in from the sea.

In all these sweeps there was little German resistance, bolstering a belief that the Germans have got most of their forces across the Seine.

[Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German radio commentator, said it was assumed that the German command had extricated all but rear guards from the Seine pocket.]

American Thrust Opposed

The German command had thrown the bulk of its strength against the Americans who had driven to Elbeuf, and prevented them from sealing off the Seine river crossings.

The crossings were kept under daylong aerial attack and American artillery was in position to command some of the crossings near Rouen.

AUG 26 1944

U. S., French Troops Reported Battling Enemy in Streets.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 25 — (AP) The Paris radio announced late tonight that the French capital had been liberated and that the German commander had signed a document ordering his troops to cease fire immediately.

DAY

The announcement followed entry of American and French troops into the capital during the day. There was no immediate confirmation here.

Fight in Center of Paris

The latest word at Headquarters was that American and French troops had joined fighting French patriots on the Ile de La Cite in the heart of the Capital after bitter fighting with Germans and French collaborationist militiamen.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, president of the French Committee of National Liberation, said in a speech broadcast from Paris:

AUG 26 1944

"France will take her place among the great nations which will organize the peace. We will not rest until we march, as we must, into enemy territory as conquerors."

The commander of the Paris region for the French Forces of the Interior, Colonel Rouel, issued this proclamation to his forces, the radio said:

"F. F. I. of the Ile de France (the Paris region), you have unleashed a rising which has liberated Paris. You have improvised your tactics, animated by the strong desire to win, and you have won."

In another broadcast the Paris radio said that the German commander had signed the following document, presented by Brig. Gen. Jacques LeClerc, commander of the French Second Armored division and leader of the French force which entered the capital during the day:

"The German commander gives orders to the forces under his command to cease fire immediately. Arms are stacked.

"Personnel assembles without arms at places to be indicated, and will wait for orders there. Arms have to be delivered intact."

A broadcast by the French radio Diffusion de La Nation Francaise at Paris, reported by the Federal Communications commission, listed these terms of the surrender signed by the German commander:

"One—to give strongpoint commanders an order to cease fire immediately and to hoist a white flag. Arms will be collected.

"Two—Give military dispositions of mobile units and equipment depots within your command. Depots must be handed over intact with their records.

"Three—Give particulars of destruction to defense works and depots.

"Four—Send to General Le Clerc's staff headquarters the same number of German staff officers as there are strong points or garrisons.

"Five—Conditions of evacuation of Wehrmacht personnel to be determined by General Le Clerc's staff.

"Six—Once the agreements are signed and the orders transmitted the Wehrmacht forces that continue to fight will no longer come under the laws of war. Those, however, who continue to fight unaware of the surrender will be humanely treated."

Second Liberation Bulletin

It was the second time this week that the French Forces of the Interior had announced the liberation of the capital from four years of Nazi rule. On Wednesday they announced Paris had been freed from within, but later reported that the Germans had repudiated an armistice agreement and resumed fighting.

Tonight's announcement followed bitter fighting in the heart of the capital by French and American armored forces of the U. S. Third army which rolled in this morning.

Col. Raoul said in his proclamation as broadcast from Paris:

"The F.F.I. belonging to the liberated parts of the Ile de France is marching forward and organizing itself to fight with its comrades from other regions, from which a new French army will emerge which will definitely push the invader off French soil and into its own territory to smash the regime of oppression."

At the time of the Paris announcement that the capital had been liberated the German radio was saying that fighting still was raging in the center of the city and that no one group could claim control of Paris.

The first French column to enter the city reached the Luxembourg, near the center of the city at 10:20 a. m. and engaged in a battle with the Germans, and Collaborationist militia.

In the fog of early morning, American infantry — the first of this Second American expeditionary force within a generation to enter Paris — battled to Notre Dame, whose ancient bells a few hours before had welcomed the first French patrols to the city.

On all sides the liberating French and Americans were greeted by hungry Parisians, mad with joy, who had fought alone against the German oppressors since they were called to arms last Saturday.

Brig. Gen. LeClerc, hero of the Fighting French in the North African campaign, was in the forefront of the battle, leading the tanks to the rescue of patriots who had been frantically calling for help as the Germans fought back throughout the night.

Rally to Call to Arms

Those on the outside had heard the electric cry over the radio "to the barricades!" historic call to arms of the French revolution — which testified to the plight of the patriots.

Soon fighting raged throughout the city, along the Place de La Concorde, before the Chamber of Deputies, toward Les Invalides, as Americans and French drove the Germans from their barricades and buildings converted into fortresses.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead, who was with the first American troops to enter Paris, said the Germans were holding out on both sides of the Seine along the Champs Elysees, the Place de La Concorde, the Quai d'Orsay, the Tuileries, the Gardens of the Louvre, the Madelaine, the Chamber of Deputies, the Senate and the Hotel Crillon.

When the last enemy rear guards blocking entrance to the city caved in under the shock of American and French attacks, the capital went wild with joy.

Men, women and children lined the path of the Allied advance, and Whitehead said that when his column stopped he was all but smothered by Frenchmen swarming around his jeep.

Said one old man, saluting with tears in his eyes:

"God bless America. You have saved France."

That seemed to sum up the feeling of many in the vast throngs.

AP Correspondent Edward D. Ball reported earlier that an Allied column, driving due east toward the capital, had stormed into Versailles, ten miles from the center of the city.

Driven from Strongpoints

The Germans were driven from many strategic parts of the city by the combined onslaught of the French military and the fury of citizens fighting for their liberties, and themselves fell back behind barricades for a last-ditch stand.

Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander-in-chief of the French Forces of the Interior, announced in a communique that all the main official buildings and most of the highways were now under the protection of LeClerc's Second Armored division.

The first patrols of the French division reached FFI headquarters at the Hotel de Ville, that city hall which in the turbulent history of Paris has become a symbol of revolt against oppression, at 10 p.m. last night (4 p.m. Eastern War Time), an FFI broadcast said.

French Position Critical

The FFI commander within the city said that for a time last night the situation of the Parisians was critical, their ammunition was low, and the Germans seemed to be gaining the upper hand, but the French regulars arrived dramatically just in time and went into action.

The advance Allied detachment went through the Boulevard St. Germain in the heart of the city, accompanied by about fifty German prisoners rounded up en route, and moved on to the Place de la Concorde, on the east bank of the Seine and attacked an enemy resistance center.

General Leclerc himself entered by this gate with small groups of Americans at 10:50 A. M. this morning.

Four Frenchmen who had escaped through the German lines said the Germans had brought up artillery into the streets and were blasting at FFI forces.

They drew a picture of streets filled with flying bullets as patriots clashed with squads of Germans. Some of the heaviest fighting was in the Latin Quarter, on the left bank of the Seine, where the liberal and Bohemian population long had gathered.

Germans Start Wild Retreat From Channel Coast Front

Canadian and American Troops Link Lines South of Seine as Von Kluge's Men Fall Back.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge was reported swinging his beaten German armies back to the line of the Somme and the Marne today in a headlong retreat which would abandon much of the channel coast and the vicinity of Paris.

The battle in the pocket below the Seine, swiftly whittled to an area of only twenty miles long and fifteen miles deep, appeared likely to be ended in another twenty-four hours as Americans, British, Canadians and Allied troops pressed in from all sides. The Canadians, advancing along the coast, captured Honfleur, five miles across the Seine bay from Le Havre.

According to a dispatch from a correspondent at the front with the Canadian First Army, Canadians late today established contact with American forces on the Seine River at Louviers south of Rouen.

A western Canada armored car regiment made the twenty-mile dash from Beaumont on the Risle River and linked up with the Americans at La Haye Malherbe, a small town three miles west of Louviers.

To the north of this flying column, which met little if any opposition in a lightning thrust over straight macadam roads, British reconnaissance units spearheading an armored advance reached other Americans at St. Armand Des Hautes Terres, five miles southwest of Elbeuf on a bend in the Seine above Louviers.

The Germans said that they were engaged in a "detaching movement" below the Seine, and R. A. F. intelligence reported the pattern of the retreat indicated von Kluge's armor was in a mad dash across the Seine toward the Somme and the Marne.

"The wholesale slaughter of the cream of Von Kluge's armor may never be repeated again in this war," a senior R. A. F. officer said in France.

"We just can't hit armor the enemy hasn't got," he explained.

Dispatches said the sideroads in the Seine pocket were lined for miles with the litter of wrecked German tanks and military vehicles, enemy dead piled in the ditches and under trees or draped over burned and smoldering equipment.

Even if an attempted stand is made on the Somme-Marne line, the R. A. F. officer said, it was doubtful if the enemy has enough armor to make the stand he did in Normandy, and he spoke of the possibility the Germans would retire to the German border.

Allied Armor Rushing Up.

Dispatches from elsewhere on the front said great lines of Allied armor and infantry were swinging down toward the Seine, determined to keep the enemy on the run.

The march is on, one dispatch said, with Allied officers optimistically looking forward to the Rhine.

The swing of Von Kluge's line to the Somme and Marne would bring the battle to the hard-fought fields of the first world war, the scene of the German breakthrough to the channel at Abbeville in 1940 and the short-lived battle for France the same year when Generalissimo Maxime Weygand vainly sought to save Paris by a stand along the Somme.

Won't Surrender Rocket Coast.

It would not surrender the rocket coast around Pas de Calais, but front line dispatches said an end might be put to the buzzbomb terror for England soon.

There was a blackout of news on operations of Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army southeast of Paris. No official report had been made on the progress of this spearhead nearest Germany since yesterday's announcement of an advance of fifteen miles east of Sens.

The Germans said that the Americans were driving into the elbow of the Seine between Troyes and Romilly, and dispatches from that sector said a drive of miles could be made without seeing a single German soldier who was not a prisoner, and spoke of the complete disorganization of the German defense.

Almost forgotten, except by military men, was the siege of the great naval base of Brest in Brittany. But it was brought into the news with disclosure that a nine-wave attack by Ninth Air Force bombers sent 300 planes winging over its fortifications this afternoon.

As an inlet for supplies direct from America and Britain, Brest would be of greater importance to the Allies than Paris even.

"The enemy is leaving bits and pieces to try and delay us, but there is no major stand all the way back to the Seine," a field headquarters officer said last night after a sharp Canadian advance of twenty miles had driven the Germans into an area about twenty-five miles long and fifteen miles wide.

The Germans fell back before this enveloping attack, managing to get many of their troops beyond the Seine they left thousands of others and a great bulk of equipment behind. The Supreme Command still remained largely silent about the activities of Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's armored forces southeast of Paris. The only news was that Montereau, near Fontainebleau, and Montargis, further south, had been occupied, with an advance east of the latter city. There was no report on the Americans who two days ago penetrated fifteen miles beyond Sens, approaching to within 150 miles of the German frontier.

Southeast of Paris, the official communique said American armored elements advanced eastward after capturing Montargis. South and southeast of the capital Allied troops have crossed the Seine near Melun and in the Fountainebleau area.

The present speed of advance indicated that the lower Seine pocket, which extends from Elbeuf to Bernay then roughly to the coast at a point four miles from Honfleur, may be wiped out in another twenty-four hours.

The Germans shoved the bulk of their forces remaining in the pocket against the Americans at Elbeuf and heavy fighting still was in progress on both sides of the town which the Americans reached yesterday but which the enemy still held.

Clearing weather today indicated that what Germans remain in the pocket are going to be heavily battered from the air.

Supreme Headquarters said that the Allied bridgehead across the Seine at Mantes near Paris had been firmly held despite a heavy German counterattack.

On the fringes of the Seine estuary pocket the most significant advances were scored yesterday by Canadian forces which captured Bernay, then swept on across the Risle River and entered Nassandres about seven miles due south of Brionne.

Only minor opposition was encountered in a twelve-mile northeasterly drive by British troops from a point four miles due east of Lisieux to a spot just south of Saint Georges du Vieuvre, four miles from the Risle.

A field dispatch by Associated Press War Correspondent John F. Chester said that these advances "strengthened the general belief that unless German troops were hiding in the heavily wooded areas along the Seine, the final bag when the pocket is squashed flat will be comparatively small."

On the Allied coastal flank, some forces were driving on Honfleur from less than four miles away. Honfleur lies five miles across the Seine estuary from the big port of Le Havre.

Farther inland British forces cut the road just below Beuzeville and to the south Cormeille was captured.

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—American and British light naval forces intercepting Nazi ships trying to escape from Le Havre at the Seine's mouth today blew up an escort vessel, an armed trawler and E-boat, and damaged at least five other enemy warships in a series of running battles.

With the Canadian First Army, France, Aug. 25 (AP)—Canadians late today established contact with American forces on the Seine river at Louviers south of Rouen.

First Eye witness Account of Fighting in Paris

NIGHT

[The following graphic account of the Allied entry into Paris by a veteran Associated Press correspondent is the first eyewitness dispatch to come out of the embattled capital of France. It was passed by field censorship and transmitted by regular press channels.]

AUG 26 1944

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Paris, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Street fighting raged through the heart of Paris today as American and French columns drove into the city from the south amid a tumultuous welcome from hundreds of thousands of Parisians.

The first French column to enter the city reached Luxemburg at 10:20 A. M. The Germans, the collaborationist militia and the French Gestapo organization opened fire with machine guns, rifles and pistols and the battle was on.

An American infantry column drove to Notre Dame at 11 A. M. in a spectacular ground attack to close in on strongholds still defended by the embattled Germans and the Vichy French militia.

[This dispatch was filed at 12:28 P. M., 6:28 A. M., Eastern wartime.]

The columns fought toward the center of the city where 5,000 French Forces of the Interior and city police have held out for the past week.

Machine guns and rifles cracked on all sides as the column I was with drove to within a block of the Luxembourg.

Joyous, happy throngs who greeted the entrance of the tanks and infantry with a thundering welcome fled to the safety of buildings and within a few mintues the streets that had been choked with humanity, laughing and crying over the liberation, were bare battlegrounds.

Where Nazis Hold Out.

AUG 26 1944

As I write this story the Germans are still holding out in the area on both sides of the Seine halfway along the Champs-Elysees, Place de la Concorde, Quai d'Orsay, Tuileries, Gardens of the Louvre, the Madelaine, the Chamber of Deputies, the Senate and the Hotel Crillon.

French patriots have a grip on the Ile de la Cite, the Palais de Justice, the Prefecture of Police, the Prefecture of the Seine, most of the Mairies and the factory district.

But Frenchmen are fighting Frenchmen as well as Germans in liberating a city wild with happiness over the freedom which they waited for four years.

There was so much confusion and excitement over the entrance into the city that it is difficult to give a coherent account of the events that moved so swiftly, once the French armored column began rolling through the heavy morning fog that made vehicles look like prehistoric monsters appearing out of the swamps of creation.

But when the last enemy resistance crumbled at the gate to Paris then this heart of France went mad—wildly, violently mad with happiness.

All the emotions suppressed by four years of German domination surged through the people. The streets of the city as we entered were like a combined mardi gras, Fourth of July celebration, American Legion convention and New Year's Eve in Times Square all packed into one.

Our column began to roll at 7 A. M. from Longjumeau, six miles south of Paris. A French captain stopped all correspondents one mile from town and insisted he had orders that no one without a written permit could enter the city. He told three British correspondents they would be shot if they drove by without a pass.

An American colonel heard the story and said the captain was acting without proper authority. I drove to the blockade and suddenly my jeep lurched forward into the column (of troops). Unfortunately it was too late to turn back, so I kept going.

Two miles farther the column halted. Forward elements had run into a German strongpoint and mines on the road.

French Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc and his staff went into conference. Tanks wheeled and started to outflank the position but after a while they returned because they ran into the route of an American infantry advance.

Strongpoint Knocked Out.

Then the column began to roll again. The strongpoint had been knocked out ahead of us. And at 9:57 A. M. my jeep rolled through the gates into Paris.

Never do I expect to see such scenes as I saw on the streets of Paris. There was only a narrow lane through which the armor could roll. Men and women cried with joy. They grabbed the arms and hands of soldiers and cheered until their voices were hoarse.

When the column stopped I was smothered, but pleasantly, with soft arms and lips giving not one kiss but the usual French double one. They hugged me and my jeep driver and pined French Tricolors on us, and left us exhausted, with our bosoms covered with emblems and ribbons.

Cries 'God Bless America.'

One old man came up, saluted, and said with tears in his eyes: "God bless America. You have saved France."

Men and women, old and young, and children stormed the jeep everytime the column stopped and they were wild with emotion.

AUG 26 1944

Crowds were banked from the center of the streets to the sidewalks in a colorful, cheering throng which stretched for miles. There seemed to be no end and apparently every one in Paris except the Germans and collaborationists was standing there to cheer, shout, cry, and leave themselves exhausted with happiness.

Our column moved to a point one block from the Luxembourg. Then from all sides burst machine-gun fire. From housetops and windows guns rattled. Machine guns of tanks opened up in reply. We leaped from the jeep and took cover behind a tank.

Jerry Beatson of Rockford, Ill., was beside me and leveled his carbine at the top of the building. The gun cracked in my ear.

"There's one ——— up there," he cried, and kept firing at the rooftop.

Bullets rattled on the streets and glanced off with ugly whines.

The crowds, which a few minutes before lined the streets, melted as if a blast from a furnace had hit a snowbank. Then the streets were terribly lonely and barren except for armor with guns clattering.

AUG 26 1944

My driver and I leaped into a jeep and raced back down the street, but another burst of machine-gun fire sent us diving for the curb. We felt bare and exposed there in the street.

F. F. I. resistance leaders crouched and ran from door to door, pointing to the rooftops and windows.

Up there, shooting down on us were the milice (Vichy collaborators) who were helping the Germans defend the city. One Frenchman said there were many German snipers in civilian clothes.

Red Cross aid men dressed in white ran out of a doorway with a stretcher. A nurse in starched white followed them. They picked up a wounded man and laid him on a stretcher while waving a Red Cross flag.

An F. F. I. member ran up to me and cried in English: "Give us arms and ammunition. We want guns and bullets. That's all we ask. We'll clean out these ——.

"We haven't enough ammunition and most of us have only pistols."

Ahead of us patriots crouched along the buildings and answered the enemy fire. Lying there, I felt lonely and lost in the city which all of us had dreamed of entering as a joyous occasion.

The drive on Paris began at 7 A. M. yesterday under sullen, drizzling skies. The French and American columns had moved into position on Wednesday afternoon facing the enemy's position west of Paris.

The Germans did not have much in front of us—but enough to make the armor move cautiously, and occasionally artillery would pound gun positions along the way.

Our column avoided the main road to Versailles and turned into a secondary road leading to the Grand National Highway running due south of the city to Orleans. Other columns of armor, assault guns, half-tracks and supply trains fanned out on other roads. The historic move on Paris was under way.

Move Forward in Lurches.

The column moved in lurches, going forward for short distances, then stopping, either for reconnaissance or for guns to engage strongpoints. Rain glistened on the dark green trees and hedges and gave the countryside a freshly washed appearance.

In small towns people crowded along the streets, despite the rain, to wave Tricolors and to cheer each vehicle that passed. Never have I seen more joyous faces than those along the road to Paris. It was a triumphal, exciting and colorful march.

Pretty girls stood on the roadside and tossed flowers at the vehicles. As the column would stop, they would deck the tanks and armored trucks with flowers until they seemed to be camouflaged as mobile flower pots. Farmers tossed fresh tomatoes and apples to the troops.

Sergt. Bob Fraley of Des Moines, Iowa; Private Ray Rooney of Glen Ellyn, Ill., and Pvt. Harry Grant of Hamburg, Ark., sat in a jeep watching this outburst of emotion at the edge of the war.

"This is the first real holiday I've had in weeks," Farley said. "We've been doing reconnaissance up where the fighting really was tough. But this is like a circus."

Suddenly there was an uproar in the streets. Down the road came the French in lightweight summer uniforms which I last saw in the desert and Sicily. Most of them were middle-aged or older, but they looked well fed and in excellent physical condition.

A ripple of excitement ran through the crowds.

The Enemy's Last Stand.

The Maquis marched down the street with four women whose heads were bald as babies'. The crowd jeered and heaped scorn on these women because they had kept company with German soldiers. One of the women glared defiantly at the crowds.

"That woman," some one said, "had a husband in Germany as a prisoner. He escaped and returned to her, but she betrayed hi mto the Germans and he was shot."

The other women hung their heads and stumbled along with their faces ashen and ugly from fear and embarrassment.

Late in the day the Germans shelled the town and sent the crowds scurrying to cover. Two shells burst squarely in the main street, but the casualties fortunately were light among the civilians.

All night the guns duelled, but this was the enemy's last stand before Paris.

Paris Laughs, Cheers And Cries As Allies Enter

The following account of the Allied forces' entry into Paris by Don Whitehead, veteran Associated Press correspondent, is the first eyewitness dispatch to come out of the embattled capital of France. It was passed by field censorship and transmitted by regular press channels.

By DON WHITEHEAD

Paris, Aug. 25 (AP)—American and French columns fought their way into the heart of Paris today and received a thundering welcome from her citizens as they opened battle with Germans and Vichy militiamen still intrenched in important strongholds.

The Allied troops entered the city from the south and almost immediately—as they reached the beautiful Luxembourg gardens—the Germans and their collaborationist militiamen opened fire with machine guns, rifles and pistols.

A column of American troops streaked for the Ile de la Cite in the heart of the capital to the relief of French patriot forces and police who had been fighting the Germans for nearly a week.

Drove To Notre Dame

On reaching this island in the Seine, the American infantrymen drove to the Cathedral of Notre Dame, reaching there at 11 A. M. and closing in with a mighty ground attack against enemy positions.

Joyous, happy throngs which greeted the entrance of the tanks and infantry with a thundering welcome fled to the safety of buildings. Within a few minutes the streets that had been choked with humanity, laughing and crying over the liberation, were bare battlegrounds.

As I write this story the Germans are still holding out in the area on both sides of the Seine halfway along the Champs-Elysees, Place de la Concorde, Quai d'Orsay, Tuileries, Gardens of the Louvre, the Madelaine, the Chamber of Deputies, the Senate and the Hotel Crillon.

French Patriots have a grip on the Ile de la Cite, the Palais de Justice, the prefecture of police, the prefecture of the Seine, most of the Mairies and the factory district.

But Frenchmen are fighting Frenchmen as well as Germans in liberating a city wild with happiness over the freedom which they waited for four years.

Rolling Through Fog

There was so much confusion and excitement over the entrance into the city that it is difficult to give a coherent account of the events that moved so swiftly, once the French armored column began rolling through the heavy morning fog that made vehicles look like prehistoric monsters appearing out of the swamps of creation.

But when the last enemy resistance crumbled at the gate to Paris then this heart of France went mad—wildly, violently mad with happiness.

Emotions Stirred

All the emotions suppressed by four years of German domination surged through the people. The streets of the city as we entered were like a combined Mardi Gras, Fourth of July celebration, American Legion convention and New Year's Eve in Times Square all packed into one.

Our column began to roll at 7 A. M. from Longjumeau, six miles south of Paris. A French captain stopped all correspondents one mile from town and insisted he had orders that no one without a written permit could enter the city. He told three British correspondents they would be shot if they drove by without a pass.

An American colonel heard the story and said the captain was acting without proper authority. I drove to the blockade and suddenly my jeep lurched forward into the column (of troops). Unfortunately it was too late to turn back, so I kept going.

Two miles farther the column halted. Forward elements had run into a German stronghold and mines on the road.

French Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc and his staff went into conference. Tanks wheeled and started to outflank the position but after a while they returned because they ran into the route of an American infantry advance.

Then the column began to roll again. The strongpoint had been knocked out ahead of us. And at 9.57 A. M. my jeep rolled through the gates into Paris.

Smothered With Kisses

Never do I expect to see such scenes as I saw on the streets of Paris. There was only a narrow lane through which the armor could roll. Men and women cried with joy. They grabbed the arms and hands of soldiers and cheered until their voices were hoarse.

When the column stopped I was smothered, but pleasantly, with soft arms and lips giving not one kiss but the usual French double one. They hugged me and my jeep driver and pinned French Tricolors on us, and left us exhausted, with our bosoms covered with emblems and ribbons.

One old man came up, saluted, and said with tears in his eyes:

"God bless America. You have saved France."

Men and women, old and young, and children stormed the jeep every time the column stopped and they were wild with emotion.

Crowds were banked from the center of the streets to the sidewalks in a colorful, cheering throng which stretched for miles. There seemed to be no end, and apparently everyone in Paris, except the Germans and collaborationists, standing there to cheer, shout, and leave themselves exhausted with happiness.

Guns Opened Up

Our column moved to a point one block from the Luxembourg. Then from all sides burst machine-gun fire. From housetops and windows guns rattled. Machine guns of tanks opened up in reply. We leaped from the jeep and took cover behind a tank.

Jerry Beatson, of Rockford, Ill., was beside me and leveled his carbine at the top of the building. The gun cracked in my ear.

"There's one sniper up there," he cried, and kept firing at the rooftop.

Crowds Melted

Bullets rattled on the street and glanced off with ugly whines.

The crowds, which a few minutes before lined the streets, melted as if a blast from a furnace had hit a snowbank. Then the streets were terribly lonely and barren except for armor with guns clattering.

My driver and I leaped into a jeep and raced back down the street, but another burst of machine-gun fire sent us diving for the curb.

We felt bare and exposed there in the street.

F. F. I. resistance leaders crouched and ran from door to door, pointing to the rooftops and windows.

Up there, shooting down on us were the milice (Vichy collaborators), who were helping the Germans defend the city. One Frenchman said there were many German snipers in civilian clothes.

Aid From Red Cross

Red Cross aid men dressed in white ran out of a doorway with a stretcher. A nurse in starched white followed them. They picked up a wounded man and laid him on a stretcher while waving a Red Cross flag.

An F. F. I. member ran up to me and cried in English:

"Give us arms and ammunition. We want guns and bullets. That's all we ask.

"We haven't enough ammunition and most of us have only pistols."

Ahead of us patriots crouched along the buildings and answered the enemy fire. Lying there, I felt lonely and lost in the city which all of us had dreamed of entering as a joyous occasion.

Other columns of armor, assault guns, halftracks and supply trains fanned out on other roads.

The historic move on Paris was under way.

GIs Watch Action

Pretty girls stood on the roadside and tossed flowers at the vehicles. As the column would stop they would deck the tanks and armored trucks with flowers until they seemed to be camouflaged as moble flower pots. Farmers tossed fresh tomatoes and apples to the troops.

At Limors, Sergt. Adrian P. Minsince, of Evanston, Ill., turned our jeep toward Versailles. The traffic began to grow less and less. Then we drove down lonely, deserted stretches of road. There was only the sound of tires on the wet pavement and the swish of rain on the roof.

In the village of Gometz le Chatel we stopped for information. The townspeople crowded around to shake hands. They said there were Germans three kilometers down the road. We drove slowly on to Bures-sur-Yvette where a Frenchman ran into the road and waved us to a halt.

Has Note In English

He had a note written in English which said: "Germans are approaching from the hill and are scattered through the woods. The resistance force has only two guns and we need help immediately to save the town." There was no signature.

We turned back and gave the message to Lieut. Thomas W. Parr, of Dorchester, Mass., whose reconnaissance platoon was moving down the road.

"Our mission is to go to Paris," he grinned.

From Limors the main column thrust to St. Germaine and then turned north for Paris. By this time the sun had broken through the clouds and we raced up the broad Grand National Highway at 50 miles an hour on some stretches. People were wildly excited and almost lined the route all the way. Arms grew tired returning salutes and waves of the people.

Holiday For Rejoicing

To the French people this symbolized the French army returning to France and their day of freedom. This was a holiday for rejoicing. And with the column moved a weird assortment of private cars, trucks, motor cycles and bicycles carrying Maquis with tommy guns and rifles slung across their shoulders—a civilian army going to battle alongside regulars.

At times the columns were slowed by crowds pushing into the roads and streets to try to grab the hands of troops leaning from the vehicles. At one place near a school boys and girls chanted, "Vive de Gaulle, Vive de Gaulle."

We rolled through tumultuous cheers at Long Jumeau to the top of the ridge above the city. And there in the distance was the Eiffel Tower. This was the greatest thrill of the entire drive—but a sign on the roadside said we were six miles from the heart of Paris.

Germans Hold Strong Point

Two miles ahead Germans held stubbornly to their strong point, and guns in the fields were blasting to knock out the enemy position.

While guns roared and enemy shells fell, near by a crowd in a cafe beside the road laughed and chatted as though Paris had already fallen. Jeeps raced up and down the road and tanks lumbered forward. Two hundred yards behind us townspeople of Longjumeau were holding open house for the troops. Everybody in the town was jammed into the main street.

Sergt. Bob Fraley, of Des Moines, Iowa; Private Ray Rooney, of Glen Ellyn, Ill., and Private Harry Grant, of Hamburg, Ark., sat in a jeep watching the outburst of emotion at the edge of the war.

Like A Circus

"This is the first real holiday I've had in weeks," Fraley said. "We've been doing reconnaissance up where the fighting really was tough. But this is like a circus."

Suddenly there was an uproar in the streets. Down the road came the French in lightweight summer uniforms which I last saw in the desert and Sicily. Most of them were middle-aged or older but they looked well fed and in excellent physical condition.

Embassy Reached By Phone

DAY

By DON WHITEHEAD

Paris, Aug. 25 (AP)—Yesterday, even before I entered Paris, I learned by a telephone call that Mme. Blanchard, who has been housekeeper for the American Embassy in Paris for 16 years, was excitedly awaiting the arrival of the Americans so she could raise the Stars and Stripes over the embassy again.

At the town of Longjumeau, Sergt. Adrian Pinsince, Evanston, Ill., heard a garage man say he had just talked to Paris.

We decided to call the embassy. We even discussed the possibility of calling the commander of the German troops inside the city and suggesting he might as well toss in the towel.

Call Goes Through

At the Longjumeau telephone exchange Mme. Brun said, "Certainly, we can call Paris for you."

She put through a call for Anjour 7460 and Adrian, who speaks French, asked for Mme. Blanchard, whose name we learned from a young woman formerly employed at the embassy.

"Who is calling?" she asked in English.

I identified myself and Madame exclaimed, "Mon Dieu, where are you?" I explained I was calling from outside Paris, not figuring this was a military secret since the Germans were shelling near by and knew the location of our column.

I asked Madame how things were at the embassy which has been in charge of the Swiss Government since Ambassador William C. Bullitt closed it in June, 1941.

"Everything is going all right now," she said, "but there was an attack against the embassy by German soldiers four days ago. They wounded our guard outside the door and forced their way in after firing on the building. They walked in and went all over the place. Everything is covered with broken glass."

Normally Mme. Blanchard lives in her own home in Paris but when the fighting became so bad in the streets she decided to stay and bring her mother to live with her until the Allies entered the city.

Tells Of Shooting

"There is shooting everywhere," she said. "We hear reports that the Americans are already in the city. I was told not to go to the gate or I might get in trouble. So we stay inside. We have enough food to last for several days.

"Everything in the embassy is shipshape. You know it is my job to see that it stays that way. Mon Dieu, I hope the Americans move in tomorrow. I am carrying an American flag with me wherever I go. We aren't allowed to fly the flag now but I hope the Americans will let me help them hoist the flag the first time it is flown."

day. Today I can supply some of the answers which I was prevented from releasing Wednesday evening.

I was with Gen. Omar Bradley for the final meeting with the group that came out of Paris under cover of a white flag to announce the surrender of the city. This group consisted of a Swedish diplomat, acting as a neutral protecting authority for the German units; a Belgian counsel; two members of the F. F. I from Paris and a British officer. They had come through to our lines in Gen. Patton's area, reported to him and were sent back to Gen. Bradley for a decision.

None of Stories Agreed.

None of their stories agreed. In fact, the one British officer had to act as moderator of the meeting to keep their reports to strict fact.

The Swedish diplomat was brief and fairly factual. He told Gen. Bradley that the German High Command felt itself unable to conserve Paris; and would henceforth not take the responsibility of policing it. Then he itemized the German properties reportedly in danger. This was a bold-faced German effort to produce a clean record to the world while actually it was used as a carte blanc to carry out reprisals against the Partisans wherever and whenever the opportunity presented itself.

One Frenchman said that the Paris Maquis controlled all the city. The other claimed the underground forces could only control those parts of the city that the Germans would not use for their withdrawal. The Belgian reported on the civil distress within Paris and the British officer gave the real sound warning that German defense positions in Paris were still intact, and a clear approach to the city would be costly.

Didn't Know Who to Believe.

Gen. Bradley himself told me that beyond the British officer he didn't know who to believe but that he was in a position to spare the Second French Armored Division and would order it to Paris. It was estimated that the Second French Armored Division could not be within the city within forty-eight hours—and that is exactly what it took.

Later Wednesday afternoon I flew to Paris in a reconnaissance aircraft. Other planes ahead of us over the city were dodging balloons and heavy ack ack barrages, indicating then that the French control of the city was not complete.

Paris certainly helped liberate itself but it remained for the gallant French armored forces together with large numbers of attached American units to drive the hated enemy from the city of glamour and strife.

Seine bridge.

I crossed the bridge under sniper fire. Along the right of the bridge lay twelve Germans just killed by Frenh fire.

When we hit the edge of Paris yesterday, the Germans began to fire from bushes. Ammunition dumps began to blow up. But the people paid little heed, not even bothering to dodge shell fragments. Their attitude seemed to be: "This is our hour of deliverance and we intend to see it if we have to die to do it."

Behind the reconnaissance column with which we approached Paris were many Americans. Lieut. Peter Demetros of Atlanta, Ga., said that his outfit had met with tough fighting.

An American Artillery Cub Airfield, Near Paris, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Two Oklahoma "sooners" flew the first Grasshopper plane over the Paris area—and one mistook the Eiffel Tower for an oil well.

"We had just set up in the field and took a little flight around because we had all been dying for days to get a glimpse of Paris," said Major Jerome to Byrd of Oklahoma City. "When we saw Paris, it was the most beautiful thing I have ever seen in my life—like a dream city shining in the sun. The first thing we saw was the Eiffel Tower and some great white building which I didn't know.

"'There's Paris and there's the Eiffel Tower over there,' I yelled to my observer, Lieut. H. H. Montgomery of Tulsa. He grinned and yelled back: 'I thought it was an oil derrick at first.'

"I didn't see much signs of fire or smoke. Between the city and Versailles you could see long columns of our tanks and trucks moving up, but there was no movement on the roads on the enemy side. We made two trips and didn't see a single hostile aircraft.

"I will never forget my first sight of Paris—it was different from any city I have ever seen. From the air it was gleaming white like pictures of the Taj Mahal in India. I don't know how badly it may look from the ground, but I will always remember the way it looked to us with those tall white spires—I suppose they were churches shining in the sun against the background of rain clouds.

"It looked serene and peaceful until you saw the puffs from mortar bursts and flashes from small arms fire around the edge of the city."

He'd Treat Everybody.

"I would swap my Cub plane right now if I could get leave and go into town," said Lieut. E. A. Wilson of Harper, Kan. "If the French people in Paris are any nicer than those we met on the way, they are really tops."

"What I would like to do is land right in the middle of that big place withth e four lane roads in it, inside town—what do you call it?" asked Lieut. A. F. Baker of Wichita.

"It's the Champs Elysees, Lieutenant," answered Pfc. Ilya Balagurchik of 1646 Stadium avenue, the Bronx, who said he had been there in peacetime, "and I'd give my right leg to fly over it now."

"That's the place," said Lieut. Baker. "Id like to plop down right in the middle of it and walk over to the nearest bar and ask for a bottle of champagne—I'd treat everybody in the place."

American in Paris Describes Unbelievably Savage Battles

NIGHT

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE.

At the West Gate of Paris, Aug. 25 (9:30 A. M.) (A. P.).—Fires were going up today from Versailles, where the 1919 peace was signed, as a guerrilla battle of almost unbelievable savagery burst out in the battle for Paris.

The pent-up feelings of the French, who for four years had undergone imprisonment at the hands of the Germans, and the desperation induced by the specter of imminent defeat on the side of the Germans combined to make it a battle of ferocity.

I reached the Seine last night with an advanced column of Gen. Leclerc's armored division after a hard and bitter running fight with rearguard German defenders who fought like Indians from some eighteenth century forest but with tanks, 88-mm. guns and all sorts of light weapons. The force had to fight all the way from Chateaufort on up to the edge of Versailles. It by-passed Versailles, and as it hit the edge of Paris, French tanks were firing at snipers and German dead lay along the approaches to the a pitched battle began in the surrounding streets between the Germans and French patriots.

The fighting started, these informants said, as Patriots in a police sub-station in the Palais basement opened fire on the Germans. Flames quickly spread through wood shavings covering the circus arena and in the wild dash for the exits many in the audience were trapped.

L'Hotel de Ville—the City Hall—was reported damaged in a clash on Tuesday when the Patriots barricaded themselves in the building, where many Germans were held prisoner.

One traveler said that the streets outside were littered with both French and German dead. L'Hotel de Ville, famous from Revolutionary days, was said to have been hit by shells from tanks brought up by the enemy.

NIGHT

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—The production of finished oil products for Germany, both gasoline and lubricants, was reduced by an estimated 49 per cent by Allied air bombardments during May, June and July, it was announced today.

A joint statement of the American and British Air Forces declared that the attacks were made by day and night from bases in Great Britain, Italy and Russia on oil installations both in Germany and in her satellite countries.

"The enemy is finding the resulting situation extremely troublesome, as is indicated by the overriding priority he has given to the repair and rebuilding of synthetic and natural oil plants seriously damaged in May, June and July," the statement continued.

Townspeople stood four deep on both sides of Grenoble's main street throughout the day to cheer the Americans as they rolled by in tanks, trucks and jeeps. The troops were pelted with flowers and showered with gifts of fruit.

Sing "Marseillaise"

It was in this region that French resistance forces always have been reported stfongest and throughout the whole German occupation they have held mountain areas despite Nazi efforts to annihilate them.

Today these Maquis came into their own as they marched out of the mountains into Grenoble, guns slung jauntily over their shoulders and singing the "Marseillaise." They herded 50 German prisoners along with them.

2,000 Persons Jailed

The Patriots signalized the liberation of Grenoble by jailing 2,000 persons as collaborationists, but it was expected that many of them would be released after an investigation.

Drive to 20 Miles From Italy, Spear Along Rhone — Foe Hints at Retreat to Lyon

By The Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 25—American troops lunging suddenly eastward from their Riviera beachhead, in southern France, have captured the famous resort towns of Cannes and Antibes and tonight were fighting forward less than twenty miles from the Italian frontier.

Nice, within short artillery range of the advancing Americans, was expected to fall at any hour.

Other swift Allied columns drove methodically toward the heart of France and a junction with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's armies in the north. Tonight's communiqué said forces probing into the delta of the Rhône valley were close to Arles and Tarascon, river towns a few miles apart.

[A German communiqué indicated that a general retreat was in progress up the Rhône Valley toward Lyon, which had been reported in the hands of French patriot forces. Italy-based Mitchells bombed bridges near Lyon on Friday. DNB, German news agency, said the Germans were withdrawing from southwestern France, leaving the Bay of Biscay, with its great harbor city of Bordeaux, and the Pyrenees along the Spanish frontier. Bordeaux had been reported on Thursday as having been taken by French and United States forces.

[The Rome newspaper Tempo said American forces had moved to within fifteen miles of Lyon, where they were engaged in a violent battle, The United Press reported. It asserted that Chambery, twenty-eight miles northeast of Grenoble and on the last German-held railroad from France to Italy, had fallen, along with St. Etienne, thirty-two miles southwest of Lyon.]

Toulon Belt Constricts

Bitter fighting still raged in the naval base of Toulon, where French troops drew their ring of steel tighter about a stubbornly resisting garrison. A heavy Allied attack had been launched to wipe out the last four pockets of Germans in Marseille. Two German generals and 5,000 prisoners had been captured in the Marseille area in the last seventy-two hours. In eleven days of unbroken Allied advances about 20,000 Germans have been taken prisoner.

American units driving westward from Salon, northwest of Marseille, were reported within less than eight miles of Arles on the Rhône. Another column pounding along the Durance Valley was approaching Avignon, on the Rhône north of Arles.

Still officially unconfirmed was the report from Switzerland that advanced American units had reached the Swiss border near Geneva. However, fast armored columns often work far in advance of the main body of Allied troops and it was possible that mechanized cavalry and combat engineers were at the frontier.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Geneva said an American patrol that on Thursday reached St. Julien on the border had proceeded westward to Bellegarde, thirteen miles from St. Julien and seven miles from the frontier.]

An official announcement said that the American force that had captured the industrial city of Grenoble, seventy miles from the Swiss border, was such a flying column operating in advance of the main body of troops. It said the entire Grenoble area since had been "firmly occupied" with the assistance of French patriots.

French troops assaulting Toulon occupied the land arsenal within the city, but a headquarters spokesman said the Germans still were resisting stiffly around the naval arsenal in the harbor and on the two peninsulas that partly landlock the harbor.

Street Fighting in Ports

Hand-to-hand fighting went on in the streets as fanatical Nazis refused to surrender. Similar street fighting raged in parts of Marseille, but on a reduced scale. A dispatch from Sid Feder, Associated Press war correspondent, said the French began a final concerted attack on remaining strongpoints today after laying down a heavy artillery barrage on a commanding hill in the southwest section of Marseille.

Except for these two knots of resistance, nearly 9,000 square miles of France were held securely by Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army. Continued fair weather and attacks by Allied planes made it costly for the enemy to attempt sizable troop concentrations anywhere.

Allied naval guns ranged ever farther east and west along the southern French coast, ceaselessly pounding assigned targets in harmony with advancing ground forces.

The capture of Cannes came after enemy coastal batteries in the vicinity had been heavily pounded by warships. The final rush into the resort city covered less than five miles. The Germans, apparently anticipating the Allied thrust eastward, announced several days ago that they had destroyed harbor installations at Cannes.

Two German panzer divisions which might have been intended to oppose the American push toward the Italian border were attacked by United States medium bombers near Turin in northern Italy and checked.

Allied fighter-bombers have been pouncing on rolling stock in southern France and have left few bridges standing.

Gestapo Prevents Surrender

MARSEILLE, Aug. 25 (AP)—One of the two German generals seized within the last three days and 500 German soldiers were seized after a bitter twelve-hour battle in the Larosa resort district on the northeastern outskirts of Marseille while 200 more were bagged at the Champ des Courses race track.

One general was reported still trapped in the city. Two days ago he had a conference with the French commander concerning surrender of Fort St. Jean and Fort San Nicolas, from which the Germans had been firing shells into the city. The French commander said today that the conference ended when the German officer indicated he was unable to give up because he was under pressure from the Gestapo.

Although Marseille was officially reported captured two days ago except for small pockets of resistance, French officers now say the pressure on the enemy from an encircling movement had pushed many of those stranded outside back into the city, where they have joined German garrisons.

Bordeaux Mayor Held

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Mayor of Bordeaux, Adrian Marquet, Deputy Minister of the Interior in Pierre Laval's Vichy Government in 1940, was arrested within an hour after the port was taken, according to French Forces of the Interior reports reaching here today.

The French said they expected American troops to reach the Spanish-French frontier at Hendaye, across the border from Irun, some time today.

Allied technicians were declared already hard at work repairing the port installations of St. Jean de Luz, Bayonne and Bordeaux, and at Port Vendres on the Mediterranean. These ports were wrecked by the Germans before their departure.

Bloody engagements were said to have taken place at Bordeaux. There was no estimate of the casualties.

Yanks Capture Cannes; Nearing Italian Line

NIGHT

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Seventh Army has occupied Antibes on the Mediterranean coast of France, it was announced today.

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP) — United States troops of the southern invasion arm seized the French Riviera resort of Cannes and thrust on today within less than 20 miles of the Italian frontier.

(Berlin radio declared German troops began withdrawing from southwestern France several days ago, and the German communique indicated the retreat extended over most of southern France.

(French headquarters said Patriot troops had entered Lyon, 170 miles north of Marseille.)

Grasse Captured

On the western beachhead flank the Allies opened great assaults to crush German pockets still holding out in Marseille.

The Americans who took Cannes also seized the near-by inland town of Grasse.

Another United States column, smashing westward from Salon, northwest of Marseille, was reported within eight miles of Arles and the lower Rhone river, in the drive on that vital natural highway for a juncture with Allied armies in northern France.

Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters said nothing of gains by American troops striking north of Grenoble. Geneva dispatches said the troops had reached the Swiss frontier, about 70 airline miles north of Grenoble.

Still Fighting In Ports

"The force which captured Grenoble after a spectacular advance northward from Draguignan was a flying column, including some armor operating in advance of the main body of the American troops, which subsequently ha[d] firmly occupied the area with the cooperation of the French Forces of the Interior," was the only official comment today on the activities of that swiftly striking force.

(The Allies launched a smashing attack on the four remaining enemy strongpoints in Marseille after capturing two German generals and 5,000 prisoners in this area in the last 72 hours, a dispatch from Marseille said.

Land Arsenal Occupied

(Preceding the attack, a heavy artillery attack was made on Notre Dame de la Garde, a commanding hill in the aristocratic southwest section of Marseille, crowned by a fort and the cathedral. German headquarters was in that area, which projects westward into the bay and forms a protection for the harbor.

(One frontline report said shells hit the dome and nave of the cathedral.)

In Toulon French troops drew a ring of steel tighter around the desperate Germans entrenched in the naval port and the nearby coastal area. The French troops occupied the land arsenal within the city as well as the suburban town of Ollioules to the northwest. The enemy's stiffest resistance was around the naval arsenal in the harbor and on the two peninsulas which almost landlock the harbor to the southwest and southeast.

Some 20,000 prisoners already have passed through the pens established on the beachheads, and hundreds more continued to march back from the rapidly expanding front, while hard-striking American and French troops wiped out small enemy units as fast as they were encountered.

Coastal Batteries Blasted

Capture of Cannes in a five-mile advance at the eastern end of the beachhead was the first offensive movement toward the Italian frontier reported in recent days. It came after bombardment of enemy coastal batteries in that vicinity by Allied warships.

The Germans reported several days ago they had destroyed the harbor installations at Cannes.

Nazi fears that a full scale attack might be launched eastward along the Riviera was reflected in airforce reports of two Panzer divisions north of Turin apparently ready to march to the danger area. They were attacked heavily by American medium bombers.

Allied Silence Explained

The reticence of the Allied command regarding current activities of the swift task forces operating out of Grenoble and others thrusting northwest toward Avignon and the vital Rhone Valley roads north to Lyon, apparently was intended to keep the enemy guessing about the availability of escape routes from southern France.

As isolated enemy units were attempting to flee toward Germany through the dwindling gap between Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's and Patch's armies, advanced Allied forces were expected to maintain radio silence concerning their precise whereabouts.

From the activities of Allied air forces in recent days it is evident that Nazi troops from southeastern France still are trying to run the gantlet north through the Rhone valley before the armies effect a junction. Fighter bombers have been hammering every piece of rolling stock spotted on the rail networks of southern France.

Gun Positions Bombed

Once Patch's forces reach Avignon—and at last reports twin columns driving along the Durance valley were making rapid progress in its direction—the Rhone valley highways and railroads definitely would be cut.

American P-47 Thunderbolts late yesterday bombed and strafed enemy gun positions and vehicles on roads and rail cars ten miles northeast of Avignon in the Rhone valley, and bridges and other communication targets in the areas of Montpelier and Nimes, to the west of the lower Rhone.

FRENCH REPORT BORDEAUX TAKEN

DAY

IRUN, Spain, Aug. 25.—(AP) Information reaching this border town today from the FFI said Bordeaux, France's fourth largest city, had been liberated.

(Capture of Bordeaux by French and American forces also was reported Thursday by the French radio at Algiers, but no confirmation has yet come from official sources.)

The mayor of Bordeaux, Adrian Marquet, deputy minister of the interior in Pierre Laval's Vichy government in 1940, was arrested within an hour after the port was taken, according to the French patriot authorities.

The French said they expected American troops to reach the Spanish-French frontier at Hendaye, across the border from Irun, sometime today.

Allied technicians were declared already hard at work repairing the port installations of St. Jean de Luz, Bayonne and Bordeaux, on the Atlantic and Port Vendres, on the Mediterranean, which were wrecked by the Germans before departure.

A number of bloody engagements were said to have taken place at Bordeaux. However there was no estimate of the casualties.

The successful Maquis assault on Perpignan, near the Mediterranean, resulted in the death of 35 Germans and 18 Frenchmen, it was announced.

60,000 Nazis Encircled In Bessarabia; Drive On Bucharest Shaping As 2 Russ Forces Merge

London, Saturday, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Cairo radio said today Hitler, shaken by Romania's capitulation, had called a conference of military and political leaders at Berchtesgaden.

Romania declares war on Germany after Bucharest is bombed by Nazi planes.....Page 3

London, Saturday, Aug. 26 (AP)—Two Russian armies racing toward the heart of Romania at a better than a mile-an-hour clip yesterday reached the Galati Gap defenses at Tecuci and also drove a spearhead down to the Danube river delta at Kiliya in a six-day whirlwind offensive which Moscow announced cost the enemy nearly 205,000 killed and captured.

In perhaps the greatest defeat yet inflicted on the Axis in a comparable period, the Russians also announced they had encircled 12 German divisions of upward of 60,000 men southwest of fallen Chisinau, provincial capital of Bessarabia.

Thirteen thousand of the Germans already have surrendered in two days, and the remainder are being annihilated, said the Moscow broadcast bulletin.

Drive On Bucharest Due

Thousands of Romanians were abandoning the struggle against the Russians and turning to fight the Germans, dispatches said, as the Second and Third Ukraine armies under Generals Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Feodor I. Tolbukhin linked up for a quick drive on Bucharest, within 112 miles of Soviet columns which seized Tecuci on the Barlad river.

General Malinovsky's troops now were at the Galati Gap, a 45-mile stretch of defenses prepared along the Putna, Siret and Barlad rivers just above where those streams empty into the Danube.

Kiliya On Danube Taken

To the southeast, a Soviet midnight communique said the Russians had captured Kiliya on the Danube, 15 miles west of the Black Sea port of Valcov at the mouth of the delta, and 22 miles east of the port of Ismail.

General Tolbukhin's Third Army seized that point. To the northwest his troops reached the Prut river on a 70-mile front between captured Leuseni and Kagul, the latter being only 30 miles northeast of the big river and rail junction of Galati.

The capture of Gasan Batyr also put the Russians only 30 miles from Ismail on the northeast.

In six days the Russians have captured nearly all of lower Bessarabia.

AUG 26 1944

A total of 350 towns and villages were swept up by the two armies, and the capture of Tecuci found the Russians within 92 miles northeast of the bomb-wrecked Ploesti oil wells. Gen. Malinovsky's troops now were at the Gelati gap, a 45-mile stretch of defenses prepared along the Putna, Siret and Barlad rivers just above where those streams empty into the Danube.

To the southeast, a Soviet midnight communique said the Russians had captured Kiliya on the Danube, 15 miles west of the Black Sea port of Valcov at the mouth of the delta, and 22 miles east of the port of Ismail. General Tolbukhin's Third army seized that point. To the northwest his troops reached the Prut river on a 70-mile front between captured Leuseni and Kagul, the latter being only 30 miles northeast of the big river and rail junction of Galati. The capture of Gasan Batyr also put the Russians only 30 miles from Ismail port on the northeast.

Troop Trains Bombed

Soviet aircraft added to the slaughter by attacking Axis military trains at Galati, the supplementary communique said.

In six days the Russians have captured nearly all of lower Bessarabia, the province ceded by Romania to Russia in 1940 and then recaptured by the Romanians in the German-Romanian offensive of 1941.

On the northern Poland front Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian army gained up to five miles in this steady effort to drive a wedge between Warsaw and the lower border of East Prussia.

Outflanking the two big strongholds of Lomza and Ostrow-Mazowiecka, the Russians captured Ratovo, eight miles southwest of Lomza. At the lower end of a 26-mile front they converged on Ostrow-Mazowiecka from several directions, taking Grodziki, five miles north of Ostrow; Ugniewo, two miles to the east, and stare Kacowon five miles southeast.

The Russians captured 40 localities in this area, and to the southwest beat down for a third straight day a heavy series of German counterattacks east and northeast of Praga, embattled Warsaw's eastern suburb.

On the disintegrating southern front, Bucharest radio reports said, Romanian troops now are actively assisting the Russians. A broadcast said Bucharest had been liberated from the Germans, and that the Nazi escape roads leading to the Galati gap were littered with wrecked German equipment and dead.

The Moscow statement of Axis losses in six days raised to nearly 1,000,000 the announced number of enemy killed and captured since the Russians began their gigantic summer operations June 23. On the basis of Moscow announcements the total is 935,888, with some Soviet armies yet to turn in their reports.

40,000 Enemy Killed

Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army in its swift drive down the Prut river killed 40,000 of the enemy and took 48,900 German and Romanian prisoners in fighting from Aug. 20 through yesterday, the special announcement said. It destroyed 99 planes, 104 tanks and self-propelled guns, 426 guns of various calibers, 480 mortars, 807 machine-guns and 1,050 trucks.

During the same period this army captured 54 tanks, 859 guns, 841 mortars, 3,660 machine guns, 19,150 rifles, 2,730 carts with supplies, and other equipment, including 5,500 horses, 40 locomotives, and 1,119 railway cars.

Two Romanian generals were included in the Second Ukraine army's prisoner bag.

Tolbukhin's Third army killed 60,000 of the enemy and captured 55,840, the statement said, and also destroyed and captured equally great quantities of equipment in its sweep across the Dniestr river to the Prut for the junction with the Second army southwest of Chisinau which trapped the 12 Nazi divisions.

The communique said that 60 localities were captured on the Estonian front.

Cossacks, Mobile Infantry and Planes Mow Down Disorganized Hordes.

WHOLE DIVISIONS CUT UP

NIGHT

Red Army in the North Meanwhile Captures Tartu, Key Estonian Communications Center.

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Russian troops pursued German forces retreating toward the Galati Gap leading to central Romania today as thousands of Romanians quit the struggle, and on the Baltic front other Soviet units captured by storm the key communications city of Tartu in Estonia.

An order of the day by Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin announced the fall of the university city of Tartu, on the Riga-Tallinn railway 100 miles southeast of Tallinn, Estonian capital. Marshal Stalin termed it "an important strongpoint in German defenses covering the roads to the central areas of Estonia," and ordered a twenty-salvo salute from 224 of Moscow's victory guns.

With the seizure of Tartu, Estonia's second city of 60,000, Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic Army was only seventy-two miles south of the Baltic Sea, and seventy-six miles from the eastern shore of the Gulf of Riga, in its effort to seal off and annihilate a large segment of two German Baltic armies.

Nazis Hacked Down in Flight.

In Romania the Germans were being cut down by Cossack horsemen, encircled and annihilated by mobile Russian infantrymen, and hounded from the sky in their panicky effort to escape through the Galati Gap, a forty-five-mile defense line between Galati at the head of the Danube Delta and Focsani at the edge of the Transylvanian Alps.

Moscow dispatches said bitter fighting had broken out between German rear garrisons and Romanian soldiers. Romanian captives told stories of being machine-gunned by the Nazis and of turning to kill their Nazi masters.

Soviet front dispatches said the bodies of Romanian and German Elite SS troops were found together where they had died fighting each other.

The Germans were so disorganized by the pace of the Russians that whole divisions were being separated and cut up. In some places the Germans failed to blow up bridges after fleeing across them. Enemy armored forces, however, still were fighting fiercely.

King Mihai's new pro-Ally Government has a force of 300,000 men which Moscow is hoping will be held together for an onslaught against both the Germans in Romania and the Hungarians in adjacent Transylvania.

47,000 Prisoners Taken.

The Red armies, slashing ever deeper into Romania, have taken 47,000 prisoners in five days, and prisoners in five days, today were within thirty-five miles of the Galati Gap defenses guarding the Danube gateway to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil fields.

The armies of Gen. Malinovsky and Gen. Tolbukhin, obviously taking no chances on the outcome of Romania's peace bid through King Mihai, swept up more than 550 cities, towns and villages yesterday, including the Bessarabian capital of Chisinau (Kishinev).

In a lightning attempt to get a firm grasp on Romania before her Nazi overlords can complete plans for counter-measures, the armies took 25,000 German and Romanian prisoners in a single day, and sent spearheads to less than 100 miles from Ploesti and slightly more than that from Bucharest.

Reds Enter Many Towns.

Front dispatches said that Red Army tankmen, as liberators and not conquerors, cruised through hundreds of northern Romanian towns and villages, followed by sweaty, dusty columns of singing infantry.

Red Army political officers, carrying out the official Russian position, explained to Romanian soldiers and civilians that liquidation of German forces in the country must be achieved before military operations cease and an armistice can be concluded.

Civilian populations literally cried for joy on hearing of a second promise by the Soviet Government not to annex Romanian territory, change its existing social regime or harm its independence, dispatches said.

The Red Army has recognized the utmost necessity of speedy action in order to prevent the Germans from regrouping their Balkan forces and overpowering Romanian garrisons elsewhere in King Michael's realm.

Governing Plan Agreed Upon For France

NIGHT

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—A British-French agreement covering the civil administration of liberated areas in France was signed today by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Rene Massigli, Fighting French Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Eisenhower-Koenig Accord

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—Arrangements to administer liberated France until the French people choose a permanent form of government went into effect today, the State Department announced.

These arrangements were set in motion through an exchange of letters between General Eisenhower, as commanding general of United States forces, and General Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior.

Censorship Situation

They deal with administration of civil affairs and related matters, including a provision that there will be no censorship of political news in liberated France and that only the ordinary rules of military censorship will prevail. This provision was included as the result of American suggestions during negotiations recently concluded in Washington.

The Franco-American agreement covers civil administration and jurisdiction, currency, captured war material and property, publicity and distribution of civilian relief supplies.

Romania Declares War on Germany After Nazi Bombers Hit Bucharest

DAY

LONDON, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Romania declared war on Germany today after Nazi bombers raided Bucharest, the capital, and radio reports said German ground troops within Bucharest had been swiftly overwhelmed by King Mihai's regiments.

The declaration of war against Germany by her former satellite was announced in a proclamation by King Mihai's new government which was broadcast from Bucharest.

It said the Romanians had gained complete control of the capital from the Germans, whose whole Balkan edifice was fast collapsing.

(A Romanian High command communique broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications commission said: "We have taken more than 4,000 prisoners and captured large quantities of war material. The liquidation of a few islands of resistance around Bucharest continues.")

The Bucharest radio said the Germans tried to capture the Baneasa airport near Bucharest, but were thrown back by the Royal Romanian Guards regiments and that roads from there to the capital were littered with German guns and vehicles.

The new government, which is trying to swing the country effectively to the side of the Allies, again called upon Romanians to "rise and fight the Germans."

The war proclamation said Romania gave the Germans an opportunity to withdraw without interference but, "after assurances as solemn as they were perfidious," German units attacked Romanian units and "even machinegunned the peaceful population of villages and the capital."

It said the German air force "in strength bombed the capital and other towns aiming particularly at the royal palace" and "by these acts of aggression which occurred simultaneously in various parts of the country Germany has placed herself in a state of war with Romania."

Chaos in the Balkans, with irreparable harm to the German war machine, was evident in these other reported developments:

Nazis

Berlin acknowledged a big retreat was underway by Nazi divisions trying to escape the Soviet steamroller sliding down to the Galati gap, key to Balkan plains, and the Nazis seemed likely to give up all Romania;

Bulgaria was on the verge of trying to jump on the Allied bandwagon.

Hungarian Government Changed

Germany quickly "reshuffled" the puppet Hungarian government under Premier Doeme Sztojay to meet the new dangers from the southeast -- a reference to Romania's desertion and Hungary's peril from the threat not only of Russian troops but Romanian soldiers eager to regain Transylvania.

Open fighting between Hungarians and Romanians in Transylvania, ceded by Romania to Hungary under Nazi dictation in 1940, was reported.

Romania's declaration of war on Germany was reported by the Cairo radio, which quoted a statement picked up from the Bucharest radio.

"The Romanian government asks Romanians to take an active part in the liberation of their country and expresses its confidence in the nation at this critical moment, and its confidence that the Romanian army will fight courageously against the Germans and that the civilian population will offer its resistance," the broadcast said.

News that German planes had attacked the capital came over the same channel.

Romanian troops were surrendering in droves to the Russians and also turning to fight the Germans, dispatches said. This Romanian action against the Axis is part of Moscow's official demands upon the country, with the approval of the United States and Britain. It is part of the price that Romania must pay to "work its passage home."

U. S. Considers Surrender

Armistice terms for Bulgaria based upon unconditional surrender were reported under consideration in Washington and London. There were reports that Bulgaria was about to break off diplomatic relations with Berlin and had begun moving her troops out of Greece and Yugoslavia. Russia, who is not at war with Bulgaria, is being kept informed of Allied negotiations with that country.

Berlin gave no details of the cabinet reshuffle in Hungary, but it was obvious that Germany was making a stern effort to keep that last major satellite from bolting the Axis. German foreign minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was reported in Budapest conferring with harassed Hungarian leaders.

The German High command, reflecting the heavy impact of Romania's defection, said today that German troops were "disengaging themselves toward the Prut and Siret (rivers) after parts of the Romanian troops had ceased to fight" the Russians.

German naval forces were reported ready to scuttle all their ships in the Black sea.

An authentic informant here disclosed that military leaders had informed British and American diplomats that Germany probably would let the Balkans go entirely in order to strengthen her northeastern line against Russia.

Romanian War Declaration Reported

NIGHT

New York, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Cairo radio said today that Romania had declared war on Germany and that German planes "heavily bombed" Bucharest. The FCC recorded the broadcast, which was without confirmation elsewhere.

Earlier, the German radio had commented bitterly:

"Russian troops have scored easy victories because of the attitude of Romanian troops. Those same Romanian divisions which a few days ago fought side by side with their German comrades defending Romanian soil against the Bolsheviks now have turned against their former comrades."

"Won Headquarters"

"The king's party won military headquarters for their plan even before the Russian offensive started."

Another Berlin broadcast said there was no resistance from parts of the Romanian army which had opposed the start of the Russian offensive last Sunday.

The Cairo radio said the Romanian declaration of war and an appeal to Romanians to fight the Germans were broadcast over the Bucharest radio after the Bucharest bombing.

Urges Citizens To Resist

"The Romanian Government asks Romanians to take an active part in the liberation of their country and expresses its confidence in the nation at this critical moment, and its confidence that the Romanian army will fight courageously against the Germans and that the civilian population will offer their resistance," the Bucharest broadcast said, as quoted by the Cairo radio.

The British radio said "clashes between Romania troops and Hungaran civilians in Transylvania" had been reported. It gave no further information or authority.

Romanian Troops Quit

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Germany announced officially today that "some" Romanian troops had stopped fighting and Moscow dispatches told of widespread local engagements between Nazi rear guards and King Mihai's army, thrown to the Allied side by the Balkan kingdom's abrupt capitulation and reversal.

While Russian armies drove swiftly through the oil and wheat empire to within 35 miles of the strategic Galati Gap between the Carpathians and the Danube delta, the Soviet Union informed Romania she could earn an armistice only by ordering her troops to fight "hand-in-hand with the Red army," a move ordered in King Mihai's dramatic proclamation Wednesday night.

Repercussions were swift.

Outflanked Bulgaria intensified its search for peace and London speculated that a capitulation from the Bulgars would come shortly. Hungary's boundaries were bared to the advancing Russians and, according to Bucharest broadcasts, to the Romanians too.

Effect On Other Nations

The liberation of adjoining Yugoslavia and nearby Greece were brought infinitely closer. Even Finland, far to the north, was reported in the new peace overtures.

The German communique told of the staggering military and political blow that Romania's about face constituted in these words:

"In the southeast sector of the eastern front, our troops are disengaging themselves toward the Prut and Siret rivers. After parts of Romanian troops had ceased to fight, many enemy tanks were destroyed."

Moscow reported that Romanians, who previously had deserted, told advancing Russian troops that Germans machine gunned them for retreating and that they, the Romanians, in turn, killed their Nazi military masters.

A correspondent for Izvestia said he saw bodies of Romanian troops and a German SS officer at one point where the Romanians rebelled. Soviet Cossacks were hailed frequently by surrendering Romanians who were ordered to continue without guard to Red army bases, Moscow said.

Bulgar Armistice Move

Russia's offer of cobelligerent status to all Romanians willing to fight the Germans and Hungarians hastened a complete collapse of Nazi rule in the Balkans and implied recognition of Romania's right to Transylvania, the AP's Daniel de Luce cabled from Moscow.

The Moscow statement came simultaneously with reports that Washington and London were considering a Bulgarian armistice move.

Dealings with Bulgaria, it was reported here, were initiated by a petition delivered to Sir Hughe M. Knatchbull-Hugesson, British Ambassador in Turkey, by an accredited representative of the Sofia Government. It was believed that any terms would be based on unconditional surrender.

F. D. R. Uninformed On Europe Commission

NIGHT

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today he did not know what plans the European Advisory Commission has made for such war events as recent developments in Romania.

At his news conference, a reporter asked whether the commission had made plans to handle situations that might develop inside Europe. Mr. Roosevelt replied he had no documents on the subject.

Does the State Department know what plans the commission has for future events?

The President said he did not know.

"Not necessarily," Mr. Roosevelt replied.

RADIO SURRENDER OF ROMANIA NOW

SATISFIES U. S.

DAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP) American officials are now satisfied that the radio surrender of Romania probably will turn out all right, it was learned today, but for a time inner circles were entirely in the dark and there is none too much light yet.

This government has not received any official word that Romania wants to get out of the war. Even more surprisingly, it was said, is the fact that up to a fairly late hour today the Russians had not received such word either. An effective surrender would have to be made to the Russians.

FDR Tells Reporters

These facts coupled with certain inside developments over several months apparently were in President Roosevelt's mind today when he told his news conference that he did not know what the European Advisory commission had done about planning for the surrender of the Balkan countries, especially Romania.

Ever since the German retreats in Russia reached high speed the Romanians have wanted to get out of the war. The question was how early this spring they sent to Cairo a recognized liberal, Prince Stirbey.

Allied Agency, finally convinced that he had something to offer in the way of early Romanian surrender, agreed to rush through a set of terms in conferences at Cairo. Ambassador Lincoln MacVeagh represented the United States in these negotiations.

The terms provided along other things:

1. Unconditional surrender.
2. The Romanians should stop fighting the Russians and immediately start fighting the Germans.
3. While turning on the Germans, the Romanians would not become entitled to treatment as Allies.
4. Romanian troops would be permitted to fight their way into Transylvania provided they were killing Germans in the process but they would not gain thereby any permanent claim on Transylvania and no permanent disposition would be made of that area, which Hungary took at the start of this war, until the peace settlements.

The provision that Romania could send troops into Transylvania was included deliberately as bait. It was made very clear to the Romanians that their chances of keeping the territory depended on how they fought for it.

Concocted Hurriedly

These terms were concocted so hurriedly that they could not be put through the European advisory commission, the usual Allied authority on such matters.

Stirbey forwarded the terms but he never had an answer from Bucharest. The Russian armies came up to Romania, then shifted their weight to the Polish front. Romania got a breathing spell and stalled on surrender. Stirbey was left high and dry in Cairo.

Wednesday night the Bucharest radio suddenly announced that Romania had accepted Allied terms. Stress was laid on a "promise" that Transylvania would be returned to Romania. Actually this may or may not happen. It was never promised in the first place, and the implication that it might be given back was made in the interest of getting Romania out of the war last spring, not this August.

Reds Speed Up 2 Drives In Romania

NIGHT

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Marshal Stalin announced today the capture of Tartu (Dorpat) in Etonia.

Moscow, Aug. 25 (AP)—Two Red armies, slashing deeper into Romania after taking 47,000 prisoners in five days, today were within 35 miles of the Galati Gap defenses guarding the Danube gateway to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil fields.

The armies of Gen. Rodio Y. Malinovsky and Gen. Feodor Tolbukhin, obviously taking no chances on the outcome of Romania's peace bid, swept up more than 550 cities, towns and villages yesterday, including the Bessarabian capital of Chisinau (Kishinev).

25,000 Captured In One Day

In a lightning attempt to get a firm grasp on Romania before the Nazis can complete plans for countermeasures, the armies took 25,000 German and Romanian prisoners in a single day and sent spearheads to less than 100 miles from Ploesti and slightly more than that from Bucharest.

Front dispatches said Red tankmen, as liberators and not conquerors, cruised through hundreds of northern Romanian towns and villages.

Red Army political officers explained to Romanian soldiers and civilians that liquidation of German forces in the country must be achieved before an armistice can be concluded.

Cry With Joy

Civilian populations literally cried for joy on hearing of a second promise by the Soviet Government not to annex Romanian territory, change its existing social regime or harm its independence, dispatches said.

There were still no indications whether the Germans hoped to draw up a new defense line. They are vastly outnumbered by the Second and Third Ukrainian armies.

The Germans have been fleeing in such haste the past 24 hours that they failed to demolish bridges and left some fortifications unmanned.

The Russians said the Nazis were killing any Romanian soldier or civilian making any show of resistance.

At the other end of the extended Eastern front Soviet forces plunged within sight of Tartu in Estonia and Edged within striking distance of the German bastion at Lomza in Poland, near the East Prussian frontier.

The 47,000 casualties announced at midnight brought to 853,886 the number of enemy troops announced as killed or captured in the Russian summer offensives since June 23. The 28th German general was captured.

Close On Focsani

The Russian thrusts brought armored scouts racing down the west bank of the Siret river within grasp of the rail town of Focsani, 76 miles from Ploesti. Focsani commands the foothill flank of the Galati Gap, through which the Germans are believed to have their main defenses in territory full of natural obstacles.

Germans Admit Tensions in Hungary.

Shake-up In Budapest.

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Ger many today announced a reshuf fle of the Hungarian Governmen because "events in Romania have caused certain political tensions' in Nazi-occupied Hungary. De tails of the shake-up were not disclosed.

Quoting a German Foreign Office spokesman, DNB, the German official news agency, said: "The tensions which have lately arisen in Hungary, in consequence of events in Romania, have been eliminated immediately in view of the dangers with which the Hungarian people are confronted," The "tensions" were not explained.

Germany occupied Hungary earlier this year. Only yesterday, a decree abolished all political parties apparently to forestall any intrigue that might take Hungary out of the war.

Also yesterday Swiss dispatches reported that Romanian troops had started marching against Hungary.

This morning Germany announced officially that some Romanian troops had stopped fighting the Russians. On the other hand, Moscow dispatches told of widespread local engagements between Romanian troops and Nazi rear guards as a result of Romania's abrupt capitulation and changing of sides in the war.

Admitting the German retreat in Romania, the Nazi communique, as broadcast by the Berlin radio, said: "Our troops are disengaging themselves toward the Prut and Siret rivers. After parts of Romanian troops had ceased to fight, many enemy tanks were destroyed."

While the Russian armies drove swiftly through the rich oil and wheat kingdom to within thirty-five miles of the strategic Galati Gap between the Carpathians and the Danube delta, the Soviet Union notified Romania that she could earn an armistice only by ordering her troops to fight "hand in hand with the Red Army," a move already ordered in King Michael's dramatic proclamation on Wednesday night.

In a statement subsequently hailed in Foreign Office circles here as "very good news," the Soviet Foreign Commissariat made it clear that the Romanians would be welcome to assist the Allies, either in helping drive the Germans from Romania or in attacking the Hungarians through Transylvania. And from Moscow an Associated Press correspondent reported that this offer of co-belligerent status to all Romanians willing to fight the Germans and Hungarians, implied recognition of Romania's right to Transylvania.

Also it hastened the complete collapse of Nazi control in the Balkans.

Repercussions were swift. Outflanked Bulgaria intensified her search for peace and London speculated that a capitulation from the Bulgars would come shortly. Hungary's boundaries were exposed to the advancing Russians and, according to Bucharest broadcasts, to the Romanians too.

[In a broadcast picked up at New York today by NBC, the British radio asserted that the terms to be imposed on Bulgaria for an armistice are now being considered in London and Washington.]

A correspondent for Izvestia, the Soviet Government newspaper, said he saw bodies of Romanian troops and a German SS officer at one point where the Romanians had rebelled. Russian Cossacks were hailed frequently by surrendering Romanians, who were ordered to continue without guard to the Red Army bases, Moscow said.

Mountbatten Back at Post From Allied Talks in London

NIGHT

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Admiral Mountbatten has returned to his post as head of the Allied Command in Southeast Asia, it was disclosed here today, after a series of conferences in London with British and American leaders at which plans were made to step up the war against Japan.

His visit here coincided in part with that of James V. Forrestal, the American Secretary of the Navy.

Admiral Mountbatten said that his men were fighting an often fanatical foe over some of the world's worst terrain, and that the Allied hardships in this theater were largely unnoticed by the folks back home. He declined to forecast future operations, but reviewed at a press conference, the campaign which has been hampered, he said, by the lack of landing craft withdrawn for use at Anzio and France. He said that the loss of their vehicles meant a revision of his plans "on a less ambitious scale," aimed at clearing the Japanese from northeast Burma and thus improving the supply situation for China and Major-Gen. Claire L. Chennault's "very effective" Fourteenth United States Air Force.

Praises Stilwell.

The clearing of Northeast Burma was effected by bitter fighting along 700 miles of jungle and mountain front by American, British, Indian and West African troops, often with invaluable aid from Kachin and other Burmese tribesmen.

He said that the campaign strategy was for Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell to drive on Mogaung and Myitkyina with American and Chinese forces while the Fourteenth British Army blocked Japanese reinforcements from moving to meet him and also engaged the bulk of the Japanese strength in Burma. The blocking of reinforcements was achieved by the late Gen. Wingate's Chindits making a long penetration, assisted by American Air Commandos.

The Japanese "fortunately played into our hands," Admiral Mountbatten said, by sending three divisions on an ill-fated thrust into Manipur State in India last March. Gen. Stilwell "with great gallantry himself commanded" the Allied force in North Burma which achieved its goal, he added.

Fighting in Burma in 1944 cost the Japanese a minimum of 42,000 killed and the Allies 10,000 killed, 3,000 missing and 27,000 wounded, Admiral Mountbatten said, adding that a quarter of a million casualties had been suffered from sickness, chiefly malaria and dysentery.

Fortresses Batter 14 Targets in Germany and Four More in Czecho-Slovakia.

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—More than 1,600 American heavy bombers with many hundreds of escorting fighters and fighter-bombers today attacked fourteen targets in Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, while waves of other planes battered the beleaguered Breton port of Brest.

Upward of 1,100 of the Flying Fortresses and Liberators flew from Britain. Another 500 from Italy attacked two aircraft factories and two airdromes in Czecho-Slovakia. Lesser planes from the south bombed two bridges northeast of Lyon in southern France, in the path of the retreating German armies, and knocked out a German gun position in an island just off Marseille.

One of the objectives of the British-based planes was the Peenemunde experimental station where flying and rocket bombs are developed. The targets also included four aircraft factories, three air force stations, a research center and a synthetic oil plant.

Peenemunde lies on the Baltic, 110 miles from Berlin, and has been a frequent Allied target. Recent advices have said that the Germans were developing their "V-2" weapon there, variously described as a sixty to ninety-ton rocket carrying about a ten-ton explosive warhead.

Seize Upon Good Weather.

The Fortresses and Liberators took advantage of their second successive day of good weather to disperse over Germany and bomb such targets as these: Wismar, a bomber assembly plant and a bomber parts plant; Lubeck, a bomber components plant; Rostock, a bomber assembly plant; Politz, a synthetic oil plant; German air force stations at Anklam, Schwerin and Neubrandenburg; Rechlin, a German air force research center.

The renewed grand-scale strategic bombings, which started at midnight on Wednesday when foul weather began to lift, have sent Allied planes from Britain and Italy against nearly every section of the Reich and its edges.

Keeping after the Germans' evaporating oil supply, the bombers added Politz to the list today and crews said that the results were good.

Hit For First Time.

All the Czecho-Slovak targets were attacked for the first time. The Lisen aircraft factories and the Kurim airplane engine plant were bombed at Brunn (Brno), seventy miles north of Vienna. The airdrome there and another forty miles northeast at Prostejov also were bombed, probably in support of the Russian armies.

Escorting Mustangs and Lightnings on the attacks in Czecho-Slovakia shot down a number of interceptors to add to the toll of 155 enemy planes destroyed by Mediterranean air forces in three days. None of the bombers was reached by the enemy fighters.

Simultaneously, nine waves of Marauder and Havoc bombers attacked the fortifications of Brest for almost a solid hour starting at 3 P. M. About 300 planes participated, Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters said. Elements of three German divisions have been locked in the Brest forts for several weeks.

R. A. F. Is Active.

Bostons and Mitchells of the Second Tactical Air Force, Royal Air Force, bombed a gasoline and oil dump at Clermont in France and blew up a long string of freight cars at a siding nearby. The Fighting French Lorraine Squadron accompanied the bombers.

R. A. F. Mosquito bombers blasted objectives in France and Belgium last night, continuing an Allied air offensive in which 5,000 planes from Britain and Italy struck yesterday at vital oil and industrial targets from the Baltic to the Balkans.

R. A. F., Canadian and other Allied aircraft were credited with destroying at least sixty-five enemy vehicles last night in the Gournay area fifty miles northwest of Paris on the railroad to Dieppe. Two trains also were bombed in the Gournay station, touching off large fires and explosions.

Fifty railway cars and a German staff car were reported destroyed in other sweeps over France and Belgium. One plane was listed as missing.

NAZI RESEARCH CENTERS HIT

1,100 U. S. Bombers Pound Experimental Stations

DAY

Stockholm, Aug. 25 (AP)—Five American bombers and two fighters made forced landings in southern Sweden today. One bomber burst into flames after landing, but all crews are safe.

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—In a smashing blow at Hitler's flying bombs, rockets and jet-propelled planes, more than 1,100 American heavy bombers from Britain blasted at targets in Germany today, while tactical air forces roared into the battle of France on two fronts.

Vital experimental and research centers for Hitler's new weapons of destruction were hit.

The British-based heavies were escorted by nearly 750 fighters, which shot down 11 German planes in combat and destroyed 40 more on the ground. Seven Allied fighters and 17 bombers were missing.

One Eighth United States Air Force task group smashed at a synthetic oil plant at Politz, cutting further into the fuel supply for Germany's war machine in a follow-up to yesterday's 2,000-plane assault on enemy oil installations.

Peenemunde Raid

Among targets blasted by other British-based bombers were the Peenemunde flying-bomb and rocket experimental station, the German air force research center at Rechlin, maintenance and experimental stations at Anklam, Schwerin and Neubrandenburg, all west of Stettin, for the first time, and bomber assembly or parts plants at Wismar, Lubeck and Rostock.

It was the third American daylight raid in six weeks on Peenemunde.

Weather was clear for the second straight day and bomber crewmen reported good results.

Foe Pounded At Seine

On the Western front American and British medium and light bombers returned to action after being grounded nearly a week and ripped German positions at the extreme ends of the French fighting zone. Fighter-bombers continued their devastating pounding of the retreating enemy at and beyond the Seine.

In one action more than 300 American Marauders and Havocs pounded German batteries and strong points at the besieged Brittany peninsula port of Brest.

Clermont Dumps Hit

RAF Mitchells and Bostons bombed a Nazi oil and gasoline dump at Clermont, 40 miles north of Paris, and bombed and strafed retreating Germans.

A German broadcast said planes of an Allied fleet air arm had raided Alten Fjord, where the crippled Nazi 35,000-ton battleship Tirpitz lies. The Tirpitz, at last reports, was seaworthy but unable to risk a heavy battle.

1,700 Big Bombers Blast European Area Targets, Fighters Busy in France

LONDON, Aug. 26 (Saturday) (AP).—More than 1,750 heavy American bombers blasted targets in Germany and Czecho-Slovakia yesterday, including vital research and experimental stations for Hitler's flying bombs, rockets and jet-propelled planes.

Other hundreds of planes from tactical forces in France and Italy hammered at the enemy on two fronts.

One armada of more than 1,100 Fortresses and Liberators ranged deep into Germany from Britain, battering ten targets. Later a force of up to 250 bombed industrial targets in northern France and Belgium.

From Italy nearly 500 heavies winged over Czecho-Slovakia for the second successive day, pounding two plane plants and two air fields.

92 Nazi Planes Destroyed

On the first raid the heavies from Britain were escorted by nearly 750 fighters which shot down eleven German planes and destroyed forty more on the ground. No Nazi fighters were able to reach the bomber formations, but flak was heavy. Allied losses on the raid were seventeen bombers and seven fighters. There were no losses on the second raid.

American fighters and fighter-bombers pursuing the fleeing Germans beyond the Seine River destroyed forty-one enemy planes in the air, probably destroyed six and damaged twenty-one. Allied losses on these missions were eighteen.

Late in the day Royal Air Force heavies, with a fighter escort, attacked robot bomb-launching sites in northern France and apparently were out over Germany again in the night. The German radio reported after midnight that a bomber formation was over northwestern Germany and nuisance raiders were over Brandenburg Province.

One 8th American Air Force task group smashed at a synthetic oil plant at Politz, in a follow-up of Wednesday's 2,000-plane assault on enemy oil installations.

Peenemunde Blasted

Among other targets blasted were the Peenemunde flying bomb and rocket experimental station, the German air force research center at Rechlin, maintenance and experimental stations at Anklam, Schwerin and Neubrandenburg, all west of Stettin, and bomber assembly or parts plants at Wismar, Lubeck and Rostock.

Royal Air Force Mitchells and Bostons bombed a Nazi oil and gasoline dump at Clermont, forty miles north of Paris, and bombed and machine-gunned retreating Germans.

A German broadcast said planes of an Allied fleet air arm had raided Altenfjord, where the crippled Nazi 35,000-ton battleship Tirpitz lies. The Tirpitz, at last reports, was seaworthy but unable to risk a hard battle.

Allied bombings from Britain, Italy and Russia during May, June and July of German oil supplies were estimated by authorities to have reduced production of finished oil products in Germany and her satellites by 49 per cent.

LONDON'S ROBOT DAMAGE SOARING

NIGHT

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Nazi robot bombs sent against England at the rate of 100 a day have caused "heavy casualties" and "shocking damage to property," the Government asserted today in a fresh appeal to Londoners to keep their children away from the capital. (Last officially announced figures showed the death toll was nearly 5,000. It likely has surpassed that total now.)

The appeal came from Minister of Health Henry U. Willink in the midst of a several-hour lull in the bombardment and shortly after it had been disclosed that historic Lincoln's Inn in Chancery Lane was among the famous buildings smashed by the buzzbombs.

The Minister of Health, accompanied by Lord Woolton, Minister of Reconstruction, toured London's bomb-damaged areas. He said parents "must not let the glorious victories of the Allied armies blind them to the risks to which children who are kept in London still are exposed. We have to expect that these dangers will continue for some time—cornered beasts are dangerous."

Windows and woodwork of Lincoln's Inn gatehouse, which bears the date of 1518, as well as lawyers' offices and residential quarters adjoining, were badly damaged but no one was hurt.

The British Information Services announced today that the fury of the robot bomb attack on England has now reached such a pitch that houses are being destroyed at the rate of 17,000 every twenty-four hours.

Robots Bagged As Skies Clear

DAY

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Clear Channel weather which gave coastal anti-aircraft batteries a chance to get flying bombs on the wing, today brought a temporary respite from the menace in southern England after the Germans had delivered their usual post-dawn attack.

Returning from an inspection tour of London's bombed districts, Health Minister Henry U. Willink cautioned evacuees against drifting home.

"We have to expect that these dangers will continue for some time—cornered beasts are vicious," he said. "Parents must not let the glorious victories of the Allied armies blind them to risks to which children who are kept in London and other evacuation areas are still exposed."

The Government disclosed the buzz Blitz, which has made southern England the target for 100 of the winged explosives daily, has caused "heavy casualties" and "shocking damage to property."

It was revealed that among famous buildings badly smashed by the bombs was historic Lincoln's Inn in Chancery Lane which bears the date 1518.

Mustang Squadron Bags 29 Planes, Damages 20

DAY

A United States Fighter Base, England, Aug. 25 (AP)—A Mustang squadron commanded by Lieut. Col. John P. Randolph, Schertz, Texas, destroyed 19 land planes and 10 seaplanes and damaged at least 20 other craft today in attacks on a German airfield and a seaplane base north of Berlin.

Lieut. Joseph Mansker, Long Beach, Cal., destroyed six planes in the attack.

"I just dropped in on the merry-go-round and pressed the trigger every time I swung by," he said. "I used up 1,682 rounds of ammunition."

Randolph himself destroyed two of the planes.

...hips Sunk ...eeing Le Havre

DAY

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—American and British light naval forces intercepting Nazi ships trying to escape from Le Havre at the Seine's mouth early today blew up an escort vessel, an armed trawler and E-boat, and damaged at least five other enemy warships in a series of running battles.

Light American coastal craft first chased a group of German E-boats north of Le Havre, hitting some before they escaped in darkness. British motor torpedo [illegible] meanwhile were shooting up a convoy north of Cap d'Antifer. A torpedo hit blew up an armed trawler.

3 Damaged, 1 Sunk

United States light coastal craft engaged another group of E-boats, damaging one severely, and British destroyers continued the action, setting fire to two, one of which blew up and sank, and damaging a third.

The German convoy was engaged again later by British MTB's despite shore battery protection, and one R-boat was set afire and another silenced. Other British MTB's later engaged a group of enemy escort vessels, hitting one which was believed to have sunk.

The American and British ships were not damaged, and personnel suffered only three slight casualties, an Admiralty communique added.

NO MORE PIGEONS TO CARRY STORIES

Two More Deaths Raise Toll Of Plane To 59

DAY

Freckleton, England, Aug. 25 (AP). A 65-year-old schoolteacher and one of her 6-year-old pupils died today of injuries suffered in the crash of an American Liberator upon Freckleton's schoolhouse Wednesday, increasing the death toll to 59.

Thirty-seven school children between the ages of 4 and 6 years who died in the accident will be buried tomorrow in one grave dug by United States troops in the village churchyard.

Primary Role In Air Held Aim Of Britis...

DAY

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Britain intends to play a primary role in post-war international air transport, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Secretary for Air, declared today.

Addressing a gathering commemorating the 25th anniversary of the first British commercial air service, Sinclair said Britain wanted to see air transportation developed "in an orderly fashion without waste or international friction" and that it was not attempting "to impose any particular framework to secure that end."

"We seek no domination," he asserted. "We want all United Nations whose squadrons have fought so gallantly alongside our own in the war to share with us in the future of international air transport in peace. But we will not accept a secondary role in international aviation."

He said Britain's aims were two-fold—to see that civil aviation becomes a "means of uniting nations, not plunging them into rivalry" and to insure the empire that air communications are "worthy of it and give services it needs for the life and prosperity of its people."

Army Piles Up Food For Relief of Paris

NIGHT

LONDON, Aug. 25 (AP).—An Allied food supply has been assembled to feed hungry Paris and will be rushed in as soon as the French capital is completely cleared of Germans. Part of a ten-day stockpile already is in France and the rest is on the way.

Lieutenant Colonel Frank L. Howley, of Drexel Hill, Pa., a former Philadelphia advertising man, will command an Army civil affairs detachment which has been assigned to Paris and given the task of preventing hunger in the French capital.

UNRRA Seeks Right To Enter Enemy Lands

DAY

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will seek authority at its conference in Montreal next month to enter countries on the heels of the military to begin arranging for history's biggest mass migration, it was learned today.

The present charter contains a clause specifically forbidding the UNRRA from operating in enemy territory.

Germans Honor Flyer For 301 Air Victories

DAY

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—The German radio said today that Lieut. Col. Ernest Hartmann, German air ace credited with 301 aerial victories, had been awarded the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross with Diamonds.

The Nazi high command communique earlier said the flyer downed 11 planes on the Russian front yesterday.

London Reporter Wounded in France

London, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—William Makin, war correspondent for the Daily Sketch and the Kemsley newspapers, was wounded during the fighting on the Cherbourg peninsula while accompanying American troops. Mr. Makin was shot in the abdomen.

CZECH TARGETS HIT FROM ITALY

500 Bombers Raid Nazi Aircraft Plants And Dromes

DAY

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP)—Up to 500 American bombers from Italy smashed at two Nazi aircraft factories and two airdromes in Czechoslovakia today. One hundred and fifty-five enemy planes have been destroyed in three days.

Today's targets were a plant turning out parts for Messerschmitt 109 fighters, an airplane-engine factory and an airdrome, all at Brno in Czechoslovakia, and an airfield 40 miles northeast of Brno. Several Nazi fighters were shot down by escorting Mustangs and Lightnings, which shielded the big bombers so perfectly that not one was attacked from the air.

53 Planes Bagged, 19 Lost

In ranging over six countries yesterday Allied planes from this theater shot down 53 enemy craft with a loss of 19 planes missing. They ranged almost at will over Hungary, Greece, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, northern Italy and southern France.

Mustang fighters sweeping across Yugoslavia attacked a German motor convoy stretching for 20 miles along a highway leading northward to Belgrade and destroyed at least ten vehicles. The long enemy column indicated the Nazis might be evacuating Yugoslavia as a result of Romania's capitulation.

Romanian Raids Cost 250 Planes

A statement from headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Allied air commander in the Mediterranean, disclosed that approximately 24,000 tons of explosives had been dropped on oil installations and communications in Romania at a cost of over 200 heavy bombers and 50 escorting fighters. A total of 353 enemy planes were shot down in the course of these attacks.

The extended assault on one of Germany's greatest sources of oil had reduced the capacity of the Ploesti fields by 79 per cent., the statement declared. Production of gasoline, the most critical item, was cut 95 per cent.

"Germany's prize in Romania was turned to ashes," Eaker's review of the air campaign said. "In the struggle for possession of the country's wealth the Germans were defeated by long-range air power."

2,000 Flyers Lost

Of some 60,000 Allied airmen who participated in the attacks on Ploesti over a long period, more than 2,200 were casualties, the statement revealed.

In yesterday's ground fighting in Italy Allied forces made what a communique described as "considerable advances" in the central sector southeast of Florence, capturing the villages of Castelnuovo, Fornich and La Montania.

Just east of Florence, in the Pontassieve sector, Eighth Army troops have "made good progress toward the Gothic Line and are firmly established on the western slopes of Monte Fecchieta," the announcement said.

Polish patrols near the Adriatic pushed more than a mile beyond the Metauro river, penetrating well into new enemy defenses in that sector.

ALLIES ADVANCE ON ITALIAN FRONT

NIGHT

Rome, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Allied troops have made considerable advances in the upper Arno valley on the central sector of the Italian front and have occupied the villages of Castelnuovo, Fornich and La Montania, Allied headquarters announced today.

Just east of Florence, in the Pontassieve sector, Eighth Army forces have made good progress toward the Gothic Line and are firmly established on the western slopes of Monte Fecchieta.

AUG 26 1944

In the Fifth Army sector west of Florence continued patrol activity was reported on both sides of the Arno.

CHURCHILL HAS TALK WITH POPE

NIGHT

Rome, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill left Rome on Wednesday after a forty-eight-minutes' private audience that day with the Pope, it was revealed today. A Vatican announcement said: "Many essential questions were touched upon relating to important problems of the present hour."

"Mr. Churchill's visit was observed with all the splendor of the Papal court.

"It was a pleasant conversation," the British leader was reported to have told the Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword. As his car drove away from the Vatican a group of Allied soldiers recognized and cheered him.

Mr. Churchill was accompanied by Sir Francis Osborne, British Minister to the Holy See.

In one of the formalities upon the Prime Minister's arrival, Swiss Guards in fifteenth century uniforms presented their halbards as Mr. Churchill passed through the Clementine Room.

"That's a sight far away from daily reality," Mr. Churchill said.

service said that the questions under discussion probably did not concern ways to solve territorial, economic and material problems but rather referred to the spiritual criteria of justice and equity.

Churchill was accompanied to the Holy See by Sir Francis D'Arcy Godolphin Osborne, British minister to the Vatican. His conversations with the Pontiff were in private.

The visit was observed with all the splendor of the Papal court.

After the audience Churchill was reported to have told the chamberlain of the cape and sword, "it was a pleasant conversation."

As the Prime Minister's car pulled away from the Vatican, a group of Allied soldiers recognized Churchill and cheered him.

Rosy and windblown from his recent tour of the front lines, Churchill talked informally to correspondents for 20 minutes in Rome's big yellow British embassy Wednesday.

"The number of cigars I smoke," said the Prime Minister, "is sometimes governed by the supply." That was the only remark permitted to be quoted.

Churchill appeared tired but relaxed—a vastly different figure from the man who addressed correspondents at the British embassy at Cairo more than a year ago when Marshal Erwin Rommel was poised at the gates of Alexandria.

He beamed happily when asked when he thought the war would end and whether the German armies would crack before the home front. Asked about post war problems and the role the four major powers are destined to play, Churchill gave precise and affable thought but always off-the-record answers. He also had opinions on what should be done with war criminals.

POPE DISCUSSES PEACE PROBLEMS WITH CHURCHILL

DAY

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 25 (AP) Pope Piux XII received Prime Minister Winston Churchill for a 48-minute private audience Wednesday in which the two leaders discussed "essential questions" referring to a "sincere desire of a just and lasting peace," it was announced today.

Churchill left Rome the same day. Announcement of his audience and departure apparently were delayed until he reached his destination.

The Vatican announcement of the visit said "many essential questions were touched upon relating to important problems of the present hour." Affable cordiality marked the conversation, the announcement said.

Savoy and Red Flags Are Torn Down, but Police Save Day

ROME, Aug. 25 (AP).—A demonstration in celebration of the liberation of Paris before the French Embassy on the Piazza Farnese today became a near riot when a demonstrator stripped an Italian monarchy flag from its staff at a near-by police station and ran up the red flag with the hammer and sickle.

A policeman ripped down the red flag and threw it at the crowd below. There was a rush for the building, but two Allied policemen kept the people back and ordered an Italian flag without the Savoy cross and the red flag to be flown side by side.

This calmed the crowd, which returned to singing the "Marsellaise."

Charged With Church Arrests In Rome

DAY

AUG 26 1944

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP)—Pietro Caruso, Rome police chief under the Fascists, will be tried on a charge of violation of extra-territorial rights in entering the Church of Saint Paul Fuori le Mura (outside the Vatican wall) last spring to arrest Italian officers and others who sought refuge there.

This was disclosed today in a list of charges against Caruso submitted to the high court of justice by the high commissioner for punishment of Fascist crimes.

He also is accused of delivering to the Germans 50 hostages who were among 350 executed by the Nazis last March in the catacombs of St. Callixtus.

Relations With Petain Are Broken By Portugal

DAY

Lisbon, Aug. 25 (AP)—Portugal ceased diplomatic relations with the Vichy Government of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain last night on the basis of Petain's reported statement that he considered himself a prisoner of the Germans.

Previously Switzerland and Sweden similarly ended diplomatic relations with Petain's government.

Sauerwein Says Herriot, Blum Are Still Alive

NIGHT

Journalist Reports Most Pre-War French Leaders Living, Laval Like a Ghost

LISBON, Aug. 25 (AP).—Jules Sauerwein, French newspaper man who fled Paris just before patriot attacks started against the German occupying forces, said today that seventy-two-year old Edouard Herriot, former president of the Chamber of Deputies, is alive. There had been repeated reports that the famous pre-war statesman had died or been assassinated. Sauerwein said at an interview he had seen most of the pre-war leaders of France in the past few weeks an dthat most, like Herriot, were hopeful.

Sauerwein, who became prominent on the foreign edition of the Paris newspaper "Le Matin," said he fled to Portugal against the wishes of Pierre Laval, whom he described as "but a ghost when I left. He knew he would be taken to Germany and was absolutely finished."

Edouard Daladier (former Premier) "is probably better off" than Marcel Deat, a Minister of State in the Vichy Cabinet; Joseph Darnand, Secretary-General in the Vichy Cabinet, and Jacques Doriot, former member of the Chamber of Deputies and arch-collaborationist, he said.

Sauerwein said Deat, Darnand and Doriot would be taken to Germany, while Daladier, under the personal supervision of Hitler, "will be all right."

"I saw Georges Mandel (former minister in the pre-war cabinet) assassinated by the Vichy militia at Paris," Sauerwein said.

"When I last saw Herriot he was living in a cottage between Nancy and Chalons-sur-Marne under the care of a German doctor.

Sauerwein said General Maxime Weygand was in the Tyrol; former President Albert Lebrun was free after having been arrested; Joseph Paul-Boncour, former Premier, was also freed after a time under arrest; Georges Bonnet, former Ambassador at Washington and former Minister of Foreign Affairs and Justice, was living quietly in Paris; former Premier Leon Blum had been allowed to remarry and lives with his wife in Germany; Paul Reynaud, last Premier of independent France, and Andre Francois-Poncet, former Ambassador at Rome, were in prisons in Germany.

Tito Says Allies Plan Closer Tie With Partisans

Asserts Co-Ordination of Fighting Was Agreed on in Talks With Churchill

By Joseph Morton

Representing the combined American press

MARSHAL TITO'S HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 22 (Delayed) (AP).—Plans for much closer coordination of military operations by the Allied forces in Italy and the National Army of Liberation in Yugoslavia were worked out at the recent conferences among Prime Minister Churchill, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson and himself, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) said today. Joint operations by British and American ground troops might be expected on a growing scale in the near future, he said.

In addition to Churchill, Marshal Tito conferred with General Ira C. Eaker, commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces; Air Vice-Marshal William Elliott, commander of the newly formed Balkan Air Force; General Sir Harold R. I. G. Alexander, Allied commander in Italy; Brigadier General William J. Donovan, Director of the American Office of Strategic Services, and Dr. Ivan Subashitch, Prime Minister of the emigre Yugoslav government.

Tito said he considered his talks with General Donovan of particular importance, because it took a very long time in America for the truth about the real situation in Yugoslavia to become known.

He said that in his conference with Churchill an agreement was reached for increased shipments of armaments to the National Liberation Army.

Tito said that he and Subashitch reached complete accord on the use of the remaining units of the Royal Yugoslav Navy. Other agreements reached between the two related to the Yugoslav Army, Yugoslav gold deposits frozen abroad and the obtaining of assistance from the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Ultimate merger of the royal government and the National Liberation Committee, he said, is conditioned on three prerequisites: the degree to which the government works abroad in favor of the people and the National Liberation Army, to what extent this government will correct the mistakes made by previous governments hostile to the people and, when conditions warrant, to contribute still more to the unification of all national forces.

TITO GIFT FOR MAYOR

Marshal Tito's Headquarters, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Marshal Tito is sending his pistol—which he carried through three years of warfare in Yugoslavia's hills and mountains—to Mayor LaGuardia of New York as a token of his esteem.

NIGHT

Dr. Sava Kosanovic, Minister of the Interior in the new Cabinet of the Royal Government, who recently visited Marshal Tito at his headquarters, is carrying the gift.

In New York when he was appointed to his present post, Dr. Kosanovic was asked by Mayor LaGuardia to deliver a message expressing the Mayor's admiration of the Partisans' struggle.

Acknowledging the Mayor's long friendship toward the National Army of Liberation, Marshal Tito is sending back the pistol along with a reply.

Swedish Paper Reports Marshal Von Kluge Killed

NIGHT

Took Command of Nazi Armies on West Front July 6

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 26 (Saturday) (AP).—Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge has been killed, the newspaper "Dagens Nyheter" said today on the basis of information received from Germany. Circumstances of his reported death were not known here and the newspaper had no additional details.

[There was no immediate confirmation of this report in either Axis or Allied official quarters.]

Von Kluge, sixty-one years old, had held command of the German armies on the western front since July 6, when he succeeded Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt.

Nazis Give Army Two Months More

DAY

AUG 26 1944

Stockholm, Aug. 25 (AP)—Many Germans now give the German army only two more months in the struggle with Allied troops, but believe Nazi last-ditch fighters will drag the Reich through chaos for months after that, the newspaper Morgontidningen said today.

It quoted two Swedes newly returned from Berlin.

Another Swede, an engineer who lived in Stettin and Berlin for the last year, said Berliners called the collapse of the Germans around Paris and the capitulation of Romania the "beginning of the end," and openly expressed the hope for peace before winter.

JAP CRUISER PROBABLY SUNK

Five Medium Freighters Sent Down Near Celebes

DAY

AUG 26 1944

Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Saturday, Aug. 26 (AP)—Mitchell bombers, attacking at mast height, probably sank a Japanese light cruiser and destroyed five medium freighter-transports near Manado, northern Celebes, headquarters reported today.

The attack was made Thursday by the medium bombers hunting Japanese shipping withdrawing from the Philippines-Halmahera line.

When last seen, the cruiser had exploded in the stern, was blazing from end to end and had a 20-degree list. The communique said the warship was believed to be sinking.

2,000-3,000-Ton Ships

A headquarters spokesman said the freighter-transports averaged between 2,000 and 3,000 tons. Two other vessels of this class were damaged; an estimated 40 luggers and barges were riddled with machine-gun bullets.

All were at anchor off Manado, Japanese headquarters some 250 miles due west of Halmahera.

There was no interception, and all the Allied planes returned. This was the heaviest assault in weeks against shipping at Celebes.

Liberators Hit Halmahera

The gangling island has been named by Gen. Douglas MacArthur as one link in the curving supply line from the Philippines to Ceram behind which Japanese heavy shipping has been confined.

In another assault Thursday, Liberators hit Halmahera, southern steppingstone to the Philippines, with 59 tons of bombs. A big ammunition dump was blown up. The attack was centered around the Lolobata airdome area, in the northern part of the island. The Japanese again failed to offer interception to this fourth in a series of heavy raids on Halmahera.

156-Ton Raid Made

A significant 156-ton raid, heaviest yet loosed in harassed Halmahera, fell Wednesday on the important Galela Bay area on the northern arm of the enemy-held island obstructing Gen. Douglas MacArthur's return to the Philippines.

Galela Bay, one of several on the eastern side of sprawling Halmahera, is closest to the Philippines. It is but 300 miles to the southernmost point of that archipelago.

Virtually equidistant eastward is Sansapor, on the northwestern tip of Dutch New Guinea, where MacArthur's ground forces are poised for their next move.

Landing Held Repulsed

[A Tokyo radio broadcast reported Allied troops had landed Thursday on the Mapia (St. David) Islands, northwest of Sansapor and about 300 miles east of Halmahera, and had been driven off later. There was no mention of such a landing in MacArthur's Friday communique.]

Bivouac and dump areas in the Galela area were worked over "with good effect," MacArthur reported. Many buildings were destroyed and many fires started. The raid, lifting the bomb total dumped on Halmahera in three days to 400 tons, was unopposed.

Points To Philppines

The northern shoot of Halmahera points to the Philippines. Two of the other three peninsulas are like fingers becokoning to Allied forces at Sansapor. The fourth reaches toward Palau, eastern guardian of the Philippines, which is being hammered daily by MacArthur's bombers.

The northern tentacle is mountainous, as is all of Halmahera. Its ranges appear to be volcanic and rise to 5,000 feet, the highest point on the island.

Elsewhere in the vast Pacific war theater the latest reported actions followed the familiar pattern of air neutralization of Japanese island bases.

JAPANESE LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE IN SOUTH CHINA

NIGHT

CHUNGKING, Aug. 25 — (AP) The Japanese have launched a new drive northward from the neck of the Luichow peninsula in south China opposite Hainan island, and heavy fighting is in progress with both sides suffering considerable losses, the Chinese command announced tonight.

There was no immediate indication whether the new drive was merely another mopping up operation or the beginning of a more ambitious move—a thrust on the Kwangsi province city of Liuchow, 200 miles to the northeast, a junction of the Hunan-Kwangsi and Kwangsi-Kweichow railways. Capture of Liuchow would threaten several important air bases and neutralize Kweilin, provincial capital of Kwangsi, as the key center in the defenses of south China.

Reach Limkong

The new drive was launched from Suiki on Wednesday and by nightfall had reached the southern outskirts of Limkong, a junction of four highways.

AUG 26 1944

In central China fighting in the area between the Yangtze river port of Ichang and the Han river town of Shungsiang, 80 miles to the northeast, where the Chinese are engaged in diversionary operations against the Japanese, appeared to have increased in severity.

The High command said that the Chinese retook three points in the northeastern outskirts of Ichang Aug. 23. They progressed in the Chungsiang sector, but after battling their way into Kingshan, a Japanese stronghold 75 miles west and northwest of Hankow, withdrew after arrival of strong enemy reinforcements.

In Hunan province the Chinese continued their attacks south of Hengyang and forced the enemy in the Chekiang sector northwest of Hengyang to retreat toward the city.

Drive Southwestward

Reinforced Japanese at Siangsiang, about 60 miles north of Hengyang, pushed southwestward, possibly in a fresh attempt to outflank the Chinese forces of the Hengyang area, but they were checked.

Japanese trying to push further southward from Anjen, east of Hengyang, failed to make any progress. The Japanese at Liling, key stronghold 75 miles northwest of Hengyang, mounted a counter-attack against Chinese trying to retake the town, but the Chinese nevertheless recaptured one more point in the northeastern outskirts.

Chinese attacks on the Japanese stronghold of Tengchung in Yunnan province in southwest China continued with capture of seven pillboxes and advance to within 50 yards of the main northwest-southeast street.

Landing Of [illegible] On Mapia Reported

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Tokyo radio asserted today that Allied troops had attempted a landing on the Mapia (St. David) Islands off the northwest coast of New Guinea but had been repulsed.

There was no immediate report from Allied sources on any activity in the Mapias.

Northwest Of Schoutens

The Mapias are about 150 miles northwest of the Schouten group, which lie immediately off the New Guinea coast and are about 300 miles east of Halmahera, which has been a repeated target of Allied bombing attacks recently.

Halmahera is only 300 miles from the Philippines.

(The Federal Communications Commission quoted the Tokyo radio as saying that Allied troops actually had effected a landing in Mapia Thursday morning but had been driven off by noon. This version said the attackers had suffered "heavy losses.")

The Tokyo radio also said today a force of 28 carrier-based planes had raided the western coast of Japanese-held Sumatra yesterday morning.

An English-language broadcast directed to North America asserted Japanese ground forces had shot down two of the raiders. The transmission was recorded by FCC monitors.

Chinese Announce Gains In Tengchung

Chungking, Aug. 25 (AP)—Throwing one attack after another, Chinese troops have captured seven additional pillboxes and are approaching the main southwest-southeast street of Tengchung, last enemy city stronghold holding out in the Salween river-Burma road area of western Yunnan, the Chinese high command announced today.

Japanese attacks on the main Chinese positions on Sungshan Mountain, near the Salween river crossing of the Burma Road, were repulsed. Other Chinese forces are moving southward on Lungling proper from the ancient city of Lungling. American aircraft exploded several ammunition dumps in the town.

Japs' River Route In Hunan Attacked

Chungking, Aug. 25 (AP)—A Chinese column now is fighting in the vicinity of Chuting, on the Canton-Hankow railroad 45 miles north of Henghang, in an operation designed to jeopardize Japanese communications on the Siang river, main enemy supply route for their forces in Hunan province, a Chinese spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng, predicted the Japanese would start a large-scale drive in Hunan in about two weeks when regrouping is completed.

North of the Yangtze in the triangle bounded by the river ports of Shasi, Ichang and Chungsiang the Chinese were reported continuing their diversionary attacks on Japanese strongholds.

The Japanese were said to have rushed two divisions into the triangle area.

U. S. PLANES BLAST VOLCANO ISLANDS

DAY

U. S. PACIFIC HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 25. — (AP) Striking over a wide ocean front, bombers of the American Central Pacific command were reported by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz today to have blasted Japanese-held islands ranging from the Volcano group, some 700 miles south of Tokyo, to Nauru, west of the Gilberts.

Land based Army Liberators were free of Japanese interception as they bombed Iwo Jima, in the Volcanos, during the night of Aug. 23-24. Antiaircraft fire was meager.

In the Marianas the American fliers attacked Pagan and Tiny Agiguan Wednesday. Bombs were rained on gun positions, storage facilities and buildings. The raiding airmen reported several fires in the target areas.

Army and Navy bombers lashed Ponape, in the eastern Carolines, Tuesday and Wednesday, while Navy search planes attacked Nauru, the phosphate island.

Navy planes hit Wake Tuesday. Navy dive bombers, Army Liberators, and Marine fighters continued neutralization raids in the Marshalls.

AMERICANS BOMB ISLET IN MARIANAS GROUP

DAY

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 25 —(AP) Agiguan islet, a tiny Japanese troop refuge five miles south of American occupied Tinian island in the Mariannas, was bombed Wednesday by American planes for the second successive day.

A Pacific fleet press release today reported the attack. Gun positions, storage facilities and buildings were bombed, starting fires.

Since Agiguan previously had been reported uninhabited, it appears that the Japanese must have thrown up some defense installations there in the last few months.

Halmahera Raided.

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—The northernmost tentacle of Halmahera, pointing toward the Philippines 300 miles away, was raided with good effect Wednesday by Liberators which destroyed many buildings and spread fires in Japanese Bivouac and dump areas, headquarters reported today.

The 156 tons of bombs dropped constituted a record load for Halmahera which has been attacked almost daily this month by the far eastern air force, based on New Guinea and offshore islands.

On New Guinea, the few airfields in Japanese hands on the northwest tip were rendered useless by more than 200 Allied fighter and attack planes in day-long operations during which [illegible] pulsed.

[illegible] ninety tons of bombs were dropped.

Aground in various sectors of New Guinea, the killing of an additional 1,647 Japanese and capture of 207 others were reported.

At Pearl Harbor, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said last night in a broadcast to the United States that the Allies now control the major part of the Pacific Ocean and that Japan's self-styled co-prosperity sphere is being transformed into a "no-prosperity sphere."

Earlier, he had announced a raid Sunday on Paramushiro in the Kuriles, north of Japan, by Navy Ventura search planes which blew up storage areas, sank a small vessel, damaged another and shot down one of seven enemy interceptors.

Stilwell Repays Japs' Beating In Burma

NIGHT

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 25 (AP)—Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell totaled his account with the Japanese today and marked the first installment paid for the "hell of a beating" he admitted the Allies took in Burma in 1942.

An official recapitulation of the general's 1944 north Burma campaign disclosed that more than 10,000 square miles of territory were recaptured and more than 20,000 Japanese were killed.

"Similarities to the first Burma campaign but in the exact reverse are now appearing," said a Southeast Asia Command headquarters statement.

Equipment Retaken

"Equipment taken by the Japanese in the 1942 retreat was retaken and used by the Allies. British and American automobiles abandoned to the Japanese have been captured, repaired, and are now ready for our use again. British blankets and Australian anti-tank guns have been recovered.

"Even officers' supplies, among the items once ours and then used by the Japanese were finally taken."

Unfavorable weather slowed operations on all fronts and cut air activity to a minimum.

Further Progress Noted

A communique said that troops of the 14th Army made further progress toward Chindwin on the Tamu-Sittaung track, and that in Arakan active patroling continued in the coastal area and the Akladen Valley.

Fighter bombers scored five hits on the Pyingiang bridge between Yeu and Chindwin on the main line of the Japanese retreat.

10 Yanks End Long Trek In Burma Wilds

NIGHT

Southwest China, Aug. 24 (AP—Delayed)—One of the strangest American military missions of this war has just been completed—a six-month, 1,500-mile round trip through unsurveyed parts of upper Burma with Chinese guerrillas.

A young major from Mount Victory, Ohio—Edward O. Elliott—led the party, consisting of four officers and five enlisted men, back to a motor road on this side of the Salween river August 14.

The major had lost 25 pounds. The others all were down to fighting trim. All had gone through the mission without serious illness, although most of their time, except when shoveling their way through the snow-filled Chimeli Pass, was spent in malaria country.

15-Foot Snow Drifts

Drifts in that 13,451-foot-high pass were 6 to 15 feet deep when the Americans, possibly the only foreigners ever to make the rigorous crossing, dug their way through.

They were attached to the headquarters of a Chinese guerrilla division and were commissioned to provide intelligence and liaison for the outfit as well as medical care. They spent days giving the guerrillas typhus and smallpox inoculations and frequently patched up wounds of these hit-and-run raiders operating deep on the flank of the Japanese penetration of upper Burma.

The party set out from the Mekong river February 22 with 42 animals, including 12 riding horses, but after crossing the Salween they had to abandon the mounts. With a hand-operated radio they kept daily contact with their base headquarters. Efforts to supply the outfit by air had to be abandoned because the terrain was too hazardous for planes to fly low.

The radio set once went over a cliff with a pack animal. Communications finally were restored by the patchwork ingenuity of the radioman, Staff Sergeant Robert H. Chant, of Philadelphia, and the codeman, T/4 William L. Chaffin, of Huntington, W. Va.

The physician of the party was Major Sherburn M. Stanley, Asheville, N. C., and the executive officer was Capt. Thomas Wright, Ward, S. C. Others of the party were Lieut. Douglas A. Malcolm, Indiana, Pa., Staff Sergeant Robert LaPeyre, Great Falls, Mont.; and T/4 John E. Foil, Holmesville, Miss.

Technical Sergeant Matthew Noble, Ware, Mass., was with the party about two months, but was replaced by Sergt. George F. Burrows, of Fayetteville, N. C.

Reef Stymies Jeeps, But Not Yank Ingenuity

NIGHT

Agat Town, Guam, Aug. 25 (AP) (Delayed)—It took the vicious Coral Reef off the coast here to stop American Jeeps scramming for shore with other landing vehicles.

But American ingenuity saved the day. A tank lighter would approach the reef and drop its ramp. A jeep in the lighter was attached by a cable to an amphibious tractor and pushed into deep water with only the driver in it, sitting as high as possible.

The amtrac towed the jeep to dry land. Frequently, the jeep was completely submerged. Ashore, the motor was dried out and the vehicle driven off under its own power.

Merrill Upholds Marauders' Morale

Brigadier Says Temporary Break in Spirit of Jungle Fighters Was Petty Affair.

NIGHT

AUG 26 1944

Washington, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—The chief of Merrill's Marauders acknowledged today that there had been a temporary break in the morale of his celebrated jungle fighters in Burma but described it as a "storm in a teapot" which blew over in about ten days.

Brig.-Gen. Frank D. Merrill, just back from nearly three years' war in the Orient, told a news conference that the trouble began with misinterpretation of an order for reinforcements at Myitkyina which resulted in some convalescent Marauders being sent to the front.

Error Laid to Doctors.

"I don't know, but I do not believe any of those convalescent boys actually got into combat," he said. "I know of one plane load that went down to Myitkyina and the men came right back on the same plane. Our own doctors looked them over, and if any of our men were in action who should have been in the hospital, it was due to an error by our own doctors."

Nevertheless, said Gen. Merrill, the mistaken order caused an explosion when it came through. The Marauders had been in combat 100 days, carrying out three campaigns involving 750 miles of marching, five major battles and thirty-two minor engagements culminating at Myitkyina.

The local commander at Myitkyina, finding indications that the Japanese were bringing up reinforcements, asked Gen. Joseph Stilwell to send up as many men as he could. Gen. Stilwell issued an order for all men fit for full field duty, but by the time the order reached the area where the convalescent Marauders were in hospitals, it called for all men who were fit to walk.

Order Questioned.

"All the people there immediately questioned that order," said Gen. Merrill. "I was in the hospital myself at the time. I said that Stilwell never issued such an order. We checked it, and Stilwell said he had issued no such order—he ordered up only men fit for full field duty.

"Meanwhile, some of the convalescents were sent back. A lot of my men got very indignant. I was goddam indignant myself, but while these men of mine got pretty sore, I am positive that if we had asked for volunteers every one of them would have gone back. They have done a magnificent job, and they would be alarmed if they knew the uproar this thing has caused."

Gen. Merrill said that no promises as to the length of service or return to the United States were made officially to any units sent to India for his organization. He added, however, that it would be no surprise to him if some officers, speculating on the probable type of service and the rewards which might be expected, had said things which were overheard by the men and, in the course of time, became fixed in G. I. gossip as promises from the Government itself.

Regimental Organization.

The only authorized statement in advance to the men, he said, was that they would be volunteering for a "highly dangerous and hazardous" mission—they were not even told where they were going. But, he said, when the mistaken order came through during the battle for Myitkyina, "the men at the hospital got sore as hell—they started thinking of every goddam gripe they had ever had against everybody in particular, and it surged up all at one time and lasted about a week."

Gen. Merrill said that his unit formed an experimental combat organization and, as such, had to put up with all the headache he said such special units suffer in the Army. The principal trouble, he said, was that there was no standard table of organization and therefore no routine or established promotion system—no hope of advancement except by special dispensation from the high command on an individual basis. This, he indicated, is the principal reason for the reorganization of the Marauders now in progress. When they go back into action, he said, they will be a numbered regiment with a standard organization.

Asserting that the rotation policy has been applied to the Marauders, Gen. Merrill said that approximately 700 of them are returning to the United States, in addition to men sent back for wounds or illness.

Fraser Takes Far East Post

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Aug. 25 (AP).—Admiral Sir Bruce Austin Fraser has arrived by plane to assume his new post as commander of the British Far Eastern Fleet.

ARGENTINE RAIDS GERMAN SPY RING

NIGHT

Buenos Aires, Aug. 25 (A. P.).—Seventeen persons were under arrest here today on charges of espionage following a series of raids which the police said had smashed a highly organized spy ring in the employ of the German Government.

The head of the ring was described as a 30-year-old German radio specialist who came here secretly from Brazil when driven out of that country by counter-espionage activities. Eleven other Germans, two Argentine, a pole, a Spaniard and a Chilean were listed among the prisoners.

The police said that the spy ring originally was directed and financed by the German embassy here but had been operating independently since Argentina severed relations with Germany.

Large quantities of photographic, radio and other equipment were seized by the police.

250,000 NAZI PRISONERS ARE TAKEN IN FRANCE

DAY

AUG 26 1944

NEW YORK, Saturday, Aug. 26. (AP) The London radio said today in a broadcast heard by CBS that "it is unofficially stated that so far 250,000 German soldiers, among them 11 generals, have been made prisoners of war in France."

The broadcast said that up to last night "30,000 German prisoners of war were counted in southern France."

Romania To Pay $600,000,000?

New York, Aug. 25 (AP)—Charles Davila, former Romanian Minister to the United States and now personal representative of Romania's new Minister of State, said today he had been informed that terms of Romania's surrender included payment of $600,000,000 indemnity.

The surrender terms, Davila told a press conference he said he had learned, also provide that Romania shall cede Bessarabia and northern Bukovina to Russia, areas claimed by Russia as legally part of its territory for several years.

British Tank Throws Flames 450 Feet And Around Corners

DAY

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP)—The British tonight took secrecy wraps off the fire-breathing 41-ton Churchill "Crocodile," tank-mounted flame thrower capable of hurling its lethal blaze 450 feet ahead and even around corners.

The potent British weapon was introduced to the Germans at the Normandy beaches. Since then it has been used with what the British information services reported as "deadly effect" in burning a path for British and Canadian forces through Hitler's strong points in France.

The British supply council and army staff in the announcement of the new weapon called it the most powerful flame thrower in the world.

Flames Can Ricochet

Designed to burn out strong points of the Atlantic Wall and save infantry lives, the "Crocodile" uses a special new type of fuel. Its flames can be ricocheted off a nearby surface, in the manner of a billiard shot, to burn out pillboxes and trenches hundreds of feet away.

The flame gun is mounted on a standard Churchill tank, with the fuel carried in an armored trailer behind. The flame equipment can be jettisoned in case of need and the tank can operate thereafter as an orthodox Churchill, with no cut in firepower.

The announcement said the British first used flame throwers to put a coastal battery out of action in the Dieppe raid and have been working on their development ever since.

Learned From Enemy

Early experiments with an oil-flame defense improvised on the Kent beaches in 1940 when invasion appeared imminent, have contributed, along with information gained from captured enemy equipment.

One eminent British scientist, Dr. Frank Sturdy Sinnatt, hastened his death by his untiring efforts in development of flame weapons, the British information services reported. Many civilian and military workers suffered burns and injuries in the search for safe fuel and efficient projectors to put in the hands of troops.

The Germans got the benefit of it all on D-day at H-plus-35 hours when the Crocodiles, newly built, rolled ashore on schedule.

EUROPEAN VICTORY SEEN BY OCTOBER 1

NIGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP) October 1, 1944, is the Army's "tentative" date for finishing its job against Germany, Chairman Woodrum (D-Va.) told the House Postwar Military Policy committee today.

Rear Admiral James H. Irish, inventory control officer, indicated to the same committee that the Navy expects to be fighting in the Pacific at least through 1945.

President Roosevelt, meanwhile, declined to be drawn into the discussions of when the war may end, telling reporters at his news conference that he is about the only man who hasn't expressed an opinion.

Woodrum gave no amplification. Neither did he say what was the source of his information. He merely interjected into the questioning of Irish the statement that the army "tentatively" looks to Oct. 1 as the date for the end of the war against Germany.

Discussing supply needs in the Pacific, Irish told the committee:

"We are assuming that the war will proceed on at least until the end of 1945."

He said that "the successful prosecution of the Navy's war in the Pacific is being handicapped by the failure to obtain necessary ships, such as troop carriers, refrigerating ships, and other important parts of the shipbuilding program.

My, no, Mr. Roosevelt replied to a reporter who asked whether he could indicate when he expects the war in Europe to end. Asked how long he thought the Japanese war will go on after Germany is beaten the President said that is pure speculation.

GI AND HIS DOG GO TO HOSPITAL

Heroic "Sergeant Fleabite" Wins Monty's Recognition

DAY

New York, Aug. 25 (AP)—Thanks to General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, who understood the bond between a boy and his dog, "Sergeant Fleabite" sits beside Private Roy L. Mantooth, of Abilene, Texas, in a hospital in England, the British Information Service reported in a cable from London.

The "Sergeant"—a Pomeranian Spitz—twice saved his master's life in the battle for St. Lo and was later on the stretcher when the 28-year-old private was moved from the front with wounds.

At Montgomery's Orders

General Montgomery visited the hospital in France, saw the boy and his dog and personally ordered that they be allowed to remain together right back to England.

"I wouldn't take a million dollars for Fleabite," said Mantooth. "I had him in South Carolina at camp. We trained together and he learned to head for a foxhole during shelling. That's how he saved our lives. I and Private Glenn Smith from Ohio were watching the enemy behind a mound of dirt with Fleabite lying between us.

"Suddenly I felt Fleabite race across my shoulders. That was what he used to do when he heard an 88-mm. shell coming before we did. So I went right after him, Smith taking off in the opposite direction. After I hit the foxhole I looked back. That screaming minnie had hit right where we were lying."

PHOTOGRAPHER KILLED IN EUROPEAN THEATER

DAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 25—(AP) Harold W. Kulick, 28, specialist in airplane photography who was covering the European war theater for Popular Science monthly, has been killed in the crash of a B-26 in England, his widow, Mrs. Margaret W. Kulick, announced today.

Kulick was on his second mission over Paris when the bomber was hit by anti-aircraft fire. The plane managed to return to England, but crashed at its base, killing Kulick, the pilot and co-pilot, Mrs. Kulick said.

AUG 26 1944

She was forecasting a series of photographs of Paris, she declared, and after his first mission over Paris was not satisfied with the pictures he had taken and returned a second time.

A native New Yorker, Kulick was a frequent contributor on aviation subjects to general and aviation magazines.

Bobby Jones Returns To Home In Atlanta

DAY

Atlanta, Aug. 25 (AP)—Lieut. Col. Robert T. Jones, Jr., former golf champion, returned home today after six weeks in France and six months in England, where he served as an intelligence officer in the United States Ninth Air Force.

There were no parades or bands as in the days when he returned from golf battles that gave him four major championships in one year. His wife, three children, his father and a few close friends greeted him at a suburban station.

Jones joined the air forces as a captain in June, 1942. Now 42 years old, he has asked for discharge from the army under the 38-year-old regulation.

The former golf champion told O. B. Keeler, Atlanta Journal sports writer, he had no immediate plans beyond reporting to army authorities here. He said he had lost about 20 pounds, tipping the scales now at only 155.

JAPANESE ALLOW MONEY SENT TO U. S. PRISONERS

DAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP) The Japanese government has agreed to allow about $10 a month relief money to be sent to each American prisoner of war in the Philippines, the State department announced today.

Tokyo's agreement, received through the Swiss government, which will relay the funds from this country, came after negotiations begun early in 1942.

The funds must be sent by the Swiss through Japanese military channels, and the agreement applies also to captured American merchant seamen as the Japanese consider them prisoners of war, the Department said.

Similar funds have been going to interned American civilians in the Philippines since last fall, and the Swiss government has been asked to make similar arrangements—which the Japanese have indicated they will consider—to send relief funds to American prisoners of war and interned seamen and civilians in the Netherlands East Indies.

SENATE APPROVES WAR GOODS BILL

NIGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(AP) After attaching a provision that all receipts be used toward retirement of the national debt, the Senate tonight passed a bill for disposal of some $100,000,000,000 in government surpluses under a Congressionally-controlled eight-member board.

The measure, colliding head-on with a rival bill approved by the House last week vesting supervision over sales of war-accumulated excess goods in a single administrator, was approved without a record vote at a session attended by a bare quorum of 49 members.

Exactly that number participated in an earlier roll call vote in which the Senate rejected, 31 to 18, an "anti-profiteering" amendment to permit the government to take legal action against buyers of surplus goods where it was found that the purchasers made "excessive" profits in resales

Sponsored by Senators McKellar (D-Tenn.), Eastland (D-Miss.) and McFarland (D-Ariz.) as means of preventing what McKellar called "hornswoggling," the amendment called for suits or settlements to recover excess profits for the government.

The Senate's action today left prospects for final settlement of the surplus property disposal controversy squarely up to a small group of Senators and Representatives who probably will get together next week in an effort to iron out differences.

Only brief debate preceded acceptance of an amendment by Senator Wherry (R-Neb.) providing that revenues from the sale of surpluses go into a special debt retirement fund rather than into general treasury receipts.

"The American people are going to have to pay this huge war debt," Wherry said. "Whatever help we can give them, we should give them."

Plan Anglo-American Peace Trip

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP)—Representative Brook Hays, Democrat, of Arkansas, and Representative Walter H. Judd, Republican, of Minnesota, will leave early in September for England to confer unofficially with British parliamentary leaders on joint American and British responsibilities in the coming peace, Mr. Hays said today. The British Ministry of Information is making arrangements for the tour.

MAGNUSON DEFENDS KIMMEL AND SHORT

DAY

Congressman Curiously About Pearl Harbor Stories

Seattle, Aug. 25 (AP)—Representative Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.), on the telephone from Washington, D. C., tonight, told the Post-Intelligencer he had heard reports, both in Washington and on the West Coast, that at the request of the Japanese United States naval and aerial patrols had been curtailed in the Central Pacific at the time the Japanese struck Pearl Harbor.

The Congressman added he believed the Government ought to make immediate comment on the "persistent and widely circulated reports on the West Coast, purporting to tell the real story of Pearl Harbor."

Says Fleet Was Withdrawn

Briefly, Magnuson said in a statement to the Post-Intelligencer, he had heard the report that the fleet was withdrawn to Pearl Harbor and air patrols curtailed by the navy through the request of Saburo Kurusu, who during his talks with Secretary Hull declared his (Kurusu's) efforts toward peace were being thwarted by Japanese militarists, who pointed to the fleet and air patrols as indications to the Japanese people that the Americans would attack Japan shortly.

"The story is," he asserted, "that the Japs made a 'patsy' out of the State Department, contriving to have our fleet bottled up in Pearl Harbor where it could easily be dealt a death blow.

"Charge Needs Answer"

"I do not know whether this story is true or false, and I don't venture to speak for or against it. But I do think the charge ought to be answered promptly at Washington.

"The report on the West Coast, and I've heard it here in Washington, too, is that Kimmel (Admiral Husband E. Kimmel) was instructed to draw in the fleet, curtail air patrols and do everything else possible to dispel the notion that America was about to attack Japan. The report is that Kimmel was instructed to take all measures necessary to insure that the Japanese consulate at Honolulu would report to the Japanese Government that the fleet did not contemplate immediate action, which is—so the story goes—why some shore leaves were granted.

Defends Kimmel

"Although I am a Democrat, this report and this situation transcends purely party considerations and if the story is true, some of this heat should certainly be taken off Admiral Kimmel and General Short. On the other hand, if it is not true, then the report should be promptly scotched by an immediate and official denial here in Washington. The circulation of such reports as this is not healthy.

"Not only are these reports not healthy but they cause a lot of ill-founded rumors concerning the operation of the navy prior to Pearl Harbor."

RUBBER DIRECTOR BLASTS AT NELSON

DAY

Bradley Dewey Accuses WPB Head of 'Typical Washington Sniping'.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP) An angry new storm broke about Donald M. Nelson's head tonight shortly after the War Production Board chairman left for China with his agency still seething from the row which led to Charles E. Wilson's resignation as vice chairman.

Rubber Director Bradley M. Dewey accused the WPB head of "typical Washington sniping" in comment on the rubber program. It was, Dewey declared, the same sort of "sniping" that led to Wilson's resignation "and made many good Americans unwilling to give services that otherwise would be of value to the country in the conduct of the war."

Cites Senate Testimony

Dewey referred to Nelson's testimony to the Senate investigating committee, given last week but made public only yesterday.

While before the Senate committee, Nelson was asked about Dewey's recent announcement that the rubber program was completed and he would resign Sept. 1.

"It was completed, all but getting the tires," Nelson commented.

(Ample synthetic rubber now is being produced, officials say, but Army has complained that heavy tire production is lagging behind needs.)

"Then you don't agree that the job was completed?" asked committee counsel Rudolph Halley.

"No sir. It is like the Army saying they are completed except for the shooting," Nelson said.

The new outbreak came with Nelson's future role in war production clouded and J. A. Krug, appointed by President Roosevelt to run WPB in his absence, taking over with a strong hand.

Following a meeting late in the day with the various WPB vice chairmen, Krug told reporters he was "starting a new deal from here on out" and that he intended to "kill any sniping" right away.

He said that while none of the nine vice chairmen had asked to resign, he would not be a "bit surprised" if they did.

Asked if he had been given authority to clean house if he saw fit, Krug replied:

"What is the authority of the chairman?—to run WPB and that includes hiring and firing."

Krug said he had called the meeting to find out what the troubles of the vice chairmen were and to lay a blueprint for eliminating the difficulties.

Nelson's Future Uncertain

The uncertainty over Nelson's future arose from President Roosevelt's news conference statement that he did not know whether Nelson would continue as war production chief when he returns from China.

Dewey's sharp attack on Nelson was made in a statement which he said would be sent to the Senate committee. Copies were given to news reporters.

Dewey said that he had never stated that the job of providing tires was done, "but simply that the synthetic rubber plants are turning out more rubber than was currently being consumed.

"The problems of providing manpower and tire cords no longer require the broad special powers of the rubber director," Dewey said.

"They are of no value to the problem of manning the plants and providing the much needed tires. By presidential directive these were and are the responsibilities of the War Production Board and of the War Manpower Commission."

Army Discards Supplies Along Alcan Highway

NIGHT

Calls Material Not Worth Cost of Shipping Home, Although Still Serviceable

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Army reported today that large amounts of supplies and equipment are being abandoned along the Alaska highway because they are not worth the cost of shipping home.

The Army report was issued after charges were made in the Canadian House of Commons that Army engineers were destroying serviceable materials as they closed up approximately 150 camps along the Alcan Highway. Lieutenant General Brehon Somervell sent Colonel Curtis Pratt, of the Army Service Forces, to investigate.

Colonel Pratt's report, the department said, disclosed that supply dumps he inspected contained "large amounts of material not worth shipping home, but none the less still serviceable."

The salvage agreement with Canada, Colonel Pratt said, does not provide a practical method for selling such materials locally to private interests, and they have been left in Canada for final disposition.

A summary of Colonel Pratt's report made public by the War Department covered these points:

No buildings containing supplies were burned, and there was no evidence of the burning of any property except equipment officially condemned as of no further economic use.

The military situation at the time of construction made the highway project a rough job, and substantial amounts of automotive and construction equipment so damaged or worn as to be unrepairable on the spot were left along the route.

As construction was completed, maintenance equipment was set aside and action was started to collect all other equipment deemed valuable enough for salvage.

"It is unfortunately true that in some cases serviceable tires were not removed from abandoned construction equipment. On discovery of this fact immediate orders were issued for removal of such tires and their shipment back to the United States."

Return of surplus to the United States was limited to "critical materials and other property having value enough to justify cost of transportation." No critical materials were found in the dumps which did contain serviceable supplies.

Army Grants Socialist Plea

NIGHT

Washington, Aug. 25 (AP).—Responding to a contention that President Roosevelt's address on August 12 at Bremerton, Wash., was "political," the War Department today acceded to a Socialist party request for equal radio time to broadcast to soldiers overseas.

Further, the War Department said, correspondence embracing the Socialist party's request and its reply has been furnished to the other major political parties.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke at Bremerton from the deck of a destroyer on his return from a visit to Hawaii, where he conferred with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz, and t obases in the Aleutian Islands.

War Department Statement.

The War Department announcement was made in reply to a press inquiry. It said:

"The Socialist party has written the War Department that it definitely considers the President's speech of August 12 at Bremerton a political address and has requested the War Department, in accordance with Title V, Public Law 277, to give equal radio time for a Socialist party political address.

"The War Department has indicated to the Socialist party that, under the statute, it will accede to this request. The other major political parties have asked for and been furnished copies of the correspondence between the War Department and the Socialist party in this connection."

The text of the correspondence was not made public by the War Department.

Public Law 277 is the soldier vote law, and Title V, recently amended, is the section which governs the dissemination of political news and propaganda to troops under official sponsorship.

Ford Plant Strikers Refuse To Return, Boo Union Speaker

DAY

DETROIT, Aug. 25—(AP) The leadership of the CIO's United Auto Workers union apparently was faced tonight with another revolt of a portion of its membership.

Amid boos and catcalls at a union executive's back-to-work plea, strikers who quit work earlier today at the Ford Motor Company's Highland Park plant voted to stay off the job.

Some 6,000 employes were reported affected. Operations at the plant, which makes gears for aircraft engines, were halted.

An uproarious meeting tonight of Local 400, UAW-CIO, attended by about 500 strikers, drowned out Richard Leonard, union international regional director, when he asked for a return to work.

"Please, men and women," Leonard said, "return to your jobs for the sake of the union, the United States government and yourselves. Perserve the non-strike pledge for the sake of your country and the union."

The strikers responded with boos and shouted a clamorous "yes" when Herbert Hindmarsh, Local 400 president, asked for a vote on continuauce of the strike.

Thereupon Leonard said "you have repudiated your union by your actions."

FOREIGN POLICY TO BE DISCUSSED

DAY

Willkie, Asked to Call on FDR, Prefers Parley After Election

DAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—(AP) Wendell Willkie, saying that President Roosevelt has invited him to a conference, took the attitude today that he would prefer to wait until after the election.

Nothing definite has been done toward arranging a meeting.

Willkie, in New York, confirmed reports of the presidential invitation after Mr. Roosevelt, at his news conference here, said he had been in communication with Willkie.

The disclosures followed several days of rumors that the White House was making overtures to the 1940 G.O.P. presidential nominee for a conference on foreign policy.

The reports had attracted more attention from the standpoint of politics than from foreign affairs since Willkie has kept silent on war role, if any, he intends to take in the presidential election campaign.

Willkie left little doubt, however, that if he does see the President before his election their talks will be completely divorced from partisan matters.

After Mr. Roosevelt acknowledged in response to questions at his news conference that he had been in private contact with Willkie, the latter told newsmen in New York:

"It is true Mr. Roosevelt has written me asking that I confer with him. Naturally I would much prefer that no such conference occur until after the election. But if the President of the United States wishes to see me sooner, I shall of course comply. I have had no contact with Mr. Roosevelt other than the two letters which he wrote me."

That statement was interpreted here to mean that Willkie, as a citizen, would talk with the President, but that he did not want to have a conference with the Democratic candidate for the presidency.

AUG 26 1944

IN FALL CAMPAIGN

DAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 — (AP) John Foster Dulles, foreign affairs adviser to Republican presidential nominee Thomas E. Dewey, completed a series of three talks with Secretary of State Hull today and said there will be plenty of public discussion on foreign policy in the coming campaign.

Hull and Dulles announced they had agreed that the world security organization is a non-partisan subject, but Dulles stipulated that the arrangement does not preclude full discussion. He said he did so in order to leave no loophole for a charge of bad faith when Dewey talks about the peace organization.

Sees Public Discussion

Furthermore, Dulles told reporters before leaving for New York where he will see Dewey, that there will be "plenty of political discussion on many other aspects of foreign affairs, especially in regard to past conduct of foreign policy."

The joint Hull-Dulles announcement said the two agreed on "numerous aspects" of problems involved in an international security organization. Dulles said later that he found himself in general agreement with Hull, with "differences of emphasis rather than substance."

The two will meet again, the statement said, to continue exchanging views and keep Dewey up to date on the progress of the American-British-Russian postwar security talks at Dumbarton Oaks.

Dulles said he hoped that the talks would produce an "American Plan" rather than an administration plan for world peace.

Dulles said he added to the joint announcement a paragraph stating that Dewey shared Hull's view on keeping the peace agency out of politics "on the understanding, however, that it did not preclude full public non-partisan discussion of the means of attaining a lasting peace."

Dulles defined what he called the partisan approach which must be avoided.

"A partisan approach means an approach which is deliberately divisive of the American people or where you take a position as regards the future organization of the world which you may not honestly believe but think will get you votes."

Dewey Gives Copy

Dewey's adviser said he had been given a copy of the American plan for a peace organization now before the Dumbarton Oaks conference, but refused to disclose whether Russian and British plans are also among the documents he is taking to New York.

At Dumbarton Oaks, the conferees adjourned for the weekend, a communique stated, while the Secretariat prepares material for discussion next week.

"The general views of the three groups have been clarified in the initial presentations," it was announced.

Earlier, Secretary of State Hull gave a committee of seven Republican and Democratic Senators a resume of the conversations thus far. One Democrat said he thought progress was being made toward a bi-partisan understanding on post-war policy.

Dulles apparently shared the view, and said he thought weight would be given Governor Dewey's foreign policy ideas during the three-power deliberations.

WILSON RETURN TO G-E IS POSTPONED 2 WEEKS

DAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 25—(AP) The probable return of Charles E. Wilson to the presidency of General Electric Co., may be postponed for at least two weeks, it was indicated today, when the regularly scheduled monthly meeting of the directors was put over to Sept. 8.

Wilson resigned as vice chairman of the War Production board yesterday. Gerard Swope, former president who came out of retirement when Mr. Wilson was summoned to Washington, said at Syracuse last night he expected the former No. 2 man in the WPB would be returned to his post by the directors.

Directors of General Electric usually meet the last Friday in every month but the August meeting often is postponed. There are 15 directors residing in Eastern, Atlantic seaboard and Western states.

"I HAVE RELATIVES LIVING IN PARIS--SOME FRENCH COUSINS--AND I AM GOING TO SEE THEM FIRST THING," SAID CAPT. J.M.EVANS OF BURLINGTON, VT. "MY MOTHER IS FRENCH."

MAJ.RALPH L.LAFORGE, 210 DENISON ST., LITTLE ROCK, ARK., SHAVING AND DONNING A NEW OUTFIT, SAID "I AM CLEANING UP NOW SO I CAN MAKE A PRESENTABLE APPEARANCE--BUT NOT FOR THOSE MADEMOISELLES. I HAVE A WIFE AND TWO CHILDREN AT HOME. I WANT TO SEE THAT EIFFEL TOWER. I AM STRICTLY A TOURIST."

LT.ALBERT VANDEMAEL OF TUDOR CITY, NEW YORK CITY, SAID, "I WAS BORN IN BELGIUM AND SAW PARIS FIVE YEARS AGO. I JUST WANT TO CHECK UP ON THE QUALITY OF THE COGNAC."

PFC CHARLES HALLORAN, 303 FISK ST., PITTSBURGH, PA., SHOUTED, "I'LL BE HAPPY AS HELL. I WANT TO BUY SOMETHING NICE--FULL PARISIAN CHIC--FOR MY WIFE."

"I WANT TO FIND A NICE FULL PUB--FULL OF SOMETHING TO DRINK," LAUGHED SGT.WILLIAM CROSSO, 517 SEVENTH ST., BUFFALO, N.Y. "WE HAVE BEEN MIGHTY DRY EXCEPT FOR RAIN."

"OUTSIDE OF HITTING THE BEACHES ON D-DAY THIS IS GOING TO BE THE MOST EXCITING THING THAT EVER HAPPENED TO ME," SAID PFC RICHARD SOPCZYNSKI OF SOUTH BEND, IND.

LT.GEORGE SHELDON OF NORWALK, CONN., FORMER REPORTER ON THE KANSAS CITY STAR, SAID, "I WISH I WERE GOING IN AS A NEWSPAPERMAN RATHER THA AS A SOLDIER. IT'S THE SECOND BIGGEST STORY OF THE WAR. THE BIGGEST WILL BE OUR ENTRY INTO BERLIN."

PVT.ARTHUR W.CORBIN OF WAYNESVILLE, N.C., SAID, "I AM GOING TO LOOK UP A FRENCH TARHEEL WITH A NORTH CAROLINA ACCENT--MAYBE I CAN UNDERSTAND HER."

PFC OSCAR STRACK OF KINGFISHER, OKLA., SAID, "PARIS DON'T STACK WITH OKLAHOMA, BUT IT BEATS THAT HEDGEROW COUNTRY. WE CAN'T GET IN IT TOO QUICK FOR ME."

"TAKING PARIS IS AS IMPORTANT AS OUR LANDING IN FRANCE--THAT'S THE WAY THE FRENCH PEOPLE FEEL ABOUT IT AND WAY I FEEL TOO," SAID LT. HARLAN RUSKEL OF JACKSON, MINN.

WARRANT OFFICER NORBERT ADELBERGER, 2917 NASHVILLE ST., EL PASO, TEX., SAID, "I AM TICKLED TO DEATH. I ALWAYS WANTED TO SEE PARIS.

WHO DOESN'T."

PVT.HARRY BOYTON OF MOUNTAINSIDE, N.J., SAID, "I NEVER REALLY DREAMED I'D LIVE TO SEE PARIS--I HOPE IT ISN'T A NIGHTMARE NOW."

SGT.PAUL MUEHL, 2552 NORTH 39TH ST., MILWAUKEE, WIS., SAID, "I WANT TO SEE PARIS BEFORE IT'S ALL TORN UP. I HOPE THE GERMANS HAVEN'T RUINED IT. IF THEY HAVE WE'LL FIX UP BERLIN FOR THEM."

SGT.ARNOLD M. BLONS OF MINOT, N.DAK., SAID, "LOOK OUT, HERE WE COME, PARIS! I WANT TO SEE A PRETTY GIRL IN SILK STOCKINGS AND THEN I WANT TO BUY ER A DRINK."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE FRENCH-OPERATED RADIO DIFFUSION DE LA NATION FRANCAISE IN PARIS TODAY (FRI) MADE PUBLIC FOR THE FIRST TIME DETAILS OF THE SECRET UNDERGROUND ORGANIZATION OF THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR WHICH IT SAID HAS "FOR FOUR YEARS BEEN FIGHTING GERMAN OPPRESSION INSIDE FRANCE."

THE BROADCAST, REPORTED TO THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION BY THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, SAID "THE INSURRECTION BROUGHT INTO THE LIMELIGHT DESIGNATIONS AND NAMES OF MOVEMENTS FAMILIAR TO THE MILITANT MEMBERS OF THE RESISTANCE, BUT LESS KNOWN TO THE WORLD AT LARGE." AUG 26 1944

"THE COUNCIL OF NATIONAL RESISTANCE IS THE SUPREME RESISTANCE ORGANIZATION," SAID THE BROADCAST. "ALL PARTIES AND ALL RESISTANCE ORGANIZATIONS, TOTALING 33, ARE REPRESENTED IN THE COUNCIL.

"THE DELEGATION OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC SITS BESIDE THE COUNCIL. IT IS COMPOSED OF A STATE COMMISSIONER GENERAL DELEGATE, ASISTED BY MANAGERS CORRESPONDING TO THE VARIOUS MINISTERIAL DEPARTMENTS SUCH AS INFORMATION, YOUTH, JUSTICE, AND SO FORTH.

"THE MILITARY ACTION COMMITTEE, APPOINTED BY THE COUNCIL FROM MEMBERS OF RESISTANCE ORGANIZATIONS, PRESIDES OVER MILITARY ACTION AND HAS UNDER IT THE NATIONAL GENERAL STAFF OF THE FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR (FFI) AND A NATIONAL MILITARY DELEGATE. THE TWO LATTER AUTHORITIES ACT IN CLOSE CONTACT." AUG 26 1944

THE CHIEF RESISTANCE ORGANIZATIONS GROUPED IN THE FFI, THE BROADCAST SAID, ARE THE FRANCS-TIREURS AND FRENCH PARTISANS, THE LIBERATION FREE CORPS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF RESISTANCE AGAINST THE ARMISTICE.

POLITICAL PARTIES AND ORGANIZATIONS REPRESENTED IN THE COUNCIL OF NATIONAL RESISTANCE, THE BROADCAST CONTINUED, INCLUDE THE COMMUNIST PARTY, THE SOCIALIST PARTY, THE POPULAR DEMOCRATIC PARTY, THE "RE-CONSTITUTED RADICAL SOCIALIST PARTY," THE DEMOCRATIC ALLIANCE, THE REPUBLICAN FEDERATION AND THESE "SYNDICAL" OR LABOR ORGANIZATIONS--THE GENERAL CONFEDERATION OF LABOR AND THE CLANDESTINE FRENCH CONFEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

AUG 26 1944

ALSO OPERATING HAS BEEN A COMMITTEE OF ACTION IN DEFENSE OF EMIGRES, WHICH INCLUDES RESISTANCE ORGANIZATIONS OF FOREIGNERS RESIDENT IN FRANCE, THE BROADCAST SAID. THIS "DOES NOT DEPEND DIRECTLY ON THE COUNCIL OF NATIONAL RESISTANCE, BUT WORKS UNDER ITS CONTROL," IT WAS EXPLAINED.

(ADVANCE)..THE GERMANS ENTERED PARIS ON JUNE 14, 1940, IN A LIGHTNING CONQUEST OF FRANCE THAT STUNNED A WORLD WHICH THOUGHT THE FRENCH ARMY AND THE MAGINOT LINE INVINCIBLE.

THEY GOOSE-STEPPED UP THE BROAD CHAMPS ELYSEES AND UNDER THE ARC DE TRIOMPHE BUILT BY NAPOLEON. HITLER CAME AND GLOATED ATOP THE EIFFEL TOWER.

AUG 26 1944

THE GERMAN OCCUPATION FORCES SOUGHT TO WIN THE FRENCH TO THEIR SIDE, NEEDLING THEM WITH PROPAGANDA THAT THE DEMOCRACY OF THE THIRD REPUBLIC WAS DECADENT AND THAT FRANCE HAD A PLACE IN THE GERMAN NEW TOTALITARIAN ORDER. A SMALL MINORITY WHICH ALWAYS HAD BEEN FASCIST-MINDED COLLABORATED, BUT THE MASS OF PEOPLE IN PARIS AND THE REST OF FRANCE SILENTLY AND HOPEFULLY AWAITED THE DAY OF LIBERATION. A VAST UNDERGROUND ARMY WAS ORGANIZED THROUGHOUT FRANCE.

THE ALLIES, RETURNING TO PARIS, FOUND A CITY THAT HAD BEEN REBELLIOUS AND HUNGRY DURING MORE THAN FOUR YEARS OF NAZI CAPTIVITY, AND DELIRIOUSLY GAY OVER DELIVERANCE FROM A YOKE THAT HAD FAILED TO CHOKE THE GALLIC SPIRIT AND KEEN HUMOR. OUTWARDLY IT WAS MUCH LIKE THE LOVELY CITY THAT AMERICANS KNEW AND SANG ABOUT IN NOSTALGIC SONGS AFTER ITS FALL.

IT WAS A CITY THAT HAD EXPERIENCED FOUR YEARS OF QUEUEING UP FOR FOOD, CYCLING OR WALKING TO WORK, CURFEW HOURS, FIRING SQUADS, BLACK MARKETS AND THE STRUTTING OF NAZI OFFICERS WHO MONOPOLIZED THE BEST HOTELS, THE BEST SHOWS AND ALL THE COMFORTS THAT PRE-WAR PARIS HAD ENJOYED.

PARIS HAD SUFFERED FROM ALLIED AIR RAIDS AGAINST GERMAN TARGETS WITHIN THE AREA OF THE CAPITAL--SUCH AS THE RENAULT WORKS AND LE BOURGET AIRFIELD. GERMAN RADIO BROADCASTS PERHAPS HAD EXAGGERATED CIVILIAN CASUALTIES, WHICH WERE ESTIMATED IN THE THOUSANDS. BUT PARIS HAD SUFFERED MORE THAN IN WORLD WAR I WHEN THE GERMANS BESIEGED THE CITY FROM A DISTANCE OF 20 MILES AND FIRED SHELLS FROM LONG-RANGE GUNS THAT LEFT SCARS STILL VISIBLE ON SOME OF THE MELLOW GRAY BUILDINGS.

SINCE THE GERMAN OCCUPATION PARIS, WHOSE PRE-WAR POPULATION WAS 2,829,746, HAS BEEN VIRTUALLY A GHOST CITY, ITS YOUNG MEN PRISONERS OF WAR IN GERMANY, CHILDREN EVACUATED TO THE COUNTRYSIDE, MONUMENTS STANDING LIKE STAGE SCENERY AT THE END OF A PLAY READY TO BE PACKED AND CARTED AWAY. LACK OF FUEL SHUT DOWN THE METRO (SUBWAY) SYSTEM. THERE WAS NO GASOLINE TO OPERATE THE BIG GREEN BUSES OR TAXICABS.

DURING THE OCCUPATION THE PARISIANS PULLED INTO A SHELL. THEIR RELATIONS WITH THE GERMANS WERE USUALLY CORRECT AND POLITE, BUT THERE WAS A FRIGIDITY THE GERMANS COULD NOT MISTAKE. AT STREET-SIDE CAFES THE PARISIANS SAT APART FROM THE GERMANS.

THE GERMANS CARRIED ON THEIR CUSTOMARY ANTI-SEMITIC CAMPAIGN, ROUNDING UP THOUSANDS OF JEWS WHO WERE SENT AWAY TO CONCENTRATION CAMPS. A PUPPET PRESS FOLLOWED THE NAZI LINE. WHEN THE GERMANS ORDERED ALL JEWS TO WEAR BLACK AND YELLOW STARS AS IDENTIFICATION,

A162

AUG 26 1944

GALLIC HUMOR HAD ITS ANSWER. NON-JEWISH PARISIANS BLOSSOMED OUT WITH BLACK AND YELLOW BREAST 'KERCHIEFS.

POLICE RAIDS BECAME ROUTINE AS THE GERMANS SOUGHT TO STIFLE THE DEVELOPING UNDERGROUND ARMY. YOUTHS WERE ROUNDED UP FOR FORCED LABOR IN GERMAN WAR FACTORIES.

REPRISAL EXECUTIONS WERE FREQUENT. FIFTY PARISIANS WERE SHOT FOR THE KILLING OF ONE NAZI LIEUTENANT. BUT STERN NAZI MEASURES DID NOT PREVENT SABOTAGE.

PARIS MADE SOME SEMBLANCE OF KEEPING UP THEATRICAL ACTIVITIES AND CULTURAL LIFE. SACHA GUITRY PRODUCED NEW PLAYS. THE WELL TO DO TRIED TO KEEP UP AN APPEARANCE OF GAIETY. BUT A GOOD PRE-WAR MEAL COST 20,000 FRANCS (NOMINALLY $400).

FASHION DESIGNERS ATTEMPTED TO KEEP THEIR CONCERNS GOING BY CREATING NEW STYLES WHICH FOUND AN OUTLET THROUGH SWITZERLAND.

MOST OF PARIS' FAMOUS ATTRACTIONS ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ESCAPED DAMAGE DURING THE OCCUPATION. THE EIFFEL TOWER, AT ONE TIME REPORTED SCRAPPED TO PROVIDE THE NAZIS NEEDED METAL, STILL STANDS. OTHER SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS ARE THE FAMOUS BOULEVARDS, THE MANY BRIDGES AND SQUARES; THE FORMAL PARKS, THE TUILERIES GARDENS, THE BOIS DE BOULOGNE; THE FINE CHURCHES OF WHICH NOTRE DAME IS BEST KNOWN; NOTABLE BUILDINGS INCLUDING THE LOUVRE, THE HOTEL DES INVALIDES, THE PANTHEON, THE PALAIS ROYAL AND THE OPERA.

MOST FAMOUS OF THE SQUARES AT THE PLACE DE LA CONCORDE, WHERE MARIE ANTOINETTE WAS EXECUTED, AND THE ARC DE TRIOMPHE DE L'ETOILE ON A SUMMIT AT THE END OF THE CHAMPS ELYSEES. UNDER THIS ARCH FRANCE'S UNKNOWN SOLDIER OF WORLD WAR I IS ENTOMBED.

DURING THE OCCUPATION, THE CUSTODIANS OF THE SHRINE WERE FINED 6,000 FRANCS FOR EXCEEDING THE GAS QUOTA ALLOTTED FOR THE FLAME BURNING OVER THE TOMB. BUT THE NAZIS NEVER DARED EXTINGUISH THIS FLAME.

GERMANS IN FULL RETREAT TOWARD REICH'S BORDERS

Headquarters Warns Frontier Provinces to Prepare to Become War Theater.

NAZI LINES RIPPED

British Force Crossing of Seine at Vernon, Allies Close in for Kill.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Sunday, Aug. 27.—(AP) The Allied armies, having broken across the Seine river barrier on a 200-mile front, herded the once-indomitable Germans before them today in a battle of pursuit that swirled steadily nearer to the Reich's frontiers.

"The elimination of the German Seventh army as a fighting entity has decided the battle of France," declared Supreme headquarters in warning the little duchy of Luxembourg and the French frontier provinces of Alsace and Lorraine that they soon "may become a theater of war."

"What there is left of the Germans in northwest France is hanging like meat on a butcher's hook, waiting to be cut down," said a high officer at British field headquarters.

Fight Along Seine

Southeast of Paris there was brisk fighting on the northeast bank of the Seine between the American bridgeheads at Corbeil and Melun as the enemy strove to delay the American advance.

The ragged remnants of the Germans remaining on the southwest bank of the river at its mouth were frenziedly trying to cross in daylight as Canadian and Belgian troops closed inexorably in for the kill.

But all the German efforts were of a sporadic nature born of the knowledge of their ultimate futility.

Only the harried survivors of the Normandy debacle and a handful of divisions of the once-mighty 15th army guarding the rocket coast stood before the Americans, British and Canadians surging across the Seine over at least six bridgeheads northwest and southeast of Paris.

The British in a spectacular 40-mile forced march in six hours forced a crossing of the Seine at Vernon, ten miles northwest of the strong American bridgehead at Mantes, and turned loose another powerful force against the Germans scrambling from their channel forts.

And these forces—Supreme headquarters said they now were capable of fighting only delaying actions from here on into Germany—were being pounded night and day by swarming warplanes whose pilots said they were in full retreat toward Belgium and the Rhine.

Luftwaffe In Action

The German air force, possibly sensing that the game is up in France and these forces may have trouble even reaching Germany, threw its planes into some of the greatest aerial battles since D-day and lost 93 Friday, most of them in northwestern France.

Few enemy planes were sighted today, indicating that the groggy German air force no longer can keep up such furious infighting.

The big port of Le Havre was being abandoned by land and sea, huge convoys were on the move from Rouen and Dieppe toward Amiens and Reims, and pouncing Allied warplanes shot up 56 more tanks and 549 vehicles in the last 24 hours.

Scores of motor vehicles and railroad cars were blasted by fighters returning from escort duty today.

The Germans, with the Seine bridgehead threatening them with encirclement, were pulling out of the formidable channel fortifications from which they expected to drive the invaders back into the sea, and from the robot roosts from which bombs have been hurled at England.

The Allied drive menacing Pas-De-Calais, nest of the flying bombs, coincided with a lull in the attacks on London and southern England, indicating that already this thrust might be paying dividends.

There was every indication that the Germans, filling the air with guesses of Allied intentions, were unaware where the next heavy blow might fall, and official silence on the progress of the fighting beyond the Seine was calculated to add to their confusion.

The battle to annihilate the last enemy troops still south of the Seine roared toward a climax, with the river crossings and the 10 by 25-mile area still held by the en under a fearful pounding fr massed artillery and patrolling fighters and fighterbombers.

Hundreds of miles west, the all-out battle for the huge port of Brest was begun. Infantry attacked after hundreds of bombers and naval forces headed by the famous British battleship Warspite had hammered the fortifications.

Besieged for 3 Weeks

This port on the tip of the Breton peninsula, has been under siege for more than three weeks, but now apparently forces are available to crack its defenses so it can again assume its role of a quarter of a century ago—the feeding and supplying of an American Expeditionary force in France.

Supreme headquarters said bridgeheads were bolstered at Corbeil, Fontainbleau and Montereau, from 15 to 45 miles southeast of Paris, and the final capture of Melun, 25 miles southeast, after a hard battle, strengthened a fourth.

Substantial American forces are known to be loose in this area and so far have battered down such opposition as they found. They are about 130 miles south of the German border at the Saar.

(DNB, the German News agency, speculated that these prowling columns might move north to protect the east flank of Allied forces driving on the rocket coast, might head for the Saar or keep on east to link with Allied forces moving up from southern France.)

The liberation of Marigny-Le-Chatel, between Troyes and the bridgehead positions, was announced in Supreme headquarters' communique.

The Americans have one strong bridgehead northwest of Paris, near Mantes, which they have constantly solidified against the heaviest enemy attacks, and the Germans say they have another near Elbeuf, 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine.

AUG 27 1944

Border Provinces Warned

What lies ahead for the Germans, either in retreat all the way to Germany or should they risk a stand somewhere along the old world war one battlefields of the Marne and Somme rivers, was indicated in Supreme headquarters warnings to the peoples living along the Reich frontier.

A member of the Supreme headquarters staff, broadcasting to the duchy and the provinces annexed to Hitler's Reich, declared:

"The rear communications of the remnants of the German army retreating into Germany will be subjected to bombing as devastating as that which preceded and accompanied the Allied campaign in Normandy."

He warned them to keep away from roads, rails and canals, military depots, camps and factories working for the Nazis—in fact to stay away from all Germans, take to the countryside with emergency supplies and stay there until the tempest of attack is over.

In a last frantic efforts struggles south of the Seine possibly 35,000 to 40,000 German troops and some armor still were trying to get across the river and were suffering terrible losses, a front line dispatch said.

The line of the pocket runs from Elbeuf, 25 miles from the Seine mouth, west six miles to Bourgtheroulde, thence 16 miles west and slightly north to Pont-Audemer and thence about 10 miles northwest to the mouth of the river near Honfleur.

A whirlwind Canadian First army advance carried to the Seine about eight miles southeast of Elbeuf, firmly cementing its junction with the Americans already along the Seine in this area.

Other Canadian infantrymen closed on Boughtheroulde, which is four miles from the Seine and 12 miles southwest of the enemy's main evacuation port of Rouen. Americans were within eight miles of Rouen.

"The Germans have thrown everything behind in trying to get across the Seine in daylight," a senior Canadian officer said.

They were trying to get across on anything that would get across, and some were swimming, but vigilant air patrol was dealing heavy punishment. Sixty-one barges and four small vessels packed with troops were sunk or damaged yesterday.

10,000 NAZIS YIELD IN PARIS

City Gets Down To Work After Night Of Celebration

DAY

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 26 (AP)—The last enemy machine gun was stilled in Paris tonight, French and American infantry stalked the last few stragglers and snipers, and even the Germans admitted they had cleared out of the capital which they had held under an iron rule since the first summer of the war.

The German garrison in Paris that surrendered to the American corps commander and the French Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc was estimated at 10,000 men.

One German strong point still held out in the Champigny sector five miles east-southeast of Paris and there was sporadic fighting with some small groups of Germans in the northeastern and northwestern suburbs. Isolated snipers were being hunted down.

Food For Hungry Parisians

As the military cleaned out the last resistance, French political leaders moved in to reorganize the Paris Government, and Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's forces began the great task of helping to feed and run the city.

Food stocks enough to feed Paris for ten days were on the way to a population which had hungered since it rose last Saturday against the German garrison and bring the fight for freedom to a swift conclusion.

Shots Greet De Gaulle

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, long the symbol of resistance in the minds of the French, walked down the Champs-Elysees today and a shot rang out as he arrived at Notre Dame Cathedral, the Free French radio at Paris said.

There was an answering volley, but the shot was reported to be an accidental one, and the crowds remained calm.

The first 3,000 tons of food arrived in Allied convoys, and French authorities began organizing to feed the population in communal restaurants.

Newspapers Reappear

A dozen different newspapers reappeared in Paris, including such well-known prewar names as Figaro, Oeuvre and Populaire.

[French Forces of the Interior were heard broadcasting over the Vichy radio that they had liberated the seat of French puppet government and food was on the way, the Federal Communications Commission reported.]

Even as the final shots of liberation echoed through the city last night, Paris threw itself into a carnival of celebration that equalled any in its long and often gay and often turbulent history.

Thousands Surge Into Streets

Hundreds of thousands of Parisians, enjoying their first night of liberty in more than four years, surged into the streets.

"La Marseillaise," the fighting national anthem, resounded along the Place de la Concorde and out through the radiating streets.

Shots sounded in every quarter. Some were from guns blazing at Germans who ignored the orders of their own commander to surrender, but mostly they were fired into the air in sheer joy of freedom.

Then Paris awoke this morning and went to work at the job of rehabilitation and to erase the scars of war, which despite the savagery of the last days of fighting were not so severe as first feared.

Smoke From Versailles Palace

Black pillars of smoke towered on the west, where a wing of the Versailles Palace still burned, and in all other directions around the edge of the city where the military forts blazed after being put to the torch by Germans who realized that their days in the capital were done.

The greatest damage was to buildings in the Luxembourg Gardens, where the Germans made their final main stand yesterday. The Senate Building was badly blasted, and some German bodies still lay in the streets.

But workmen were clearing away the cobblestone and sandbag barricades and clearing the streets of the debris of street battles.

Bullet holes scarred the venerable facade of the Chamber of Deputies, where for an hour yesterday afternoon 400 Germans barricaded themselves and made the last important stand in all Paris until flushed by French tanks. Cannon had torn breaches in the walls of the President's Palace.

Napoleon's Tomb Spared

The fighting spared the Invalides, where Napoleon's Tomb is located and where Adolf Hitler come in his hour of triumph in 1940 to gaze at the shrine of the Corsican he sought to imitate.

The American Embassy also was undamaged and the Stars and Stripes floated from the Eiffel Tower's tip alongside the Tricolor and the Union Jack.

American-made military vehicles, tanks and jeeps, were parked in the streets and crowds who knew of them only by radio reports came to stare.

Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball said Parisians looked well fed, and if there was any starvation it was not apparent among the hundreds of thousands who turned out to welcome the liberating armies.

Signing Of Surrender Order

The final order of unconditional surrender was signed at 6 P. M. yesterday in the baggage master's office of the Montparnasse railroad station.

Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz, commander of the German garrison in Paris, faced General Leclerc and signed the order of surrender. It was taken to German officers throughout the city under escort of American, British and French officers in jeeps.

General de Gaulle later visited the station, but did not see Choltitz.

The paunchy, slick-haired German general later surrendered personally to the American corps commander, under whom Leclerc's second French armored division fights.

SS Troops Pull Out Ahead

One German colonel said that all the SS (elite) troops had pulled out of Paris two weeks ago, leaving the regular army garrison to face the music of a rampaging population and Allied armor.

There was some fighting late yesterday near the Arc de Triomphe, when some Germans took refuge in the Hotel Majestic and two near-by buildings.

While women stood by and cheered them on, French infantry and machine-gun crews charged.

German Radios Change Tune

The German radios, which had been denying news of surrender of the French capital, changed their tune later today. The Berlin radio introduced a war correspondent as "one of the last who left town obeying orders of the German high command."

[Radio France at Algiers said that "all political prisoners" in Paris had been freed on de Gaulle's orders and families of workers deported to Germany would receive immediate support. The broadcast to French areas was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.]

Denies Armistice With Patriots

The capture of von Choltitz was considered a particular military triumph since he had commanded the 84th German Corps which Allied troops had battled all the way from Cherbourg to Paris. He took command of the Paris garrison 14 days ago.

Von Choltitz denied there had been an armistice with Patriot forces, asserting there was nothing but an "arrangement" whereby the Germans would move troops in and out of the city in return for permission for the French to bring food into the city.

This was at variance with the Patriots' statement that an armistice had been violated by the Germans who sought it.

Sporadic Fighting In Suburbs

There was also sporadic fighting by groups of Germans in the city's northeastern and northwestern suburbs, and a number of isolated snipers were at large, it was announced.

Heavy fighting was reported in progress at the seaport of Brest, although there was no immediate change in the situation, headquarters said.

Germans Pushed Back Toward Somme Line

Allied Headquarters, France, Aug. 26 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces were driving northward and eastward on a 200-mile-wide front toward Germany and Belgium today on the heels of fleeing Germans who apparently were trying to get out of France.

The Seine had been crossed at half a dozen places.

As Allied columns drove powerfully onward, supreme headquarters warned the people of the border provinces of Alsace-Lorraine and the Duchy of Luxembourg that war "very soon" may reach their lands.

Bridgeheads Strengthened

Four bridgeheads southeast of Paris were strengthened for this eastward assault upon Germany. West of Paris Allied armies whittled on perhaps 40,000 Germans trapped near the Seine's mouth, slashing their dwindling ranks with artillery shells.

"The elimination of the German Seventh Army as a fighting entity has decided the Battle of France," supreme headquarters asserted in broadcasts warning the residents of Alsace-Lorraine and Luxembourg to prepare for approaching battles.

Only Delaying Action

German survivors of the Falaise and Seine traps "can at best fight a series of delaying actions on their retreat into Germany," the order added.

American troops already have struck across the Seine northwest of Paris, in spearheads that can slice to the Pas-de-Calais robot bomb coast and to Belgium.

Southeast of Paris, officially described as fairly quiet but with some mopping up continuing, American troops liberated Melun, 23 miles away, after a hard battle.

Push Toward Marne

(A London broadcast heard by CBS reported Americans pushing northeast toward the Marne on roads leading to Reims, Metz and Nancy.)

The bridgeheads over the Seine were built up near Melun, at Corbeil, 15 miles below the capital, and at Fontainebleau and Montereau, 32 and 40 miles southeast of Paris.

Other United States units captured Marigny le Chatel, 15 miles northwest of Troyes. The latter town is 130 miles from the German frontier.

German remnants near the Seine mouth were compressed into a pocket now only ten miles deep and were raked by medium artillery. Their river escape was constantly patrolled by Allied planes, which in 48 hours wrecked 93 planes, 549 vehicles and 28 ships. Sixty-one barges and four larger ships were wrecked or damaged.

Canadians At Seine

Canadians driving eastward 20 miles reached the Seine banks beyond Louviers and joined Americans at Elbeuf below Rouen. Here they could strike between a loop of the Seine at Rouen straddling the Seine.

Allied advances near the Seine mouth below Le Havre were slower against more stubborn resistance.

Some 300 miles west of the main front, ground, sea and air forces drove in to crush the resistance at Brest, port on the western tip of Brittany. RAF bombers poured down 1,350 tons of bombs on Brest's defenses last night. Up to 250 Liberators and Flying Fortresses assaulted similar targets today.

Warspite Shelled Port

For two hours yesterday the great battleship Warspite poured 15-inch shells into Brest, crumbling enemy gun emplacements into impotence. This bombardment was termed the most concentrated ever made in this war by a single British battleship.

(A Swiss frontier report reaching London said the Germans were withdrawing from the French city of Belfort, near Switzerland's northern border and were "taking up positions along the Siegfried Line" in Germany. A dispatch from a Swiss newspaper's correspondent in Belfort said the Germans were moving toward Mulhouse, 24 miles to the northeast and only 10 miles from the Rhine.)

(The London News Chronicle carried an unofficial and unconfirmed report that the Americans were at the cathedral city of Reims, 85 miles northeast of Paris and 15 miles north of the Marne. The London Herald said a German DNB agency broadcast had reported the Americans were in Reims. Major listening posts in London, including the Associated Press, did not record such a statement from DNB.)

United Nations troop teams were rapidly liquidating the German pocket below the Seine, now turned to a graveyard.

Elbeuf Captured

American troops have seized Elbeuf, 25 miles from the mouth of the Seine. The Canadians were approaching Pont-Audemer, 13 miles east and slightly south of Allied-held Honfleur, at the river's mouth. The river Risle has been crossed at many places and Allied troops hold both banks as far north as Montfort-sur-Risle.

Farther to the southeast Epaignes and St. George-du-Vievre are in Allied hands.

(Allied forces are now six miles beyond Honfleur at the mouth of the Seine estuary and many Germans are trying to swim the stream, the London radio said today in a broadcast heard in New York by CBS.)

Robot Lull

The Allied drive north toward the Pas-de-Calais coast coincided with a lull in the flying-bomb attacks on London and southern England, but it was not known whether the Germans already were moving their robot-launching platforms out of range of Eisenhower's advancing armies. Allied pilots reported the Germans had pulled out at least part of their forces from the rocket coast fortifications.

Although it was stated that American patrols in a 23-mile advance had reached Troyes, 130 miles south of the German border at the Saar, there was almost a complete blackout of official information at supreme headquarters on how far Allied troops have pushed in the direction of Belgium and Germany.

If the Germans make another stand in France it is believed they probably will do so along the old Somme line amid the battlefields of the first World War.

Crossing At Corbeil

In their present confused state it was unlikely that the Germans have an exact idea where the American, British and Canadian advanced columns have reached. South of Paris the enemy holds the east edge of the Seine between Villeneuve, St. Georges and Corbeil.

Supreme headquarters has revealed that the Americans were on or across the Seine most of the 175 miles from Elbeuf to Troyes.

Somme-Marne Line

The Somme-Marne river line along which the retreating Germans might attempt a stand extends from the mouth of the Somme river, on the English Channel midway between Dieppe and Boulogne, southeastward for about 20 miles to the uplands of the Haute Marne department.

Such a position would touch the vicinity of Abbeville, continue through Amiens, Peronne and Ham on the Somme, then drop southward about 50 miles to the Marne somewhere in the region between Chateau Thierry and Epernay.

At the German border itself the Nazis have the Siegfried Line, Hitler's old "West Wall" facing France.

Belfort Gap

(A Madrid dispatch quoted a radio message received in the Spanish capital as saying that more than 100,000 foreign laborers were working night and day under Nazi overseers in an effort to strengthen the Siegfried Line.)

Troyes is 85 miles southeast of Paris and 37 miles south of the Marne. At Troyes the Americans were 138 miles west of the Belfort Gap, the gateway into the industrial Rhineland.

The start of the long-delayed assault on Brest indicated the Allies were hurrying the clearance of that vital port and naval base for the armies waiting across the seas to join in the showdown battle for Europe.

Miltary Importance

The taking of Brest would be of even greater significance in a military sense than the liberation of Paris, since Brest is needed for the same role it served a quarter of a century ago—the feeding and supplying of American forces.

Brest has been cut off and under siege for more than three weeks, but up to now the main Allied effort has been needed at other points.

The submarine lairs of Lorient and St. Nazaire, on the south coast of the Breton peninsula, are awaiting cleanups as well.

Allied air forces had one of their biggest days of the war, flying more than 6,450 sorties in 24 hours and hitting targets from Germany to Brest.

Text of Eisenhower's Warning To Alsatians and Lorrainers

NIGHT

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—Supreme Headquarters warned the people of Alsace-Lorraine and Luxembourg today that they now were in the rear area of military operations and that soon their territory "may become a theater of war."

The "Voice of Supreme Headquarters," broadcasting in French and German an order from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, declared that "the elimination of the German Seventh Army as a fighting entity has decided the battle of France," and urged the people of those areas to take precautions and make preparations for the nearing day of liberation.

"The handful of German divisions north of the Seine River "can at best fight a series of delaying actions on their retreat into Germany," the order said.

"The areas in which you live are already today in the rear area of military operations. Very soon they may become a theater of war.

Warns of Air Attack.

"In view of these facts I give you the following notice:

"One: The rear communications of the remnants of the German Army retreating into Germany will be subjected to bombing as devastating as that which preceded and accompanied the Allied campaign in Normandy. The people of Alsace-Lorraine, and of the Duchy of Luxembourg are hereby warned that every one who lives or works in the vicinity of road, rail and canal communications, of military depots, camps or factories working for the Nazi war machine, must from now on reckon that they may be exposed to high level or low level air attack at any hour of the day or night. Take all precautions to protect yourself.

"Two: The Germans may attempt to force you to build emergency earthworks and fortifications. Such constructions will be areas of special danger. Therefore, in order to prevent useless civilian casualties, keep away from them, take refuge in the countryside. Take with you food, water and warm clothing. Keep away from the Germans, and from everything that may be a target for attack.

Tells People to Note Crimes.

"Three: The people of Alsace-Lorraine and of the Duchy of Luxembourg are further warned that the Germans, in their desperation, may become guilty of crimes and atrocities. All perpetrators of such will be brought to trial. You are asked to make careful note of the circumstances in which crimes and atrocities are committed. War evidence will be accepted by the Allied judicial authorities when the time for settlement arrives.

"That ends this message, dated August 26, 1944, issued at the order of the Supreme Commander. This is a member of the staff of Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force."

REDS IN PURSUIT OF FLEEING NAZIS, REACH THE DANUBE

Moscow Bulletin Claims 60,000 Prisoners Taken in 24-Hour Period.

Soviet Marines Seize Black Sea Port, Take Huge Stores of Material.

LONDON, Sunday, Aug. 27—(AP) Russian troops yesterday reconquered Bessarabia, reaching the Danube waterway from the Prut river down to the Black sea, while other Soviet forces struck westward into the Carpathian mountains in pursuit of an enemy fleeing toward Hungary and leaving behind scores of thousands of captives and great quantities of war material.

Moscow's nightly bulletin announced that at least 61,000 prisoners were taken in a 24-hour period, including five Romanian divisions numbering some 30,000 men. The Romanians surrendered with all their arms, and equipment.

Marines Land at Valcov

A midnight supplementary communique said that Soviet marines landed at Valcov, Black Sea port at the mouth of the Danube, and joined land forces in seizing huge stores of material in that town. The Germans threw away their arms and fled across the Danube, the bulletin said.

The old fortress town of Ismail, farther upstream, also fell to the Red army, which now controls a 75-mile stretch of the lower Danube.

In the middle of the Romanian front other Red army units struck to within 12 miles of Galati and to within 15 miles of Focsani, opposite anchors of the Galati gap defense line guarding the roads to Bucharest, the Ploesti oil wells, and the heart of the Balkans.

Swiftly exploiting one of the war's greatest victories, the Russians on the seventh day of their lightning offensive aimed at trapping entire Nazi armies in the Balkans had killed or captured nearly 275,000 Germans and Romanians, and were hacking to pieces the remnants of 12 encircled Nazi divisions southwest of fallen Chisinau, now far to the rear of advance units driving toward Bucharest.

The communique said that Puteni, 10 miles southeast of Tecuci, captured Friday, was taken, but did not confirm a dispatch that Soviet units already had crossed the lower Siret river in their plunge through the Galati gap. Puteni is 24 miles northeast of Focsani. Nicoresti, 19 miles above Focsani, also was seized.

AUG 27 1944

In the westward movement along the Carpathian roads leading to Translyvania the Russians captured Piatra, 26 miles west of Roman; Moinesti, 33 miles south of Piatra; and Onesti, 18 miles southeast of Moinesti.

Drive Beyond Tartu

On the Estonian front the Russians pushed nine miles northwest of Tartu, the gutted university city taken Friday, capturing Puhtaleva on the road to Tallinn, Estonian capital 90 miles away.

Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic army also captured 70 localities north of Valga, key rail junction city on the Estonian-Latvia border. These included Verevi, 19 miles west of Tartu near Lake Varts Jaru, and Lotta, only 12 miles north of Valga.

German counterattacks were beaten off southwest of Jelgava in western Latvia, the bulletin said.

Steadily expanding its wedge between Warsaw and German East Prussia, Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian army captured several places between the Vistula and Bug rivers. These included Kulijow, on the Bug 17 miles north and slightly east of Warsaw, Zalubice, two miles southwest of Kulijow, and Wole-Rasztowska, 15 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Berlin reflected considerable anxiety about this sector, saying the Russians had thrown in 150,000 troops there, and also said the Soviets had crossed the Bug near Wyszkow area, 27 miles northeast of the embattled Polish capital.

Most of the Romanian prisoners probably will be reorganized into their usual divisional strength of 6,000 men and hurled against the retreating Germans at the order of King Mihai's new pro-Ally government, whose declaration of war against the Reich, has sped the collapse of the Balkan front.

Other Romanian units already have seized the Carpathian mountain passes leading from Romania to Hungary via Transylvania, a Moscow statement said, thus aiding the Russians in their annihilation of entire Axis divisions.

350 Towns Captured

Most of the 350 towns and villages captured yesterday were in the Carpathian foothills above the Galati gap, the bulletin disclosed. Other units attacking through the Galati gap, a fortified area between the mountains and the Danube, were reported in dispatches to be within 100 miles of Bucharest.

Russian gains also were made on the Estonian front beyond fallen Tartu, 100 miles southeast of Tallinn, Estonian capital, and on the front northeast of Warsaw, where Berlin said a great battle was raging above the Bug river near Wyszkow, 27 miles northeast of the embattled Polish capital. The bulletin announced the capture of eight localities in this area south of German East Prussia.

Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army captured 150 places west and south of Roman on the Czernowitz-Bucharest railway, including Buhusi, 18 miles southwest of Roman and 12 miles west of the Siret river, as Soviet units ascending the foothills of the Transylvanian alps.

Farther south in the area north of Focsani, western anchor of the Galati gap, the Russians swept up 200 villages, including Adjudu, 28 miles north of Focsani. Another route through the mountains leads west from Adjudu.

Ismail Falls

To the southeast Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukraine army cleared the Germans from a winding 60-mile stretch of the Danube between the Prut and the Kiliya rivers, capturing the ancient port and fortress town of Ismail, and another river town, Reni. Bolgrad, 25 miles northwest of Ismail, also was captured.

The seizure of Reni put Tolbukhin's men only 12 miles from Galati, eastern anchor of the Galati gap defenses guarding the roads to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil wells. One dispatch said the Russians already were driving through the gap and were within 100 miles of Bucharest.

The communique said that Puteni, ten miles southeast of Tecuci, captured Friday, was taken, but did not confirm a dispatch that Soviet units already had crossed the lower Siret river in their plunge through the Galati Gap. Puteni is 24 miles northeast of Focsani. Nicoresti, 19 miles above Focsani, also was seized.

In the westward movement along the Carpathian roads leading to Transylvania the Russians pushed nine miles northwest of Tartu, the gutted university city taken Friday, capturing Puhtaleva on the road to Tallinn, Estonian capital 90 miles away.

Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic Army also captured 70 localities north of Valga, key rail junction city on the Estonian-Latvia border. These included Verevi, 19 miles west of Tartu near Lake Varts Jaru, and Lotta, only 12 miles north of Valga.

German counterattacks were beaten off southwest of Jelgava in western Latvia, the bulletin said.

In The Warsaw Sector

Steadily expanding its wedge between Warsaw and German East Prussia, Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army captured several places between the Vistula and Bug rivers. These included Kulijow, on the Bug 17 miles north and slightly east of Warsaw; Zalubice, two miles southwest of Kulijow, and Wola-Rasztowska, 15 miles northwest of Warsaw.

Berlin reflected considerable anxiety about this sector, saying the Russians had thrown in 150,000 troops there, and also said the Soviets had crossed the Bug near Wyszkow area, 27 miles northeast of the embattled Polish capital.

The lower Danube river is the southern border of Bessarabia province which Romania ceded to Russia in 1940 and then took back again the following year when she joined Germany in the war on Russia.

AUG 27 1944

Ismail's fall was announced by Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin in an order of the day. It is a town of about 27,000 population, and was a Turkish stronghold before its seizure in 1790 by troops under the famous Russian general, Count Suvorov. The massacre which followed that battle was one of the bloodiest in European war annals.

The capture of Ismail will give the Russians a valuable port for bringing in supplies from Odessa, 120 miles to the northwest.

Germans' Balkan Front Collapses

Bulgaria Orders Nazi Troops Out of Country—Romanians Seize Carpathian Mountain Passes—Antonescu Reported Under Arrest in King Mihai's Palace.

WADE-WERNER

LONDON, Aug. 26 — (AP) The Germans' Balkan front caved in tonight as Bulgaria ordered Nazi troops out of the country and Romanians seized the Carpathian mountain passes and did battle with their former Allies who were trying to escape the Russian onslaught.

(The Bulgarian domestic radio, in a broadcast recorded by the U. S. Federal Communications Commission, said that German troops in Bulgaria already had been disarmed by Bulgarian forces and confirmed that Bulgaria had approached the United States and Britain for terms on withdrawing from the war.)

PAY

Bulgaria Expects to Quit

Bulgaria's formal withdrawal from the war was expected hourly, but the Moscow radio indicated she already was as good as out, announcing that she had adopted an attitude of strict "neutrality" and planned to disarm any Germans who did not leave the country peaceably.

Bulgarian ability to enforce this position was an open question but there have been reports of extensive withdrawals of German forces from that country in recent weeks, so that those remaining might not be able to put up effective resistance, while those seeking to flee from Romania would have to fight their way into doubtful sanctuary.

The broadcast Soviet statement, most concrete of the many current reports concerning the Balkans, said Bucharest was firmly held by the new pro-Allied Romanian government, that the old Premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu was under arrest in King Mihai's palace, and that Romanian troops now held the Carpathian mountain passes that had been the Germans' strongest line of hope for defense against the Red army.

An earlier report from the Italian Fascist agency Stefani via the Swiss Telegraph agency had said Antonescu had been assassinated in the coup that turned Romania from the German to the Allied camp Wednesday.

Gen. Hansen, head of the German military mission to Romania, and other Germans in Bucharest have been interned, Moscow said, and "Bucharest is firmly held by the new government of Gen. Sanatescu" although the Germans were still shelling the city with anti-aircraft guns—the only artillery they had—and were bombing the military barracks.

U. S. Liberators Blast Nazis

Two hundred and fifty American Liberators from Italy meanwhile bombed the German-held airdrome of Otopeni, nine miles north of Bucharest, whence the German air attacks on Bucharest originated.

Another Liberator force struck barracks at Beneasa just north of Bucharest, and a third formation attacked a train ferry at Giurgiu on the Danube 35 miles southwest of Bucharest on the only direct link between Bulgaria and the Bucharest area.

American pursuits engaged the few German fighters seen.

Pointing the way to the next likely Balkan development, the Russians said German and Hungarian forces were "feverishly erecting defenses" in Transylvania in the territory Hungary took from Romania in 1940 under a Hitler "award."

Authoritative sources in London said there was no information indicating any quick crackup of Hungary, but that on the contrary the Nazis could be expected to stiffen the Hungarians' spines now that Hungary's old enemy, Romania, is no longer in the Axis.

Now Hitler offers the Hungarians a chance to fight their natural enemies. Whether they are yet doing so beyond guerrilla clashes is not clear.

The Germans themselves indicated they were not going to get out of any of the Balkans without a fight. The German radio said, "Romania now more than ever will become a theater of the bloodiest war. The Germany army not only will not leave the country but will be reinforced."

Where the reinforcements would come from was not apparent, but the Moscow radio indicated the Germans were going to make some sort of fight, announcing they had created an out-and-out puppet government under the Iron Guard terrorist Horia Sima. The Germans declined to disclose makeup or location of this "government," saying the time was not ripe.

Plead with Bulgaria

The German foreign office professed to be watching Bulgarian developments with icy calm, but German broadcasts beamed toward Bulgaria displayed more concern, pleading with Bulgarians to remember that this was not the first time Germany had faced an apparently "hopeless" situation and concluding:

"Dear listeners, you should not be afraid the new German weapons will come into the picture too late."

According to Moscow, however, the Bulgarian government on Friday notified the Germans that they would have to get out of the country immediately because Bulgaria had adopted the policy of "complete neutrality."

Terms Reported Offered

Bulgaria never went to war against Russia and her opposition to Britain and the United States has been only on paper, but she has occupied portions of Greek and Yugoslav territory.

Spanish broadcasts during the day said Britain and the United States were offering Bulgaria "magnanimous" terms, but other sources said she certainly would not be allowed to keep any of her spoils.

The two Allied governments had not disclosed whether they had accepted Bulgaria's bid for peace and were vague on whether it followed the general formula of unconditional surrender. That she was attempting to bargain, however, was intimated in the explanation that her offer to quit was accompanied by proposals requiring exchanges of views among the United States, Britain and Russia. Ankara, Turkey, was the reported scene of negotiation.

The Ankara radio said all Germans already had left the Bulgarian capital, Sofia. Moscow disclosed that Ankara was the scene of the Romanian-Soviet negotiations also.

Appeals To Slovak People

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Deputy Premier Sano Mach, in a speech broadcast by the Slovakia home radio tonight, appealed to the Slovak people to support the Government and "help maintain law and order" under the martial law decree of August 12.

Mach said the Government had been forced to declare martial law after attacks on troops, police and civilians by saboteurs and parachutists who, the deputy premier said, were dropped by "the enemy."

He said the army and security police had been instructed to "wipe out all criminal bands."

May Get Flyers Back

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP) — Romania's radio surrender raises the possibility — though officials here consider it far from a certainty— of getting some 500 imprisoned American flyers back into the fight.

Reliable reports indicate that about that number of Americans were held in the Balkan country at the time of the capitulation.

If the surrender was complete throughout Romania, the most likely prospect would be for early release of American flyers shot down during raids on oil fields, manufacturing plants and Nazi supply lines.

It is possible that the Germans may have removed many American prisoners from Romania.

SOFIA ORDERS GERMANS OUT OF COUNTRY

Declares Nazi Troops Will Be Disarmed if They Don't Leave at Once.

Romanian Troops Hold Capital and Seize Carpathian Passes —Antonescu Arrested.

London, Aug. 26 (A. P.). —Bulgaria has ordered the withdrawal of all German troops from Bulgarian soil, and told the Germans that they will be disarmed if they don't leave, the Moscow radio declared tonight.

The Soviet Information Bureau set forth in a broadcast announcement that the ultimatum was delivered yesterday by the Bulgarian Foreign Minister — in effect quitting the Germans cold only two days after Romania's capitulation. The bureau quoted the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs.

Earlier today tht bureau had revealed that Bulgaria has assured the Soviet Government of her absolute neutrality in the fight between the Germans and the Romanians. The Bulgarian Prime Minister informed Russia that if German troops enter Bulgaria, Bulgaria will oppose them, the bureau added in a statement reorded by the Soviet radio monitor here. At just about the same time, the Ankara radio said that the German Army had left Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, and that the only Germans left there were two liaison officers.

[In a broadcast picked up at New York today by CBS the British radio said that the Bulgarian Minister in Ankara, Nicolas Balabanoff, "is quoted as saying that 'events are flowing their normal course and Bulgaria will soon follow Romania's intelligent example.'" On Wednesday, last, Romania changed sides in the war, turning against the Germans.]

Kings' Party Holds Bucharest.

Meanwhile, today the Moscow radio announced not only that the New Romanian Government has snatched Bucharest firmly from German control, but that Romanian troops have seized the Carpathian passes and are battling the Germans who are now retreating westward.

The Germans are still shelling Bucharest with anti-aircraft guns, however, since they lack artillery, and are bombing military barracks from the air, the statement added.

On the other hand, up to 250 Liberators of the Italian-based Fifteen United States Air Force today bombed Otopeni airdrome, nine miles north of Bucharest, in support of the Romania Government. Headquarters at Rome announced that their purpose was to destroy installations and make unuseable the field which had been the base for yesterday's bombing attack on Bucharest.

For their part, the Germans declared that "quarters of the German Command" in Bucharest were engaged today in fierce fighting with Romanian Army formations.

In a broadcast communique the German High Command said that repeated attacks "made by traitors" were repulsed, and that the German troops were engaged in a general retreat in Romania while defending themselves against numerous Russian attacks.

The German legation in Bucharest has been cordoned off by Romanian troops and police forces, the Berlin radio declared, and added: "Under these circumstances there exists no possibility of direct communication with the German envoy or his staff."

Antonescu Arrested.

In declaring that Bucharest is firmly held by the new Romanian Government, the Moscow radio said that enthusiastic demonstrations greeted the announcement of that regime formed by King Michael. Marshal Ion Antonescu, the ousted Romanian Premier, who had collaborated with the Germans, had been arrested, and the German military mission in Bucharest has been interned, Moscow added.

Bucharest, the "Paris of the Balkans," thus became the third capital to be freed from the Nazi yoke, joining Paris and Rome as liberated cities.

Meanwhile, as black disaster in the Balkans veered ever closer, Adolf Hitler was early today reported in conference at Berchtesgaden with his military and political advisers.

Michael Reported With Reds.

According to reports received today by the OWI, La Suisse of Geneva said that young King Michael of Romania and his new pro-Allied government had moved to Chisinau, which is occupied by the Red Army, because of the situation in Bucharest. Troops faithful to Michael had surrounded the Ploesti oil fields still held by the Germans, the newspaper added.

In a broadcast picked up at New York by CBS the British radio reported.

A Greek announcement from Cairo declaring that the Germans had deported 1,500 citizens of Athens to Germany, and had arrested 4,000 more as a precaution against outbreaks in the Greek capital, and that in protest the workers in 9thens began a general strike on Thursday.

Reds Announce Bucharest's Liberation

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—The new Romanian Government has snatched its capital firmly from German control, Moscow announced tonight, and Romanian troops have seized the Carpathian passes and are battling Germans retreating westward.

Bulgaria has ordered withdrawal of all German troops from Bulgarian soil and told the Germans that they will be disarmed if they don't leave, the Moscow radio declared tonight.

The Soviet Information Bureau said in another broadcast that Bulgaria had assured the Russian Government of "absolute neutrality" and had declared that German troops will be opposed if they enter Bulgaria.

"Germans Desert Sofia"

Ankara radio said all German troops had deserted Sofia, the Bulgarian capital.

The statement said enthusiastic demonstrations in Bucharest greeted the new Romanian Government formed by King Mihai.

Bucharest, the "Paris of the Balkans," became the third capital to be freed from the Nazi yoke, joining Paris and Rome as liberated cities.

Marshal Ion Antonescu, Romanian Premier who collaborated with the Germans, has been arrested, and the German military mission in Bucharest was interned, said the statement recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Shelling Bucharest

Germans still are shelling Bucharest with anti-aircraft guns, since they lack artillery, and are bombing military barracks from the air, the statement said.

United States heavy bombers from Italy today blasted an airfield near Bucharest from which the Germans were hitting at the capital.

Moscow's statement came after early German radio announcements that "quarters of the German command" in Bucharest were engaged in fierce fighting with Romanian army formations.

The German high command said that repeated attacks "made by traitors" were repulsed and that German troops were engaged in a general retreat in Romania while defending themselves against numerous Soviet attacks.

The German legation in Bucharest has been cordoned off by Romanian troops and police forces, said a Berlin broadcast.

No Direct Communication

It added that "under these circumstances there exists no possibility of direct communication with the German envoy or his staff."

(The Geneva newspaper La Suisse, in a report received by the OWI, said young King Mihai and his new pro-Allied government had moved to Chisinau, which is occupied by the Red army, "because of the situation in Bucharest."

(Troops faithful to Mihai had surrounded the Ploesti oil fields still held by the Germans, the paper said.)

"Strongpoints Giving In"

Bucharest reported Romanian soldiers in increasing numbers were joining the onrushing Red Army and, under heightening pressure from the front and rear, Germany's whole position in Romania appeared headed toward disintegration.

"German strongpoints in the country are giving in and whole groups are surrendering," declared a Bucharest broadcast.

"Allied troops and our own soldiers from the front are headed toward Bucharest."

"Bulgars Await Freedom"

Meanwhile, Bulgaria was said to be awaiting an early delivery of Allied terms to take her out of the war. Greek insurgents were reported fighting with German occupation forces, and the Nazis tightened their grip on a shaking Hungary.

All of these troubles faced Hitler as he was reported conferring at Berchtesgaden with his military and political advisers.

(The Moscow radio broadcast an "appeal to the Bulgarian people saying Bulgaria would face defeat and punishment if she remained in Hitler's camp," a London broadcast recorded by CBS said.)

"Fighting All Over Greece"

(The Russian-sponsored Free Germany National Committee, quoting Turkish reports, said in a broadcast last night that fighting had broken out "all over Greece" and in Crete between Greek irregulars and German occupation troops, the FCC reported.)

Moscow Reports the Annihilation of Twelve Nazi Divisions in Balkan Kingdom.

London, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—Premier-Marshal Stalin tonight announced capture of Ismail on the Danube, ninety miles east of Galati in Romania.

Ismail was captured by storm today by troops of the Third Ukrainian front, Premier Stalin said in a broadcast order of the day recorded by the Soviet monitor. The fortress town was termed an important strongpoint of enemy defense on the lower Danube.

DELUCA

Reds Race for Bucharest.

Moscow, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—The Red Army sped through the tained, would carry the Russian spearheads to the Romanian capital by tomorrow night.

The charging Russian troops last were reported little more than 100 miles from Bucharest and barely seventy-five from the Ploesti oil fields. The Siret River was crossed twenty miles south of captured Tecuci.

A Red Star dispatch said that a pitched battle between the Romanians and Germans was witnessed by Soviet forces.

From the bridgehead south of Tecuci, Soviet forces were thirty miles from the Ramnicul-Sarat fields northeast of Ploesti.

Three Romanian generals were taken prisoner. They were Gen. Saidak, commander of the First Romanian Division; Gen. Voiko, commander of the Fourteenth Division and Gen. Tenescue, commander of the 110th Division.

Enemy Losses 205,000.

In a continuation of the lightning-like drive through Romania that has cost the enemy nearly 205,000 killed or captured in six days, Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine Army established a bridgehead across the Siret in the vicinity of Nanesti a little more than 100 miles from Bucharest, front dispatches said.

It appeared that the Galati Gap defense zone guarding both the Romanian capital and the Ploesti oil fields was virtually lost to the reeling foe.

The annihilation of twelve Nazi divisions encircled southwest of fallen Chisinau, provincial capital of Bessarabia, continued as the outnumbered Germans fought in dazed, small groups or fled in disorder.

Soviet armored cars combing the Moldavian countryside for nests of enemy rear guards were reported barely seventy-five miles from the forest of oil derricks which surround Ploesti.

1,300 Captives Taken.

More than 550 villages and towns were occupied by the forces of Gen. Malinovsky and Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin, commander of the Third Ukraine Army, as their two commands joined along the Prut River at Leuseni, thirty-two miles west of Chisinau.

Gen. Tolbukhin's forces repelled counter-attacks by the trapped Nazi divisions trying desperately to break out in the past two days. He has taken more than 13,000 prisoners, and more than 40,000 of the enemy were still believed to be encircled.

AUG 27 1944

In other important successes yesterday Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic Army captured Tartu, a center of Nazi resistance in Central Estonia, and Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian Army advance in the direction of the German frontier in Northern Poland seized over forty populated points south of Lomza.

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky was reported bettering his positions east and northeast of Warsaw's suburb of Praga, although the Germans still were mounting tank and infantry tanks against him.

In the Vistula bridgehead below Warsaw and on the East Prussian frontier Red Army forces maintained pressure on the Nazis, preventing a possible diverting of strength to Hitler's wavering Balkan satellites.

Yanks Bomb Nazis' Romanian Airfield

Rome, Aug. 26 (AP) — American Liberators from Italy today bombed Otopeni airdrome, nine miles north of Bucharest, in support of the Romanian Government defending the capital against German attacks.

"Otopeni is the nearest German-held airdrome to the capital and was the base for Friday's German bombing attacks on points within the city," Mediterranean Allied Air Force headquarters announced.

Up to 250 Liberators were used in the attack, which had the purpose of destroying installations and making the field unusable.

German Troops Attacked

Substantial enemy troop movements in Yugoslavia and Greece were attacked by Allied warplanes yesterday for the second successive day, but whether the Nazis were trying to get out of those countries following Romania's surrender was not definitely known.

RAF Mustangs shot up four trains on the Zagreb-Banova Jaruga rail line in Yugoslavia, at least two of which were loaded with troops, and a motor convoy near Arta, Greece.

NIGHT

Thirteen enemy planes were destroyed in yesterday's Mediterranean Allied Air Forces operations, most of them by American fighters escorting Fortresses and Liberators on a raid upon two aircraft component factories at Brunn in Czechoslovakia and the Prostejov airfield 20 miles northeast of Brunn.

Allies Lose 12 Planes

The MAAF lost three heavy bombers and nine other planes in all operations.

Lieut. Michael Drezas, of Bloomfield, N. J., jumped into fifth place among American air aces in the Mediterranean theater by shooting down two ME-109's over Czechoslovakia and boosting his total to 12.

RAF medium and heavy bombers started many fires last night in the railyard at Ravenna in northern Italy. One big blaze was visible for 70 miles.

"As in September, 1939, the people are in a struggle for Warsaw."

"Unnecessary Sacrifice"

The Home Army of the Polish Exile Government in London "assumed responsibility for choosing the moment to start the struggle," the Polish Union declared, without previously coming to an understanding with the Allies on coordinating action.

The uprising "which could only result in unnecessary sacrifice of Polish blood," the Union added, was calculated to "demonstrate the influence and numerical strength of the Home Army at the moment negotiations were being conducted in Moscow which would decide the further development of the political situation in Poland."

10,000 Nazis In Paris Lay Down Arms

Unconditional Surrender Signed by Commander in Gare Montparnasse

City Is Liberated Almost Unscarred render was signed at 6 p. m. yesterday in the dingy baggagemaster's office in the Gare Montparnasse, and Paris celebrated it with one of the wildest nights in its history. But machine-gun and rifle shots played a staccato accompaniment to the blaring brass bands celebrating the end of German rule.

DAY

From dusk until early morning it seemed as if everybody was shooting in all directions, and there was occasional cannonading. Some of the shooting was at Germans still fighting after the formal surrender, but a lot of it was Parisians simply letting off steam.

[The German garrison that surrendered was estimated at 10,000, according to a statement at supreme headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force. It said one German strongpoint still held out Saturday night in the Champigny sector, a suburb five miles southeast of Paris, and there was sporadic fighting with small groups of Germans in the northeastern and northwestern suburbs of the city. Isolated snipers were being hunted down.]

City Virtually Unscarred

A quick tour of the city today showed Paris was virtually unscarred by war. The greatest damage was to buildings in the Luxembourg Gardens area, where the Germans made a last stand. When the sun rose this morning all was quiet and Paris was going her serene way again.

Eighty-year-old flower girls were selling blossoms on Seine bridges, all seized intact by patriots. Before mans still are resisting stubbornly and a narrow strip of the Riviera coasts between Antibes and Menton.

In a message of congratulation to General Patch on these successes General Sir Maitland Wilson, Allied Mediterranean commander, declared the battle "is developing to my complete satisfaction," and predicted it would "result in the total destruction of the German 19th Army."

This is the first time that the army opposing the Americans and French in southern France has been identified. The Germans have announced that their main forces are withdrawing on Lyon, explaining that the move was made possible by delaying actions of the garrisons at Marseille and Toulon and by forces in the mountainous areas east of the Rhone.

The forces which formed a screen covering the river valley have been knocked out of the mountains and presumably are well on their way up the Rhone valley by now. Their defeat permitted the Americans of Major General Lucian K. Truscott's 6th Corps to enter the walled city of Avignon, residence of the exiled Popes in the thirteenth century.

After occupying Avignon the Americans turned north up the valley in pursuit of the Germans. The latter were racing against time in their efforts to escape. Lyon itself has been reported in the hands of French Forces of the Interior and if this is true the German escape route already is blocked.

On the Rhone below Avignon, French troops occupied Arles, fourth century residence of Emperor Constantine and renowned for its well-preserved Roman amphitheater. Ten miles above Arles the French also entered Tarascon.

The same American force that took Avignon occupied the towns of Cavaillon, twenty miles by road southeast of there, and Carpentras, fifteen miles to the northeast.

The Fortress of Briancon, seized by Americans on the right flank is only five miles from the Mont Genevre Pass on the Italian frontier. The Germans definitely are worried about all the passes across the Alps between Mont Blanc and the sea, since they must be held in order to protect the German armies in Italy from being taken from the rear.

There are twelve separate forts in the immediate vicinity of Briancon which are strategically situated at the head of the three valleys—the Claree, Haute-Durance and Croix de Bretagne. The road winds steeply up to the pass, climbing 1,500 feet in five miles, and then plunges equally steeply down the other side of the Alps into the Piedmont Plain.

The French in Toulon, after mopping up the Germans in the bitterly-contested maritime arsenal, held most of the city today. They have reduced four more of the forts that ring Toulon harbor —La Malgue, Mourillon, D'Artigues and Malbousquet.

Tonight the only organized German resistance was said to center around the village of Six-Fours on the peninsula southwest of Toulon. Coastal batteries in this area were pounded with 516 rounds of gunfire from four Allied cruisers until only three remained active, one at Cap Sicie at the southern extreme of the peninsula and two at St. Mandrier on a smaller peninsula jutting out eastward.

In Marseille the Germans appearing to be holding at least three strong points. One of these was the Basilica of Notre Dame de la Garde on a steep 500-foot-high hill in the southern part of the city. The basilica incloses a thirteenth century Byzantine-style chapel.

DAY

Two other points where the Germans were resisting were Forts St. Nicholas and St. Jean, facing each other across the entrance of the Vieux Port. This narrow entrance has been partially blocked by the sinking of a 290-foot ship.

Altogether, the Germans have been doing an extensive job of demolition in Marseille harbor. Quays, drydocks, warehouses and port facilities have been wrecked. Some ships have been scuttled near the quaysides and others have been sunk in such ways as to obstruct the harbor entrance.

Marseille harbor, consisting mainly of basins connected by narrow passages, is a port wrecker's dream, and the Germans have had lots of experience in wrecking ports.

Warsaw Battle Goes On In Flames, Patriots Say

Stockholm, Aug. 26 (AP)—The newspaper Aftonbladet said today that observers on the northern Norwegian coast coast had seen several German convoys go northward empty and return fully loaded, indicating the German command might be withdrawing some troops from northern Finland.

NIGHT

Moscow, Aug. 26 (AP)—The southern and western working class sections of Warsaw are in flames, with fighting in progress in the midtown section, a bulletin from the Union of Polish Patriots reported today.

"Blood flows in the streets of the Polish capital," it added. "At times it appears the struggle has subsided, then it flares up again, its flames enveloping whole sections

Surrender of Paris Is Described; Nazis Deny There Was an Armistice

Final Terms Signed at 6 o'Clock Last Night—City Is Comparatively Calm Today—New Yorkers Play Part in Drama.

By EDWARD BALL.

Paris, Aug. 25 (Delayed) (8:20 P. M.) (A. P.).—The final unconditional surrender of Paris was signed at 6 P. M. tonight in a bare, dingy baggage master's office in Montparnasse railroad station in Paris.

Seated in this cubbyhole at an unpainted wooden table was Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz, German commander of the Paris garrison. He first faced Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc and then a United States corps commander and signed the order to his troops, which read:

"Resistance in the military district and defense points is immediately to be stopped. Signed, Von Choltitz, General of Infantry."

Copies of the surrender order immediately were given to German officers who were escorted by American, British and French officers in jeeps to parts of the city where German units were fighting.

How Meeting Was Arranged.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who was in the city at the time of the surrender, visited the station, but did not meet Gen. Von Choltitz.

In mid-morning Gen. Leclerc's office had contacted Von Choltitz at the Meurice Hotel, but the lines were cut. Then a courier was sent with the unconditional surrender demand.

Signed copies were exchanged between Gen. Von Choltitz and Gen. Leclerc and a French guard went to the Meurice to escort the German commander to Montparnasse station. After going through the formality of accepting the surrender the cold, unbending Gen. Leclerc posed outside the station with Gen. Von Choltitz.

New Yorkers at Meeting.

Gen. Von Choltitz first surrendered personally to Gen. Leclerc and then to the United States Corps commander of which Gen. Leclerc's Second French Armored Division is a part.

The corps commander talked with Gen. Von Choltitz in the presence of Lieut.-Col. Robert Low of 730 Park avenue, New York city, who is a member of the corps commander's staff.

The paunchy, black-haired German General wearing horn-rimmed glasses sat impassively with his legs crossed. He wore a khaki tunic and gray-green riding breeches with broad leg stripes down the sides, tucked neatly in his black boots.

In the adjoining office one of Gen. Von Choltitz's staff officers, a colonel of the Signal Corps, talked with a high-ranking officer and Capt. Paul Howard of 333 East 68th street, New York city, the latter two members of the corps commander's staff.

At Sorry Looking Lot.

Outside on the floor of the station platform a dozen members of Gen. Von Choltitz's staff from full colonels down, sat with their legs dangling over the tracks. They were a dejected lot, with close-cropped bare heads bowed. Stray bullets crashed through the massive glass-paned shed over the tracks, showering them with glass splinters, and each time a bullet hit they ducked.

They were guarded by a lone French poilu, while Capt. John E. Thomas of Minneapolis, Minn., the corps commander's aid, stood guard at the door of a baggage-conference room.

The German signals colonel who was talking with high officers and Capt. Howard was a wiry, thin-faced, gray-haired little man who showed a fondness for American cigarettes. He appeared greatly relieved that the war was over for him.

The Colonel and other members of Gen. Von Choltitz's staff were billeted at the Oxford and Cambridge Hotel behind the Meurice Hotel. He said that during the morning a French tank rolled up in front of the Oxford and Cambridge Hotel and fired one shot which hit a parked automobile, blowing it against the hotel front.

They Knew Jig Was Up.

The shot ignited gasoline in the automobile tank and the fire spread over the hotel lobby. He said he and other officers came running down the stairs with drawn pistols ready to fight it out. But after they saw what had happened they realized the jig was up.

"And they ran out like rats and surrendered," added the French guard.

The German signals colonel said that all SS troops left fourteen days ago and that the only Nazi forces left were members of the regular Paris garrison. Whether they were SS or not, they fought like hellions when cornered in Luxemburg Gardens even after the surrender negotiations were in progress.

Two hours after Gen. Von Choltitz's cease-fire order went out there was machine gunning by Germans from rooftops about the city.

As I write this there are bursts from machine guns and machine pistols outside my hotel on Boulevard St. Michel leading down to Notre Dame Cathedral. Notre Dame Cathedral itself is not damaged.

Parisians Well Fed.

Paris as a whole appears to have suffered only slightly from war. The damage here is nothing compared with London.

If there is any starvation here it didn't show up today among the hundreds of thousands who welcomed their liberators. In contrast to Londoners who show the pinch of nearly five years of short rations, the Parisians look well fed.

Von Choltitz An Old Enemy.

Paris subways stopped running two months ago because of the fuel shortage and electric current has been on only forty-five minutes at night—after 10 P. M. The waterworks and sanitary facilities are functioning normally, however.

Tonight while bullets still were whining around Paris, Parisians were singing in the street. Pillars of black smoke rose over Versailles where the west wing of Versailles Palace still was burning. Dull red glows ringed the city from burning military forts set ablaze by the Germans.

For the Americans and the French, capture of Gen. Von Choltitz was a particularly rich haul. He commanded the 84th German Corps which Allied troops have battled all the way from Cherbourg to Paris. He took command of the Paris garrison fourteen days ago.

Denies Armistice Story.

He denied there had been any kind of armistice with French resistance forces before Gen. Leclerc's entry. He said there had been an "arrangement" whereby the Germans would be permitted to move troops into and out of the city without being shot at in return for permission for the French to transport food into the city.

Chunks of the Senate Building were ripped out and sent flying by shells from French tanks when Allied forces stormed into Paris. French tankmen riding American-made Sherman tanks thrust in from the southern part of Paris. The famed Luxemburg Gardens was virtually ringed by a solid wall of tanks spouting shells at Germans answering with mortars, artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire.

A heavy concentration of French fire was directed against the gray stone Senate building across the Boulevard St. Michel from the Sorbonne, meeting place of France's academicians and housing the French Hall of Fame.

Explosions thundered through the broad boulevards and machineguns chattered incessantly.

His Candy Rations Ran Out.

Every time my jeep stopped it was mobbed by kids who pleaded for "Bonbon." My five weeks' ration of hard candy, hoarded for this occasion, gave out in one block. Cigarettes were gone after two blocks.

The first American soldiers in Paris may have been Private Robert E. Paup, York, Pa., and Corporal Jack Hamilton of Midlothian, Tex. They came in with a brigadier-general, and with Lieut. Melvin Stock of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Capt. Howard J. Crager, 536 West 111th street, New York city, who are public relations officers.

Whizzing past with squeaky sirens went red Parisian fire-wagons picking their way through traffic.

When I first saw Paris today it was for just a few brief moments. As soon as my jeep crossed into the city limits a six-wheeled armored car—made in America and manned by Frenchmen—tore out in pursuit. It shouldered the jeep over to the curb, and a blond young Frenchman waving a tommygun got out.

Frenchman Stopped Reporters.

In an excited manner, he said his captain had ordered that none but French vehicles be permitted to pass—apparently some one had the idea this should be an all-French show.

After we argued a while the young Frenchman squared away to shoot off the jeep's tires—and then we turned around in a hurry. With the snout of the armored car's French 57-mm. gun—also made in America—pointing at our heads, we beat an inglorious rtreat.

Beyond the city limits Lieut.-Col. Bertram Kalisch of 6819 Burns street, Forest Hills, N. Y., saved the situation by attaching our jeep to his official in-bound film unit.

Wildest Night in Its History.

Paris greeted the surrender with one of the wildest nights in its history, but machine-gun and rifle shots played a staccato overture to the blaring brass bands celebrating the end of German rule.

From dusk until early morning it seemed as if everybody was shooting in all directions, and there was occasional cannonading.

Some of the shooting was at Germans still fighting after the formal surrender, but a lot of it was simply Parisians letting off steam.

A quick tour of the city showed Paris was virtually unscarred by war. The greatest damage was to buildings in the Luxemburg Garden area where the Germans made a last stand.

When the sun rose this morning, all was quiet, and Paris was going her serene way again.

Flower Girls on Hand.

Eighty-year-old flower girls were selling multihued blossoms on Seine bridges, all seized intact by Patriots. Before the Eternal Flame which burned throughout the war sisters and nuns in white held a morning ceremony.

The usual bouquet of flowers—brilliant red gladioli—was at the head of the flame with a note reading:

"France lives after Hitler."

From the arch was draped a fifty-foot tricolor. On the sidewalk beside the arch was an overturned, burned-out German staff car.

The School of Mines which faces the Boulevard St. Germain and the Senate Building were badly blasted. In the buildings still lay some Germans. In the streets approaching Luxemburg workmen were dismantling cobblestone and sandbag barricades from which protruded the snouts of silent 88s.

The face of the venerable Chamber of Deputies was scarred by bullet holes and the President's Palace standing between the Senate Building and Chamber of Deputies had gaping cannon holes in the front and all windows were shattered.

The Invalides Palace where Napoleon's tomb is located escaped damage. It was here that Hitler came in 1940 to preen himself before the tomb of the man he tried to outdo.

The famed Pont Neuf bridge leading across the Seine to the Palace of Arts still was barricaded. The bridge and palace were not scarred.

There was one big shell hole in the facade of the Home Ministry building on the left bank of the Seine.

At least 100 American-made French tanks were dispersed in a park at the foot of the Champs Elysees, and over and inside them clambered admiring Parisians young and old.

In the Place de la Concorde, statues erected in honor of French cities were intact. The statue to Strasbourg, which was draped when Hitler occupied that city, was draped today, as were all others.

The cream-colored American Embassy was not damaged. The Hotel Crillon, next door which had been German headquarters, was pocked by bullets and shells.

The famous Maxim's Restaurant near by, long shuttered, was readied for reopening.

The beautiful many columned Church of Madeleine stood in the brilliant morning sun unscathed, with throngs of worshippers passthrough its massive doors to offer prayers and thanksgiving.

Stars and Stripes Fly.

Atop the Eiffel Tower the Tricolor was embraced today by the Stars and Stripes and Union Jack.

Roving bands of French resistance fighters hunted down German snipers still holding out in scattered sections of the city today.

The last major battle in Paris ended yesterday afternoon when some 400 Germans barricaded in the French Chamber of Deputies surrendered after an hour-long fight with the F. F. I. and French Second Armored Division, which used tanks to quell them.

As late as 11:15 last night three German noncoms with rifles were caught hiding in rooms of the Hotel Meurice.

The sincerity and enthusiasm of the hysterical welcome by the French populace overwhelmed the awed American troops. This attitude was summarized by Corporal Michael Tkacsik, 5768 71st street, Maspeth, Queens, who said.

"I've never been kissed by so many women before in my life. Today made up for two and a half years I have spent overseas in Iceland, England and France. It showed me what we are fighting for, and what liberty means to these people."

The German surrender came in a bare and dingy railway station

Paris Quieter Today.

London, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—Paris, first Allied capital to be released from under the Nazi heel, emerged into comparative calm today after a storm of patriot rebellion and a fiercely fought battle between Allied troops and thousands of Hitler's Elite Guards in the center of the city.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle had formally proclaimed liberation of the city after more than four years of Nazi tyranny, and Supreme Headquarters today announced that the situation was "fairly quiet" althouh a few snipers remained to be wiped out especially in the Davron section.

Back in the capital after four years of fighting from exile, Gen. de Gaulle addressed cheering crowds last night in front of the Prefecture in Paris. In his broadcast speech the shouting and singing of the crowd could be heard clearly.

"Paris is free now—freed by the hands of Frenchmen—the capital of fighting France, of France the great eternal," Gen. de Gaulle declared.

[Gen. Charles de Gaulle will attend a solemn Te Deum in Notre Dame this afternoon, the London radio reported today in a broadcast recorded by CBS.]

In his broadcast speech, Gen. De Gaulle declared that even though Paris has been liberated, and the Germans chased from much of France "we will not rest or be satisfied until we enter—as is only right—upon the enemy's own soil as conquerors."

France, he said, "will take her place among the great nations which will organize the peace."

Paris Wildly Celebrates Signing Of Final Surrender By Germans

By Edward D. Ball

NIGHT

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP)—Paris is free today, but the old town has a terrific hangover.

The final unconditional surrender was signed at 6 P. M. last night in the dingy baggage master's office in Montparnasse railroad station, and Paris greeted it with one of the wildest nights in its history.

But machine-gun and rifle shots played a staccato overture to the blaring brass bands celebrating the end of German rule.

Parisians Let Off Steam

From dusk until early morning it seemed as if everybody was shooting in all directions, and there was occasional cannonading.

Some of the shooting was at Germans still fighting after the formal surrender, but a lot of it was simply Parisians letting off steam.

A quick tour of the city showed Paris was actually unscarred by war. The greatest damage was to buildings in the Luxembourg Garden area where the Germans made a last stand.

When the sun rose this morning all was quiet and Paris was going her serene way again.

Bouquet At Head Of Flame

Eighty-year-old flower "girls" were selling multi-hued blossoms on Seine bridges, all seized intact by Patriots. Before the eternal flame, which burned throughout the war, sisters and nuns in white held a morning ceremony.

The usual bouquet of flowers—brilliant red gladioli—was at the head of the flame with a note reading:

"France lives after Hitler."

From the arch was draped a 50-foot Tricolor. On the sidewalk beside the arch was an overturned, burned-out German staff car.

The German surrender came in a bare and dingy railway station office.

Seated in this cubbyhole at an unpainted wooden table was Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz, German commander of the Paris garrison. He first faced Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc and then a United States corps commander and signed the order to his troops which read:

"Resistance in the military district and defense points is immediately to be stopped. Signed, Von Choltitz, General of Infantry."

De Gaulle Visits Station

Copies of the surrender order immediately were given to German officers who were escorted by American, British and French officers in jeeps to parts of the city where German units were fighting.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, who was in the city at the time of the surrender, visited the station but did not meet Choltitz.

In midmorning Leclerc's office had contacted Choltitz at the Maurice Hotel, but the lines were cut. Then a courier was sent with the unconditional surrender demand.

Signed Copies Exchanged

Signed copies were exchanged between Choltitz and Leclerc and a French guard went to the Maurice to escort the German commander to Montparnasse station. After going through the formality of accepting the surrender the cold, unbending Leclerc posed outside the station with Choltitz.

Choltitz first surrendered personally to General Leclerc and then to the United States corps commander of which Leclerc's second French armored division is a part.

The corps commander talked with Choltitz in the presence of Lieut. Col. Robert Low, of New York city, who is a member of the corps commander's staff.

"Although I felt this was my show I did not resent their crying a bit. I wondered how they would have reacted if they had been entering their native city under the same conditions.

"Thousands upon thousands of Parisians pressed in upon up, kissed us and deluged us with flowers, thanks and all the ingenuity of Parisian gratefulness. We were apparently the first Americans they had seen enter Paris, and shouts of 'Voila les Americans; bravo, bravo, merci' rang out again and again.

Home Again To Paris, Crying Like A Baby

By Henry B. Jameson

NIGHT

Outside Paris, Aug. 25 (AP—Delayed)—What is believed to be the first American vehicle to enter Paris today was driven by Capt. Sachal Bollas, 36, of Los Angeles, who was born in Paris and had not been there since 1927.

A member of the United States Ninth Air Force public relations staff, he was sent to France soon after the invasion as an escorting officer and guide to assist war correspondents. In civilian life he was vice-president of the Birtscher Corporation, medical equipment manufacturers of Los Angeles. He was drafted into the army in March, 1942. His wife and baby live at Glendora, Cal.

"Cried Like Baby"

Following is the dramatic story of his entry into Paris amid tears and cheers as he told it to me.

"I had promised myself I would be perfectly composed when and if I entered Paris, but I arrived crying like a baby.

"The sight of the old forties—Parisian abbreviation for the fortifications which used to surround old Paris before parts of the suburbs were incorporated into the metropolitan area—was a sneaky blow and I began sniffling hopelessly.

"Masses of people ahead of us were so Parisian in spirit and reaction that the last remnants of my composure melted away and tears began rolling down my bearded, dirty face.

Deluged With Flowers

"I looked around and saw four correspondents with me crying, too.

Girls Get In Jeep

"Meanwhile, we were by-passing French armor, popping in and out of rumbling tank columns. I was having trouble driving the jeep through the crowds and barricades and in and around vehicles.

"Within five blocks we had a jeep full of Parisian girls. I don't know how they got in or on, but there were four or five sitting on the boys' laps and four more huddled on the radiator.

"We were smeared with lipstick. I have never been kissed by so many pretty girls in one day, but I cannot remember the face of a single one of them. All the time I was trying to dry my tears and get hold of myself.

Asked Why He Cried

"People would ask me why I cried. In self-defense I would explain I was a Parisian, and had not seen the city in 17 years. Then the shouts, exclamations, kisses, handshakes and questions would start all over again—leaving me worse off than before.

"All the time I wanted to feel happy and exuberant like the crowd. I was mad at myself. If the crowd had been crying I would have felt better. But they were singing the Marseillaise, hopping up and down, waving arms, weapons, handbags.

"In this incredible Hollywood setting we got to the Place Denfert where the statue of Lion de Belfort reminded me of the times I used to go visit my aunt. I wondered if she was in the crowd with all my cousins and relatives.

Hear First Shots Fired

"Here we heard the first shots fired. They seemed to come from all directions. As we entered the Boulevard du Montparnasse the firing became heavier. Our jeep cleared in a hurry and the crowd began to scatter.

"We swung in between two tanks for protection. They were firing at the top windows of a row of six-story houses. As I craned my neck from side to side hoping to sight a sniper before he saw me, all I could see were steel shutters closing slowly as if by their own accord.

"One young fellow next to us seemed to be enjoying himself. He was shaking hands with us as he lay on the ground, grinning from ear to ear.

"After 15 minutes the firing stopped. We climbed into the jeep again and reached the head of an armored column by the Rue de Sevres and near the Rue du Bac. The resistance boys were everywhere, armed with every type of weapon, and doing a magnificent job in going into buildings in search of German snipers and racing around the streets in absolute contempt for ambushes.

Exposed To Nazi Positions

"We swept on down to the Esplanade des Invalides overlooking the Seine. The dome of Les Invalides was resplendent in the brilliant sunshine. The Esplanade was deserted—an odd sight. We were fully exposed to German positions on the other side of the bridge.

"On the way out of the city there were fewer people on the streets. They all looked in good health, and the children amazingly so.

"In answer to my inevitable question they said they'd never had enough to eat but there had not been any actual famine. Another two or three days, they thought, would have brought a real famine.

"They told me hospitals were jammed with tubercular children but, by and large, the Parisians of the south bank were not famished looking."

PARIS IS WARM AND HAPPY TODAY

NIGHT

By DON WHITEHEAD.

Paris, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—Paris is bathed in sunshine and happiness today and below the windows of my hotel in the heart of the city is spread a scene of peace contrasting strangely with the turmoil of battle that raged yesterday.

In the broad crossing of two famous streets Parisians are strolling in the warm sun. Around each parked jeep is a group of men, women and children talking and laughing with American soldiers who are giving them cigarettes and sweets and sharing their hard rations.

Paris is exhausted from that uproarious day of liberation yesterday. It is too much that any people could pour out their emotion in such an overflow of joy as that of yesterday when the American and French forces entered and then keep it going for another day.

Now there is only the sound of tinkling bicycle bells—every one in Paris seems to have a bicycle—of laughter and occasional cheers. In the distance there is the faint thunder of an occasional gun, but resistance inside the city is virtually at an end.

And this day is just as fantastic as those hours of last evening, when the millions of Paris swarmed through the streets in a carnival of celebration over their long-awaited liberation. Crowds stood in the streets, and under the starlight sang the "Marseillaise" and cheered the American and French troops.

The hotels were palaces of luxury to those of us who managed to get rooms. Electric lights still were on and there was running water. The hotels had no food, but there was wine and champagne and cognac for the celebrators.

Even as the military cleaned out the last resistance French political leaders moved in to reorganize the government of Paris.

Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's forces began the great task of helping feed and administer the city.

Both French and American forces which entered Paris were parts of Bradley's Twelfth Army group.

Avignon Joyously Greets Yanks

NIGHT

By Sydney A. Feder

With American Forces in Avignon, Aug. 25 (AP—Delayed)—In every village and hamlet of the last 30 miles of the push to this city, hundreds of hysterically joyous villagers jammed the roadways.

Laughing, crying, cheering, they showered kisses and embraces on the advancing troops of the American Seventh Army, chasing an enemy now in full retreat.

Stage Wild Celebration

At the Place de la Mairie in the heart of this ancient 14th-century seat of the Papal throne and inside the medieval wall, the citizenry staged a wild celebration.

Accompanied by Capt. Don Reap, Dunmore, Pa., Larry Newman, of International News Service, and I were the first American newspapermen to enter the city, a couple of hours after the first troops.

Townspeople came to us and gripped our hands. Their eyes were filled with tears. They repeated over and over, "thank you, thank you."

City Damaged

The expressions were sincere and heartfelt, even though our air raids had done considerable damage to the city and killed between 500 and 1,000 citizens. Most of the damage was done outside the old walls of the city, but even within several buildings were crushed.

The tower of the Pope's palace still was standing and the citizens said the castle itself was unhurt.

There was no fight at all in Avignon for the American troops. The French Forces of the Interior had everything ready for their entrance.

Pushing Baby Buggies

"Many were pushing along empty baby buggies so they could bring back more," said one soldier. He declared the main highway leading south of the city from the Orleans gate looked "like the Oklahoma land rush all over again."

It was along this same route that Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc's French Second Armored Division traveled yesterday and entered Paris after knocking out two mobile German 88-mm. guns on the way.

Few of the famous Parisian restaurants were open to the public. To get a good meal it was necessary to find someone with entree into one of the black market restaurants, which have been serving de luxe dinners all through the occupation in defiance of food rationing regulations.

Can Still Drink

Their prices were exorbitant, and only Vichy officials, German army officers and highly placed collaborationists generally could afford them.

Hotels quartering American officers and men had nothing on the menu but hot water—the soldiers supplied their own coffee and "K" rations. No full meals were served and the troops were expected to subsist on regular army fare until arrangements could be completed to rush in emergency food shipments from agriculturally rich sections of France.

But as usual in Paris, alcoholic drinks still were available in quantities.

PARISIANS FORAGE ABROAD FOR FOOD

Exodus Through Orleans Gate Looked Like Land Rush

DAY

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP)—A great exodus began from Paris to the countryside today with thousands of persons searching for food on surrounding farms.

The food shortage, resulting from a transport breakdown and the three-day fight for the city during which no supplies were shipped in, was critical in some areas. But many families had stores for just such an emergency.

Housewives by the hundreds rode out of the city on bicycles to which they tied large market baskets to carry back whatever eggs, butter, meat or vegetables they might be able to barter or buy from farmers.

began organizing to feed the people at communal restaurants.

As almost all available means of transportation are being used to haul guns, ammunition and war material to the troops driving the Germans out of France, the bulk of food and medical supplies will have to wait until some of the trucks now used on the battle fronts can be spared, supreme headquarters said.

Hundreds of French drivers have been recruited to load and take the trucks to Paris when they become available. Captured German vehicles may be used in some cases.

Distribution of food within the city will be the responsibility of French authorities with civil affairs officers on General Dwight D. Eisenhower's staff assisting in the early stages of the program.

Food from the agricultural districts of Brittany and Normandy will be sent as the highways, bridges and railroads are repaired.

Coal is another vital problem and transport for it must be found in order to restore the domestic gas supply.

Emphasing that the steps being taken were only temporary, supreme headquarters said the overall policy of the Allied leaders was to do everything possible to enable the French to help themselves.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 26 (AP).—Transportation is the most difficult problem facing officials of the civil affairs division of the Allied armies as they rush emergency food and medical supplies to Paris.

Nazis Below Lyon Face Trap As Yanks Peril Escape Lines

NOLAND-NORGAARD

Rome, Aug. 26 (AP)—The battle of southern France entered its final phase today as the Americans slashed deeply up the Rhone Valley in a race to cut off the fleeing German forces below Lyon.

Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's fast-rolling Seventh Army already had freed all of southern France east of the Rhone below newly-captured Avignon and Briancon, the latter only five miles west of the Italian frontier, and now controlled more than 9,000 square miles of territory.

The German high command said, "In the Rhone Valley severe fighting is in progress with enemy mechanized formations which are trying to intercept our movements in the direction of Lyon."

Break Into Valley Reported

There was no comment from Patch's headquarters on this or on a German report that an American column from the east had broken into the Rhone Valley near Montelimar, nearly 50 miles north of Avignon and less than 85 below Lyon, and was astride the highway and rail routes of German retreat.

It was perhaps significant, however, that the Allied command had given no intimation whatever for three days on the activities of the mechanized American task force which in the first week of the August 15 invasion drove 140 miles deep into the enemy's east flank to Grenoble.

[Some unconfirmed border reports have placed this force as far northward as the Swiss-French frontier, but a swing southwestward down the Isere river from Grenoble to the Rhone would be a logical development.]

The Germans claimed their armor was counterattacking the American attempts to bottle up the narrow Rhone escape line, but such a commitment probably would cost the forces involved their last chance to get out northward to the Reich past the Swiss border.

Already the American invasion perimeter was more than 300 miles in extent from the Rhone delta area through Grenoble and Briancon, and down to Antibes on the coast beyond Cannes.

Roaming Widely

Seventh Army columns aided by French patriots appeared to be roaming widely, seeking out and destroying the disorganized German groupings wherever they could be found.

Both in the lower Rhone Valley after the fall of Avignon, Arles and Tarascon, and in the area beyond Grenoble, the situation was comparable to that in Brittany after the first American break-through from the Normandy beachhead.

The routed Germans had been broken into scores of small bodies so widely dispersed that hundreds of Allied planes were searching out the whole zone ahead of the ground forces but rarely finding targets on the roads.

Progress At Big Port

Determined resistance to the death was found only in surrounded forces such as those at Toulon and Marseille. At both those big ports the Allies reported continuing progress.

The French said the naval arsenal at Toulon had been seized and all pockets east of the naval base had been cleaned out, while in Marseille they continued to clear resistance points and were attacking the German-held Notre Dame de la Garde area.

Patch's headquarters announced that the French had taken Forts D'Artigues and Malbousquet, in Toulon, while the only organized German resistance remaining in the so-called six-fours district, and that further progress was being made inside Marseille, where "German damage has been extensive, with demolitions wrecking many of the quays, warehouses, dry docks and port facilities.

Wilson Writes Patch

The Allied Mediterranean commander, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, sent Patch a message of congratulations on the southern France operation, saying he was sure it would "result in total destruction of the German 19th Army."

The German high command communique said, "Our garrisons of fortified points in the fighting areas of Toulon and Marseille are still holding their own in a heavy struggle against strong enemy attacks."

Capture of Avignon, famous old city of the Papal "Babylonian exile" from 1309-1377, gave the Americans a firm grip on one of the important Rhone Valley communications centers.

Good Weather Helps

The city of 60,000 was somewhat damaged by Allied air raids, but was entered without a fight due to advance "preparations" by the French Forces of the Interior. Good weather continued to aid the Allies.

The Allied naval command announced that a 516-round bombardment by four cruisers Friday hit enemy coastal batteries south of Toulon and that only three enemy batteries remained active in that area.

Enemy positions in the Marseille area were bombarded by a battleship and two cruisers and naval guns also supported operations in the direction of the Italian frontier.

The French cruiser Emile Bertin fired 73 6-inch shells into Nice harbor and set fire to a merchant ship.

Nimes, Carcassonne, Montpellier Held Free

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Brazzaville radio recorded by CBS broadcast a report from Algiers today that three cities in southwestern France between Marseille and the Spanish border—Nimes, Carcassonne and Montpellier—"have been liberated."

The report was not officially confirmed.

Nimes is 60 miles northwest of Marseille; Montpellier is 78 miles west of Marseille, and Carcassonne is 150 miles west of Marseille and 50 southeast of Toulouse.

Yanks Capture Avignon And Briancon

GEO TUCKER

Rome, Aug. 26 (AP)—American columns have occupied the Alpine town of Briancon, near the Italian frontier more than 100 miles north of the captured seaport of Cannes, and other Seventh Army forces have driven into Avignon, key communications center in the delta of the Rhone Valley, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Germans reported fighting near Montelimar, nearly 50 miles north of Avignon, but there was no Allied confirmation.

Reports from southern France indicated, however, that the situation was comparable with that in Brittany when the Americans first broke out of the Normandy beachhead.

Forces Roaming Widely

Patriot and Seventh Army forces appeared to be roaming widely, seeking out disorganized enemy groups who were fleeing through a narrow gap between Allied forces in northern and southern France.

The German radio said today that clashes with probing American and Patriot forces in the Rhone Valley as far as Valence and Loriol had occurred.

Valence is 110 miles up the Rhone Valley from the Mediterranean coast and Loriol is about 15 miles to the south.

Berlin said several hundred French "rebels" were encircled at Loriol and that 12 American tanks as well as self-propelled guns and trucks were destroyed at Valence.

The triumphant advance of Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's troops freed nearly all of southern France east of the Rhone river and south of Avignon and Briancon. At the eastern coastal end of the invasion front his forces were fighting less than 20 miles from the Italian frontier, pushing forward on Nice from Antibes, which fell yesterday.

Arles, Tarascon Occupied

Capture of Avignon, with a population of 60,000, placed the Allies firmly astride Rhone Valley communication lines, which are the last feasible enemy escape route, and extended the front in the west to a depth of 24 miles.

Just before Avignon fell to the Americans, French troops reported they had occupied Arles and Tarascon, Rhone river cities below Avignon.

Briancon is five miles from the Italian-French border on the French side and 70 miles from the junction of the French, Italian and Swiss frontiers.

French Gain In Toulon

French troops in Toulon have captured Forts d'Artigues and Malbousquet, leaving the only organized Nazi resistance within the naval base city centered in the so-called "Six-fours" district, it was announced tonight.

AUG 27 1944

Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters also announced further progress in eliminating Nazi opposition inside Marseille, where "German damage has been extensive with demolitions wrecking many of the quays, warehouses, dry docks and port facilities."

The navy reported that enemy guns in Cannes were bombarded heavily before the city surrendered and that cannon from Allied warships had also fired on inland targets.

Two enemy ships were attacked by torpedoes, and one was sunk and the other damaged, a naval spokesman said.

Road Bridge Knocked Out

The Allied air arm attacked communications north of Avignon and knocked out an important road bridge between Nimes and Montpelier, southwest of Avignon. The rail bridge across the Rhone river at Avignon was bombed.

Marauders piloted by Frenchmen attacked gun positions on the island of Rattoneau, outside Marseille, reporting direct hits on the target.

Good weather which has aided the Allies since D-day held, and armored columns had the advantage of dry, hard roads in most of the 9,000 square miles of the liberated area.

Hendaye Expects Yanks

Irun, Spain, Aug. 26 (AP)—French authorities said they expected American troops to reach the Spanish-French frontier at Hendaye, across from Irun, some time today.

Information reaching here from the FFI said the Americans had helped liberate Bordeaux, France's fourth largest city.

(The French radio at Algiers reported capture of Bordeaux Thursday, but Allied sources have not yet given confirmation.)

NAZIS RETREAT TO GOTHIC LINE

ROME, Aug. 26—(AP) Germans are retreating to the shelter of the Gothic Line in central portions of the Italian front and Polish forces of the Eighth army are feeling out new enemy positions north of the Metauro river, Allied headquarters said today.

The Nazi withdrawal to Gothic Line fortifications in the northern Appenine range was concentrated mostly in the area of the upper Tiber river and on the east side of the upper Arno behind Pontassieve. Following up th retreat, Eighth army units drove without opposition to Apecchio, 35 miles from the Adriatic and 24 miles due south of the principality of San Marino.

Polish troops, continuing their aggrissive patroling activity north of the Metauro, found roads, river crossings and front hill positions heavily mined and boobytrapped.

RAF Mustangs shot up four trains yesterday on the Zagreb-Banova Jaruga rail line in Yugoslavia—at least two of which were loaded with troops—and strafed a motor convoy near Arta, Greece. There still was no definite sign, however, that the enemy was trying to escape those countries following upon Romania's surrender.

Thirteen enemy planes were destroyed in yesterday's AAF operations, most of them by American fighters escorting Fortresses and Liberators on a raid against two aircraft component factories and an airdrome at Brno, Czechoslovakia and Prostejov airdrome, 14 miles northeast of Brno.

The RAAF lost three heavy bombers and nine other planes from all operations.

Lieut. Michael Drezas of Bloomfield, N. J., jumped into fifth place among American aces in the Mediterranean theater by shooting down two ME109's over Czechoslovakia. This boosted his total to 12.

RAF medium heavy and medium bombers last night started many fires in a railyard at Ravenna in northern Italy.

STRONGPOINTS TAKEN BY FRENCH IN TOULON

ROME, Aug. 26 — (AP) French troops in Toulon have captured Forts D'Artigues and Malbousquet, leaving the only organized Nazi resistance within the naval base city centered in the so-called "Six-Fours" district, it was announced tonight.

Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters also announced further progress in eliminating Nazi opposition inside Marseille, where "German damage has been extensive with demolitions wrecking many of the quays, warehouses, drydocks and port facilities."

NAVY NAMES WARSHIPS IN RIVIERA LANDING

ROME, Aug. 26—(AP) The Battleship U. S. S. Nevada and the Cruisers U. S. S. Quincy and Augusta were among the scores of American warships with the Allied fleet in amphibious operations opening the invasion of Southern France, Aug. 15, it was announced today.

The three warships also participated in the initial invasion of the continent at Normandy.

The Nevada, Quincy and Augusta operated on the extreme left flank of the southern France assault area. The Augusta and Nevada were used extensively in the bombardment of coastal batteries on the islands of Levant and Port Cros in the first phase of the operations.

Later with the Nevada they stood off Toulon and bombarded the great naval base whose strength was formidable because of the large caliber French guns the Nazis salvaged from scuttled French warships and embedded in concrete.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill met aboard the Augusta Aug. 14, 1941, and drew up the historic Atlantic Charter. The Nevada, damaged and beached when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, participated in the bombardment of Cherbourg.

French Representative Received By Pope Pius

Vatican City, Aug. 26 (AP)—Pope Pius XII received M. Guerin, representative of the French provisional government to the Holy See, in a private audience today.

Guerin called later on the State Secretariat.

The Vatican newspaper Il Osservatore Romano, said that Leon Berard, French Ambassador to the Holy See, had informed the State Secretariat he considered his mission ended since Marshal Henri Petain cannot exercise his powers.

Rome Reds Assail Musician

Leaflets in Theater Call Previtali Typical of Fascist Era

ROME, Aug. 26 (AP).—Communists conducted a noisy demonstration against Maestro Fernando Previtali at the Adriano Theater here last night.

At the conclusion of Previtali's presentation of Schubert's Fourth Symphony thousands of handbills in Italian and English were thrown from the balconies charging him with being "very representative" of the Fascist era in the musical field.

GIVES UP SOUTH OF BORDEAUX

Nazi Force Of 10,000 Surrenders To Besiegers, French Say

FOLTZ

Irun, Spain, Aug. 26 (AP)—Ten thousand Germans encircled by American and French forces around Belin, 30 miles south of Bordeaux, surrendered late this afternoon, French authorities in Hendaye said tonight.

The capitulation of the Nazis ended all organized German resistance in southwestern France.

American and French forces which had trapped the Germans had been hacking them to pieces before the Germans hoisted a white flag.

Fled To The Woods

According to reports from Hendaye, France, across the frontier from Irun, the Germans evacuated Bordeaux Thursday and moved into the wooded Landes region, centering in Belin.

The Americans and French were declared closing in on them and gaining a daily increasing bag of prisoners as Germans filtered out under white flags.

Communiques Mum

[Communiques from SHAEF and from the Mediterranean command have not touched upon the reported operations along France's Bay of Biscay coast.]

French authorities in Hendaye said the remaining German forces were too weak to try to break out and apparently were content to sit and hope vainly that a German army from outside might free them.

Other Germans in small groups high in the Pyrenees were reported waiting for the Allies to come and take them prisoners rather than risk death by traveling through patriot-held territory in an effort to get back to Germany. French control of the border prevented them from escaping into Spain.

The territory once held by eight German divisions, filled with swarms of German agents and policed by thousands of Vichy gunmen now is tranquil under the Tricolor.

This has been accomplished in less than a week. On Monday two uniformed French officers crossed the international bridge at Irun to Hendaye. One was a French jeweler at San Sebastian who had dusted off his World War I uniform the day before and the other was a young captain from Algiers.

Tonight these two men as representatives of Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig commanded a force estimated at 50,000 men which held at least 12,000 German prisoners and maintained order in 10 French departments where millions live.

GERMANS SUFFER MAJOR DEFEAT IN FRENCH BATTLE

LONDON, Aug. 26 — (AP) The German flight in France appeared to be spreading rapidly tonight as Allied armies liberating the country from the west and south made wholesale advances and drew to within 200 miles of a junction.

Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American Seventh army began a drive up the wide Rhone valley and struck eastward to within five miles of the Italian frontier and by onight had wrested more than 0,000 square miles from the Nazis.

Push Into Eastern France

Allied armies invading from the west were striking toward Alsace and Lorraine deep into eastern France, and from the shattered Seine line were driving northward toward the Luxembourg and German borders.

The Germans were fleeing along a wide front in the north but making bitter rearguard stands, while in the east the speed of the American armored stabs fanning out beyond Troyes indicated slight enemy resistance.

Similarly Allied columns driving North from the southern invasion beachhead apparently found little opposition, and were reported well beyond captured Grenoble in territory now cleared of Germans and controlled by French patriots all the way to the Swiss border.

It was these columns and those striking southeastward from Troyes which were reported less than 100 miles apart.

The magnitude of the German debacle in the south was indicated by the fact that a party of war correspondents, including Edward Kennedy of the Associated Press, drove clear to the Swiss border in a jeep well ahead of the advancing army in territory conquered by the French Maquis Patriot forces.

The Allied advances were described as considerably greater than yet announced and the German situation far more critical than had been generally believed.

Patriots Continue Attack

French army forces continued their methodical reduction of the German holdings in Marseille and Toulon, the two great southern ports where organized enemy resistance remained.

The Germans contended they had thrown armor into a battle to stave off the American efforts to bottle up the Rhone valley escape route, but they admitted the Americans were "trying to intercept our movements in the direction of Lyon."

The Allied Mediterranean commander-in-chief, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, congratulated Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch on the American-French progress and expressed confidence the drives would "result in total destruction of the German 19th army."

In northern France supreme Allied headquarters said "the elimination of the German Seventh army as a fighting entity has decided the battle of France."

It broadcast a warning to Luxembourg, Alsace and Lorraine that those areas might soon become a theater of war, as only the harassed survivors of the German Seventh army and a few divisions of the reduced German 15th army stood in the path of the Allies.

Bombers Pound Nazi Oil Plants; Fights Hotter

London, Aug. 26 (AP) — Nearly 1,000 United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators carried the smashing new aerial offensive against Europe through the third straight day today, most of them battering oil targets in Germany.

Others gave the besieged Brittany port of Brest its third pounding in 36 hours.

Up to 750 heavy bombers, with as many escorting fighters, ranged over northwest and southwest Germany in a third consecutive blow at Hitler's oil plants.

1,400 Planes Out Last Night

The daylight blows followed overnight operations in France and Germany by 1,400 RAF bombers and 6,450 flights yesterday from British and French bases.

Targets today included the Scholvan-Buer and Nordstern synthetic-oil plants at Gelsenkirchen; an oil refinery at Emmerich, near the Duth border; an oil finishing plant at Salzbergen, west of Osnabruck, and synthetic-oil facilities at Ludwigshafen, near the Swiss border.

German batteries and fortified positions at Brest were attacked by up to 250 Liberators and Flying Fortresses, aiding ground assaults to crush resistance in the big Atlantic port. Brest's defenses were the target last night for 1,350 tons of RAF explosives.

Opel Motor Works Bombed

Clear weather over France and Germany enabled both American air task forces to drop their bombs visually today.

In another concentrated attack before dawn the RAF dumped nearly 1,700 tons of bombs on the Opel Motor Works at Russelsheim, between Mainz and Frankfurt.

Other planes raided flying-bomb launching sites and a rocket depot in northern France and the rail and industrial town of Darmstadt, in the upper Rhineland. Mosquitos unloaded two-ton blockbusters on Berlin.

Nazis Send Up More Fighters

From Brest to the Baltic the Allied planes fought through increasing opposition.

The Allied air forces lost 78 planes in their extensive operations yesterday and throughout the night. These included 17 bombers, 7 fighters for the United States Eighth Air Force, 19 planes for the United States Ninth Air Force, and 27 RAF planes.

Against their losses the Allies tallied 144 German aircraft destroyed in the air and on the ground.

The amount of fighter opposition encountered was regarded here as a possible sign that the Germans may now be beaten to a point where they have decided to risk their remaining planes in a desperate defense of Germany itself.

Nazi Fighters Swarm Up

Nazi fighters swarmed up from their new bases around Cambrai, Soissons, Reims and San Quentin—and the Ninth United States Air Forces yesterday bagged 51 ME-109s and FW-190s in the air, plus 41 on the ground. Ten more German fighters were caught in the Beauvais area.

One of the day's kills was made at Dijon, where 29 clumsy troop carrier Ju-52s were left smoldering, and also two fighters.

The Second Tactical Air Force alone yesterday destroyed 269 motor vehicles, 56 tanks, 29 barges, 2 motor vessels and 2 tugs.

Seine Ships Set Afire

Both heavy and medium bombers made attacks in support of the finish fight for the liberation of Brest. British Beaufighters escorted by Polish flyers in Mustangs set fire to a heavily armed escort vessel northwest of Borkum in the Frisian Islands and left two other ships ablaze in the 16-ship convoy. Typhoons and Spitfires harassing the German retreat across the Seine saturated the lower reaches of the river with bombs and rockets. They set fire to at least two large ships, which later were believed sunk.

24-Hour Buzzbomb Lull

London and the southern counties have had more than 24 hours of relief from flying bomb attacks. There was not a single alert in the London area last night. For the first time in over two months the Home Security communique announced: "Up to 7 A. M. there has been nothing to report."

RAF heavy bombers late yesterday evening bombed robot launching sites and the night's bombing activity, coupled with the lull in robot attacks, indicated that the constant hammering of flying-bomb firing and supply points was proving effective.

YANK BOMBERS HIT OIL DEPOTS

Also Harass Foe Streaming East To Reich Borders

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—American heavy bombers, operating on a schedule of 100 sorties per hour since 8 P. M. Friday night, joined tactical air units today in a series of smashing assaults at Germany's oil-production centers as well as supply depots and communication in France.

The bombers lent a massive hand to the ground troops rapidly obliterating the Nazi Seventh Army and driving closer to the Reich borders.

Enemy air opposition in the past 24 hours was slight, after a brief flareup in the preceding three days.

Few Nazi Planes Up

From the heavy bombers over Germany, the mediums over northeastern France and fighters and fighter-bombers over the Seine the reports were identical—few if any Nazi fighter planes anywhere. The bombers reported flak over Germany ranged from light to intense.

One Nazi fighter was destroyed in the air and another on the ground in the operations against Germany and American losses for the day were ten bombers and six fighters.

Some 1,500 heavy bombers and escorting fighters ranged over a wide area of Germany battering vital oil targets for the third day in succession, and a smaller force of Flying Fortresses and Liberators teamed with Allied warships' heavy artillery in a final assault to wipe out the stubborn German garrison holding out in the port of Brest at the tip of Brittany.

40,000 Nazis Raked

The tactical air forces threw hundreds of fighter bombers into nonstop sweeps all across northern France blasting at some 40,000 Germans caught in the Seine trap and hunting down others on the northeast side of the Seine fleeing toward Germany.

One hundred and six tanks and 768 motor vehicles were destroyed in the past 24 hours.

Targets for the Fortresses and Liberators keeping up the pressure on Hitler's badly depleted oil supply were the Scholvenbuer and Nordstern synthetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, an oil refinery at Emmerich near the Dutch border, an oil finishing plant at Salzbergen west of Osnabruck and a synthetic oil plant at Ludwigshafen in southern Germany.

2,000 Tons On Motor Worsk

German batteries and other fortified positions were pounded in the important port of Brest, which was hit yesterday by American Marauders and again last night by part of big RAF formations of more than 1,400 bombers.

RAF heavies poured nearly 2,000 tons of bombs on the Opel Motor Works at Russelsheim between Mainz and Frankfurt in Germany, and they hit flying bomb launching sites and rocket depots in northern France.

No Robot Raids For 2 Days Now

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—London and southern England went through the second straight day without a robot bomb attack, the longest quiet interval since the assaults began in mid-June, and there was some cautious hope that the Germans had abandoned their launching bases across the Channel as a result of terrific Allied aerial bombardments and the outflanking of Nazi lines east of the Seine river.

Unofficial reports circulated that the enemy's robot personnel was being evacuated, but many persons believe that even if this is true the Germans will be able to launch their flying bombs from more distant bases by means of increasing their fuel.

Support for this belief was shown in the registration here for women and children wanting to leave London. A total of 2,095 were signed up Thursday and another 1,849 Friday. The fear that the Germans might send over even more destructive explosive rockets prompted much of this movement out of London.

Tribute Is Paid War Reporters

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—In a tribute to war correspondents, Col. J. B. L. Lawrence, army public relations chief in the European theater, said today they were "one of our answers to Hitler—for Hitler used to burn books and with them freedom of expression."

"The war correspondent goes to the front armed only with pencil, notebook and typewriter," Lawrence said in a speech prepared for broadcast to the United States by the Columbia Broadcasting System. "He stands side by side with the soldier, braving the dangers and sharing in the same grim purpose."

He said there were 306 American correspondents accredited to this theater alone.

"You know of their writings and of their broadcasts and of their photographs, newsreels and films," he said. "But I doubt if you know what they have braved to keep the people of our United Nations the best informed publics in the world."

Lawrence read the roll of those killed or captured covering the war, and of those awarded the Purple Heart for wounds suffered from enemy action.

Calls London Front Line

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers Union in the United States, told a press conference today that he'd "just as soon be in France as in London with the buzzbombs. They show that modern war puts people in the city in the front-line trenches."

Ninth's Bomber Chief Promoted

Ninth Air Force Headquarters in England, Aug. 26 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson, head of the Ninth Bomber Command, has been promoted to major general, it was announced tonight by Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Ninth Air Force commander.

De Gaulle In South France

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Radio France, of Algiers, said tonight Gen. Charles de Gaulle was now in southern France after his triumphal visit to Paris.

Some Allied Prisoners Leave Switzerland

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Allied prisoners of war who escaped into Switzerland from Italian and French camps now are able to join up again with Allied forces who speared to the Swiss border of France.

Airmen, however, who bailed out or were forced down over Switzerland on missions taking them over that area cannot rejoin. They were presumed to have been on belligerent missions and were interned. They are allowed outside Swiss camps on parole but are not attempting to leave the country.

The prisoners of war from Italy and France entered Switzerland as refugees, and were not given ...les. Thousands of Britons al...dy are reported making their ...y to join American units. It is ...sumed that some Americans ...laced in Italian prison camps have been able to get to Switzerland, and also will rejoin.

7 German Craft Sunk In Clashes With Allies

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Four German gunboats, two heavily armed escort vessels, and one "R" boat were sunk today in a series of Channel and North Sea actions involving American, British and French light naval craft, the Admiralty announced tonight.

The Allied ships returned to harbor without casualties or damage.

A summary of previous actions off the coasts of France, Belgium and Holland since August 13 showed at least 50 enemy vessels were sunk, set on fire, or badly damaged by British ships in about a dozen actions.

2 U. S. Bombers Collide In England; 16 Die

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—Fourteen American airmen and two civilians a woman and a child, were kille today when two American heav bombers collided over Hitchin Hertfordshire.

One plane exploded in the air, and the other crashed. Four crewmen escaped by parachute. The two civilians were killed, and two others were injured when a bomb from one plane fell into a bungalow.

36 CHILDREN BURIED IN BOMBER MISHAP

FRECKLETON, Eng., Aug. 26.—(AP) This grieving town today buried in a communal grave much of its hopes for tomorow in a mass funeral for 36 children all under six who were killed when a blazing American Liberator bomber crashed into a schoolhouse.

With them were buried eight adults who died at the same time. More than 400 wreaths were heaped on the "T" shaped grave after the ceremony. Services were held in a church so small only the coffin of one unidentified child and teacher could be brought inside.

Four American soldiers served as bearers for two youngsters with whom they had made friends.

Son to Duchess of Gloucester

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP).—A son was born today to the Duchess of Gloucester. The young prince is fifth in direct succession to the British throne, immediately after his brother, Prince William of Gloucester, who is three, and before the eight-year-old Duke of Kent. The baby is the ninth grandchild of the Queen Mother.

NEW COMMAND NAMED FIRST AIRBORNE ARMY

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 26 — (AP) The new command, consolidating the airborne troops of the expeditionary force is to be known officially as the First Airborne army, it was announced today.

American, British and Polish airborne troops are represented in the new command, which has the strength equivalent to that of an army.

4 Allied Correspondents Reach Swiss Border Ahead of U.S. Army

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

MOILLESULAZ, ON THE FRENCH-SWISS FRONTIER, Aug. 26—(AP) Four war correspondents arrived here today in a jeep after traveling more than 200 miles from the Riviera beachhead northward through Maquis-held territory.

The correspondents were Edward Kennedy of the Associated Press; Philip Jordan of the London News Chronicle; Carleton Kent of the Chicago Times and Graham Hovey of International News service.

The jeep driver was Pvt. Douglas Hooey, 26, of Sussex, N. J.

The party was well ahead of U. S. Seventh army units.

Troops Follow Enemy

American troops are moving ahead to cut off the Germans in the southern sector, but their appearance in number at this border is not now expected.

The French themselves have cleaned out the Haute Savoie. Kennedy said they "are running it well, with order well established, so that it is unnecessary for the Americans to enter the area. They have more vital work to do in chasing the Germans."

(Kennedy's own story of his journey had to be submitted to censorship of the Allied Mediterranean command, to which he is accredited, and hence is delayed.)

Kennedy said the trip turned out to be a series of welcomes by thousands of Frenchmen in every town. At Chambery, Annecy, and Annemasse he and his comrades were guests of honor, escorted down festive streets to the cries of "Vive Les Americains."

Frenchmen at these places awaited the arrival of American troops and were disappointed when they did not show up.

At Annemasse the newspapermen arrived just in time for the funeral of four patriots, the last killed in that sector southeast of Geneva in the last battle with the Nazis. Kennedy and his colleagues served as an American honor guard for the ceremony which 4,000 French attended.

Tonight they returned to Annemasse, guests of the town at a formal dinner.

For this writer it was a red-letter day—the first jeep, the first American war correspondent he had seen and he was Kennedy.

(Hawkins is chief of the Associated Press bureau in neutral Bern and has been isolated from American contacts.)

When the jeep stopped a man reached out and shook hands, saying "I am Kennedy."

"Glad to meet you sir," I replied, not noticing the correspondent's badge. He started telling me about his trip. Suddenly it dawned on me.

"You mean Kennedy from Rome," I asked.

"Right," he answered.

We had talked to each other by telephone all over Europe during the past five years but never had met. He was the first outside AP man or any other Allied correspondent I had met since August, 1942.

Hundreds of people rushed as close to the frontier post as they were permitted to see the correspondents.

Celebration parties started spontaneously all over Geneva. Your correspondent is going to one just as soon as this is telephoned.

AIR OF CARNIVAL AMID BLOODSHED

Paris Seems Little Damaged To Newsmen Under Fire

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Paris, Aug. 25 (AP—Delayed)—The part of Paris I have seen—and that must be at lease half of it—is not heavily damaged, but masonry is falling now as our tank guns and machine guns and rifles and the guns of the enemy bellow at each other.

[This was written shortly before the German surrender.]

I am writing this in a house on the Avenue Victor Hugo and it is now under fire, for there are Germans on the roof and our people are trying to knock them off.

Paris is in one great convulsion, but there is a pervading air of carnival about it all in spite of the blood that is flowing. It is like a final fever before a hospital patient passes from a long illness into convalescence.

Coffee cost us 2,000 francs (about $40) per kilogram, tea 6,000 francs. We were allowed 550 grams of butter monthly, 90 grams of meat weekly, 275 grams of bread daily. Each month we received one small cake of soap, some of which was sand. For the past three months we could get only one pound of vegetables monthly and no wine.

We had to line up for hours for our pittance of bread. The German said at first they would take 80 per cent of our foodstuff, but actually they took 98 per cent. When they entered Paris the city had enough food to last two years. Within two weeks they had cleaned it all out. Prices skyrocketed. Butter cost 800 francs per kilogram, meats $50. There was no fruit at any price. In four years we hal no heating whatever.

Germans kept their own restaurants where they had oceans of butter, cakes and fruit which they devoured under our very noses.

For four years we had only wooden shoes. They cost 800 francs ($16.00) a pair for the cheapest ones and 3,000 francs ($60.00) for the best.

Artificial silk stockings cost 600 francs ($12.00) on the black market. A clothes ration totaled 20 points a year—a suit cost 40 points.

American Tells of Life In Paris Under Nazi Rule

Mrs. Maude Rae, a magazine writer who formerly lived in Portland, Ore., has been a resident of Paris eight years. In the following account she tells of what it was like during four years under German rule.

By MRS. MAUDE RAE

PARIS, Aug. 25 (delayed)—(AP) The bottom fell out when the Germans came into Paris in June, 1940.

We realized that everything decent was gone—there would be no tomorrows, just probabilities.

We knew we would be up against terrible difficulties, but we decided to stick it out.

There were 250 of us Americans hiding away in Paris under false identities. I had better not tell just yet what my assumed name was. Since we assumed fictitious names we had no ration cards and had to buy in the black market at exhorbitant prices. The prices in the black market were controlled by the Germans and what they had to sell was usually stolen from

As far as transportation was concerned, I would say Allied bombing was 100 per cent effective. Not even a cat has been able to move into town in months.

A German press officer named Friedrich came to Paris a week ago and said—"We will be back. You think you are smart but you don't know about the secret weapons we have. The Luftwaffe's 'refrigerator bomb' and 'bacteria bomb' are going to be our terror weapons."

Spain Breaks With Vichy

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Spanish Government has withdrawn its recognition of Vichy, it was announced tonight. The Spanish Foreign Ministry has its summer office here.

Ace Captured On 'Extra Raid'

A United States Fighter Base in England, Aug. 26 (AP)—Lieut. Col. [illegible] here, left recently for new homes in the United States.

Francis Gabreski, 25, American ace from Oil City, Pa., was captured by the Germans in taking "one more crack" at a Nazi airfield during a strafing mission he did not have to make, fellow-airmen at his base disclosed today.

Gabreski, Thunderbolt squadron commander who destroyed 28 German planes in the air and three aground, was ready to return to the United States on a 30-day leave and be married, but volunteered for another mission on July 20.

Gets 31st Kill

He lead a squadron of 16 planes to a German airfield near Koblenz where they destroyed nine Heinkels on the ground. Gabreski got one of them—his 31st kill.

The colonel's flight was ready to leave when he decided to make another run on the airfield. Swooping over very low to avoid anti-aircraft fire, he struck a clump of trees at the end of the field. Then the propeller of his P-47 hit the ground, probably damaging it. Two miles farther on Gabreski had to belly-land in a small clearing.

Wanted To Rescue Him

His flight companion saw him run from the plane apparently uninjured, and then turn back, obviously aiming at destroying his ship. But Thunderbolts in the air already were lined up on it and blew it up with their 50-caliber machinegun bullets.

Lieut. Joel I. Popplewell, of Liberty, Ky., said some of the flyers wanted to land and pick up the colonel, but there was no near-by field big enough to accommodate a Thunderbolt.

"If we had had a decent chance to make a landing and takeoff, that's all we would have asked," said Popplewell.

"The last we saw of the colonel he was running toward some woods.

"The last thing he said to us over the radio was that he had 'had it.'"

In hope that Gabreski might be able to make his way out of Germany, Popplewell and a companion kept the story of the mission secret until word reached the base today that he was a prisoner of war.

70 Irish Wives Of Yanks Off To U. S.

Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Aug. 26 (AP)—More than 70 Londonderry women, wives of Americans at the United States naval base

A score carried babies as they boarded the 15,000-ton Marine Haven while a naval band played and the Irish crowd ashore sang "Auld Lang Syne."

Turkey Breaks With Vichy

Ankara, Aug. 25 (AP—Delayed). Turkey suspended diplomatic relations today with Vichy France on the ground that the Petain regime is no longer functioning.

General von Kluge Reported Killed

Stockholm, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge, commander of the German armies on the western front, has been killed, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter said today on the basis of information received from Germany. (The report lackd confirmation in either Axis or Allied quarters.)

Circumstances of the reported death were not known here and the newspaper had no additional details. The 61-year-old von Kluge succeeded Field Marshal Gen. Karl von Rudolph von Rundstedt on the western front last July 6.

Herriot Reported Still Alive In France

Lisbon, Aug. 26 (AP)—Edouard Herriot, 72-year-old former President of France, is still alive somewhere in France although the Germans have several times reported him dead, Jules Sauerwein, a French newspaperman, said here last night.

Sauerwein fled Paris just before the Patriots began their attacks against German occupying forces.

(A dispatch from Paris by Associated Press Correspondent Don Whitehead quoted a Frenchman as saying the Germans had kept Herriot in a cell in a Paris asylum but took him out of the French capital last March.)

Moscow Announces Antonescu Arrest

London, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—The Moscow radio announced today that Marshal Ion Antonescu, deposed Romanian Premier, is under arrest, taken in hand by the Romanian royal guard of King Michael.

New Jersey Officer's Air Group Honored

With United States Air Force Headquarters, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—A pioneer Mustang group commanded by Col. George R. Bickel of Nutley, N. J., which has destroyed 471 German planes in less than ten months, was awarded a Presidential Unit Citation today by Major-Gen. Hoyt C. Vandenberg, United States Ninth Air Force commander. The commander also presented sixty Distinguished Flying Crosses and Silved Stars to pilots of the Nineteenth Tactical Air Command in ceremonies at landing strips in France.

Report Yanks Near Hendaye.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—French authorities said that they expected American troops to reach the Spanish-French frontier at Hendaye, across from Irun, some time today.

Allies Advance 22 Miles Down MandalayRoad

Drive Foe Back Along Rails FromMogaung; Japanese Making Stand at Tiddim

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND, HEADQUARTERS, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 26 (AP).—Allied troops, driving the enemy back south along his route of conquest in northern Burma, advanced more than twenty-two miles down the Mandalay railway from their base at Mogaung, a communique announced today.

In the village of Ingyingon they were about a mile and a half north of Pinbaw, a station on the railway twenty-four miles southwest of Mogaung. Sixty miles farther south is the Japanese base of Katha and 160 miles beyond Katha is the Mandalay railhead.

The Japanese, after their disastrous invasion of northeast India, appeared to be making a stand before their menaced base of Tiddim, forty miles inside [illegible]n Burma. Allied troops made some advances along the Tiddim road against both infantry and artillery opposition.

But the flight of the Japanese farther north was still so swift that Allied forces pushing as far as thirteen miles into Burma to within five miles of the Chindwin River found explosives intended to blow up bridges still in place.

Chinese Gain at Tengchung

CHUNGKING, Aug. 26 (AP).—Chinese forces besieging the main Japanese Yunnan Province bastion of Tengchung have made advances in the southern section of the city, the Chinese high command announced tonight, after Japanese counter-attacks against positions inside the city were repulsed. Large quantities of food, supplies and medical stores were captured as the attacks were thrown back, the high command said.

Enemy positions in the southwestern part of Lungling, the secondary Japanese base in the province on the Burma Road, were attacked and taken Thursday. On Friday a key position south of the city, held stubbornly by the Japanese for more than ten days, was taken by the Chinese, who captured large quantities of food and ammunition.

IWO JIMA HIT BY LIBERATORS

47 Tons Of Bombs Dropped, Three Jap Planes Downed

Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 26 (AP)—A series of aerial lashings of seven Japanese-held Pacific islands, topped by a 47-ton bomb attack on Iwo Jima, in the volcano group 750 miles south of Tokyo, was reported by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz today.

At Iwo, which was hit Thursday in daylight, the Yank flyers encountered their only opposition. Land-based army Liberators, braving anti-aircraft fire ranging from moderate to intense, were met by ten Japanese interceptors. Two Liberators were damaged but the American gunners shot down three of the Japanese planes.

Rota, Pagan, Agiguan Hit

Rota, Pagan and Agiguan islands, in the Marianas, were the targets of the United States bombers. Rota was blasted Wednesday and the other two Thursday. Gun positions and defense installations were the targets.

A lone Seventh AAF Liberator met moderate ack-ack fire as it attacked Yap Island, main Japanese Pacific weather station 525 miles southwest of American-held Guam.

Navy planes hit Nauru, Japanese-held phosphate island, on Wednesday, and army and navy pilots teamed the next day to bomb runways, gun positions and other objectives there.

Marine Corsairs joined in the widespread assaults on Wednesday. They strafed barracks and gun emplacements on Mili in the southeastern Marshals.

85 Tons Of Bombs Hit Palau, MacArthur Says

Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Sunday, Aug. 27 (AP)—An 85-ton bombing raid on Palau, guarding the central approach to the Philippines, was reported today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

[The Japanese radio previously had told of a raid by several Liberators on Palau, in the western Carolines.]

Headquarters said a sizable force of Liberators attacked Koror Town and the harbor at midday Friday and one of the Allied planes was shot down.

On the same day another strong force of Liberators attacked Ceram and Amboina to the west of Dutch New Guinea with 101 tons of explosives, which started fires in areas where planes are dispersed.

Near Boeroe a 6,000-ton Japanese ship was hit twice by aerial bombs and was either destroyed or severely damaged.

JAPANESE FORCES ENTER LIMKONG

CHUNGKING, Aug. 26 — (AP) Japanese forces striking northward from the Luichow peninsula of Kwangtung province in an apparent attempt to cut the railway linking Kwangsi and Kweichow provinces, broke into the the town of Limkong Wednesday night and street fighting is in progress for that important highway hub, the Chinese announced tonight.

Meanwhile stern fighting was in progres southwest and north of Japanese-captured Hengyang in Hunan, next province to the north, and the Chinese continued to attack in Hupeh province around the Yangtze river port of Ichang, westernmost enemy bastion in central China.

A Chinese communique said Japanese counterattacks 17 miles south of Hengyang in the direction of Chinese forces from the area south of Siangsiang, 60 miles north of Hengyang, has reached the Hengyang area and were engaging the Japanese there. It was not clear whether this Chinese force had been pushed southward to Hengyang by the Japanese or had gone there deliberately to join in the battle for recapture of the important railway city.

In the southwestern theater along the Burma border, the Chinese in Yunnan province reported further penetration of the Japanese stronghold of Tengchung after beating back Japanese counterattacks, and announced capture of Sankuanpo, a key position two miles south of Lungling, where the Japanese had held out for ten days.

Air force operations on all fronts were hampered by bad weather, but the U. S. 14th air force reported strafing attacks in support of the Chinese around Hengyang and Liberator bombers reported sinking two freighters of 1,200 and 500 tons near Hongkong.

NEW CANAAN CORPORAL PROVES SAIPAN HERO

SEVENTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Central Pacific, Aug. 19 — (Delayed) — (AP) Tech. Cpls. Loren I. Low of Salem, Ore., and Andrew R. Hughes of New Canaan, Conn., were revealed today as heroes of an air attack on Saipan in the early days of the American assault on that once Japanese-held stronghold.

A Japanese bomber had set fire to a gasoline dump that threatened to ignite much sorely needed American supplies. The two corporals, who were manning a bulldozer nearby, drove their machine into the flames, covering the burning gasoline drums with earth and coral.

U. S. Planes Hit 5 Jap Ships A Day

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 26 (AP)—Hitting Japanese ships at a pace of better than five a day for August, the Far Eastern air force was reported today to have blasted a cruiser, seven freighter-transports and a barge tender at Dutch Celebes on the invasion path to the Philippines.

The toll of that Thursday raid, just announced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, plus three coastal vessels and a landing craft sunk elsewhere, made the total recorded in 26 August communiques read:

Sunk or probably sunk—92 ships, among these 34 freighter-transports with a tonnage exceeding 60,000.

Damaged, some likely sunk—42 ships, including 26 freighter-transports with a tonnage of more than 50,000; also a destroyer and destroyer tender.

140 Supply Craft Hit

These do not take into account more than 140 luggers and barges sunk or severely damaged. Forty such supply craft were riddled by the Mitchells which went in at mast height off Manado, northern Celebes, to sink five of the freighter-transports, leave the burning light cruiser with a 20-degree list and probably sink the other two transports. The 4,000-ton barge tender fell victim to a Liberator.

Seventeen ships have been sunk in recent raids at Celebes and 29 around Halmahera.

New Halmahera Blow

Today's communique added 59 more tons of bombs to the approximately 500 which have hit Halmahera in a week.

From Pearl Harbor, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported that on Wednesday night Seventh Army Air Force Liberators struck at Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, within 750 miles of Tokyo.

Little Damage, Japs Claim

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Japanese Domei news agency said today that American aircraft raided Iwo Jima, 750 miles from Tokyo, and Palau Island, 600 miles east of the Philippines, yesterday.

According to Domei, 19 Liberators "believed to be based on Saipan" hit Iwo Jima, while 17 Liberators struck at Palau.

In its English-language dispatch to Pacific areas, Domei claimed that Jap interceptors in each raid shot down one of the attacking planes and declared: "In both enemy raids the damage sustained by our side was extremely slight."

United States Government monitors recorded the broadcast.

Chinese Advance In Tengchung

Chungking, Aug. 26 (AP)—Chinese forces besieging the main Japanese Yunnan province bastion of Tengchung have made advances in the southern section of the city, the Chinese high command announced tonight, after Japanese counterattacks against positions inside the city were repulsed.

Large quantities of food, supplies and medical stores were captured as the attacks were thrown back, the high command said.

Gain In Lungling

Enemy positions in the southwestern part of Lungling, the secondary Japanese base in the province on the Burma road, were attacked and taken Thursday. On Friday a key position south of the city, held stubbornly by the Japanese for more than ten days, was taken by the Chinese, who captured large quantities of food and ammunition.

East of Mangshih the Chinese threw back an enemy attack and thrust against hills four miles northeast of the city, the communique said.

Earlier, the Chinese high command revealed the Japanese had launched a new drive northward from the neck of the Liuchow peninsula on the South China coast opposite Hainan Island.

Reach Road Junction

The new enemy drive was launched from Suiki on Wednesday and by nightfall had reached the southern outskirts of Limkong, a junction of four highways. There was no immediate indication whether the new drive was merely another stepping-up operation or the beginning of a thrust on the Kwangsi province city of Liuchow, a railroad junction center 200 miles to the northeast.

Capture of Liuchow would threaten several important air bases and tend to neutralize Kweilin, provincial capital of Kwangsi, as the key center in the defenses of South China.

Japs Allow Prisoners To Get $10 Monthly

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—A monthly allotment of $10 relief money may be sent to each American prisoner of war in the Philippines under an agreement the State Department has negotiated with the Japanese through the Swiss Government.

The money must be sent by the Swiss through Japanese military channels, the agreement specifies. Similar funds have been going to interned American civilians in the Philippines since last fall.

The agreement applies also to captured merchant seamen, whom the Japanese consider prisoners of war.

State Department officials said the Tokyo Government has indicated to the Swiss that it was considering proposals for allowing relief funds to go to American war prisoners and interned civilians in the Netherlands East Indies.

Hardships On Truk Told By Tokyo

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—A report of the hardships of the Japanese armed forces on the isolated naval base at Truk in the central Carolines was given to the people of Japan in a Tokyo broadcast reported today by United States Government monitors.

The broadcast described the "exhaustion" of Japanese pilots obliged to "manage with a limited number of fighters" and reported that "wastelands" in the atoll had to be reclaimed to establish "self-sufficiency of food."

"Raiders Come Night And Day"

Pointing out that Truk "is merely four hours by plane to Saipan," and that "the enemy is within a stone's throw," the domestic broadcast declared that "constantly raiding enemy planes come night and day."

It was "not rare," the broadcast said, for enemy planes to "raid continuously for seven hours, from 7 in the evening to 2 in the middle of the night."

"The exhaustion of our pilots and the loss of aircraft are inescapable," Tokyo declared.

Nazis Move Petain and Laval

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 26 (AP)—A French frontier dispatch to The Tribune de Geneve said the Germans, fearing a Maquis attack against Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain and Pierre Laval, removed those former heads of the Vichy regime from their villas at Morvillars near the Swiss border today and took them to an unannounced place, probably in Germany.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—The Earl of Halifax, British Ambassador, appealed tonight for a continued Allied cooperation if the world were to win its way back to anything like secure prosperity in the post-war era. In his talk, the Ambassador said that British Commonwealth war casualties, military and civilian, were nearing the million mark.

In his first radio address since returning to the United States from Britain Aug. 12, he said that on the thought and work put into the problems of peace before the war ended would depend the success of the peaceful order we hoped to set up.

"The meeting at Dumbarton Oaks should therefore be seen as part of a pattern for peace," he said, "a work which was begun at Hot Springs and went on at Atlantic City and Bretton Woods. More meetings of this kind will no doubt be necessary as the pattern grows, but this is the right way to go to work."

In Britain, said Lord Halifax, he found the conviction that now was the time, while the enemy was reeling, to put in the last ounce of effort and energy. Although by the rules of war it might be that Germany was already beaten, her leaders would want to go on fighting to the end, he said, adding: "We are under no illusions about that."

The British people had been protected from undue optimism by the flying bomb, he said, but the people in the "bomb highway," he added, felt that they were part of the front line and were taking some of the weight off the fighting troops.

Each bomb, he said, meant 150 houses damaged, or something like 500 persons affected.

But there could be no slackening after the end of the German war, Lord Halifax said. In England, he observed that already many plants had been switched over to the production of special equipment against the time when Britain and America turned their full strength on the Japanese.

Want War Guilty Punished

The Ambassador gave particular stress to the belief that the war criminals and "peace-breakers" should be punished.

"No peace will be firmly founded that does not re-establish justice, and I am sure," he said, "our people, with, I think, yours, will be determined to see justice done on those men who have been responsible during this war for the foulest deeds of history."

Those who have committed and ordered the fearful crimes must surely be brought to punishment, not in a spirit of revenge but in that of just retribution, he went on. In no other way could we put justice back on her throne and warn those, if there ever should be any, who might seek to do such things again.

His talk was broadcast by the Columbia network.

Halifax Declares World Security Rests on Allies' Post-War Unity

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

U. S. PUTS FRITZ MANDL ON TRADE 'BLACKLIST'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Fritz Mandl, former Austrian munitions manufacturer, now operating in Argentina, and former husband of Hedy Lamarr, film actress, has been "blacklisted" as being associated with Axis economic interests, the State Department disclosed today.

The department made public latest additions to the "blacklist" of foreign concerns throughout the non-Axis world who were suspected of dealing with enemy interests and to whom were denied the benefits of American trade relations. These additions appeared in the sixth cumulative supplement to Revision VII of the proclaimed list of certain blocked nations issued March 23, 1944.

Mr. Mandl's name appeared with sixteen other Argentine concerns which were added to the list. This follows recent reports that he was active in the Argentine munitions industry, which is helping to arm the southern republic's military forces.

Argentina leads all other Latin-American nations in the number of new companies that are "blacklisted." A total of fifty-six new Latin-American concerns appeared, while 185 companies were removed from the list for that country.

For regions outside Latin America, 144 additional listings appeared, while forty-nine names were removed.

In Europe, Portugal led with hirty-seven concerns appearing or the first time on the list. Spain vas second with thirty-three firms eing added.

Bing Crosby Reaches Europe

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Bing Crosby arrived in Britain today to entertain troops in Europe.

Louvre Treasures Safe, Caretakers Feel Sure

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 26—Caretakers said today that the priceless art treasures of the Louvre had long since been carried away to a secret hiding place and thus had escaped damage in the fighting between the Germans and the French Forces of the Interior that swirled for days all around the historic museum.

A reporter went to the Louvre this morning and found caretakers cleaning deserted galleries. "They will soon be back here, monsieur," one of the guardians said. The guardians were sure that none of the paintings or statues had fallen into the Germans' hands. They were removed in 1939 by the French Government.

Helsinki Isolated, 500 Quizzed

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Finnish police blocked all roads leading out of Helsinki at dawn yesterday and staged mass raids through the capital until early this morning, the Finnish radio said today in a broadcast that failed to offer any explanation of the action.

The broadcast, recorded by FCC monitors, said "results have been very satisfactory" and "about 500 people were interrogated as their identity papers were not in order."

"Since the raid continued into the early hours of this morning, further details will be made known later," the broadcast said, adding that Minister of the Interior Kaarlo Henrik Hillilae "expressed his satisfaction at the manner in which the raids were carried out."

All ships entering harbors and trains reaching stations were inspected, the broadcast said.

U. S. Advocates Extending European Advisory Group

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP) Extending the European advisory commission and broadening its power is being advocated by American officials, it was learned today, as the best way to bridge the expected gap between the end of the war in Europe and the proposed creation of a World Security agency.

Diplomatic measures have been developed for continuing the commission, with its Russian-American-British membership, into the peace period. They could be adopted by the three powers either through regular diplomatic channels or in a meeting of big-three leaders—President Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

Present Three Arguments

The need to bridge the gap has been urged especially by Military and Naval leaders on three main arguments:

1. Though German resistance can be prolonged, it may collapse any time. The next two months are critical, with the Allies driving for an autumn victory and the Germans trying for a winter stalemate.

2. The end of the war is almost certain to be followed by internal revolutions and "little wars between traditionally quarrelsome neighbors, such as Romania and Hungary, over territory. If there is to be any order in Europe the big powers will have to enforce it.

3. Permanent cooperation of the big powers for world security will be shaped largely by their temporary cooperation in immediate post war Europe. Temptation to wrangle over political and economic privileges amid the wreckage of Europe will be strong but in the interest of a lasting peace they must be subordinated to ordered cooperation.

4. Efforts to plan a world peace organization beginning in the Dumbarton-Oaks conversations here, probably will require several months more so there is little or no chance of setting up permanent machinery before the end of the war.

The European advisory commission was created by British-American-Soviet foreign ministers at Moscow last October. The State department said today that its powers still were limited to "the examination of European questions arising as the war develops."

Group Purely Advisory

The commission is purely advisory. Its members are Ambassador John Winant for the United States, Fedor Guzev for Russia, and William Strang for Britain.

They have been chiefly concerned to date with the working out arrangements for the surrender and occupation of Germany.

In some instances they have been short-circuited, as when Romania sought Allied armistice terms last spring and these were laid down in Cairo without going through the Commission, because haste was considered necessary.

The apprehension here is that if such short circuiting should become common in respect to the complicated and numerous political problems which peace will bring in Europe, a breakdown in cooperation would result. Therefore it is proposed not only to extend but to speed up and enlarge the commission.

CONCERN VOICED IN CONGRESS ON SHAKEUP IN WPB

Washington Leaders Apprehensive of Effect on War Output, Reconversion.

VANDENBERG CRITICAL

Hits 'Confusion'—Senator Johnson Sees Nelson 'Ditched Like Wallace.'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — (AP) An upheaval in the War Production Board's high command resulted tonight in expressions of congressional concern lest it hinder both war output and reconversion, and a declaration by Senator Johnson (D-Colo) that WPB chairman Donald M. Nelson is being "ditched" permanently.

Nelson has left on a mysterious mission to China with his status when he gets back an open question. Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson has quit, and President Roosevelt has lifted Lt. Cmdr. J. A. Krug, a former WPB executive, out of the Navy and installed him as acting chairman.

Compared with Wallace

Of Nelson's trip to China, Johnson told a reporter:

"It's is the regular Roosevelt technique. Nelson is being ditched—eased out just like Henry Wallace was."

Vice-President Wallace also went to China. When he came back he got a good deal less than insistent support from the President and failed to win renomination.

"Presumably," said Johnson, "Mr. Krug is the new head of the WPB, the most powerful and important civil office in America. I wish we knew more about him and his viewpoints."

The Senate War Investigating committee plans to find out something about him Monday. It wants to know particularly whether he intends to push a reconversion program which Nelson initiated. But indications around WPB were that Krug will want more time to get reacquainted with WPB before committing himself to definite plans.

"Congress intends to see," Chairman Mead (D-NY) asserted, "that Nelson's reconversion plan, which followed the recommendations of this committee, is enforced."

Vandenberg Critical

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) declared himself deeply disturbed by "the confusion now obvious in executive responsibility for final production to win the war and for the desperately important tasks of swift and effective reconversion."

"If Mr. Nelson is ever going to run WPB again, he is needed now continuously on the job," Vandenberg said. "If not, the new permanent plans for WPB should become immediately effective."

And Senator George (D-Ga) called for clear-cut action from WPB to permit a gradual shading of war production into peacetime output.

"The reorganization of WPB may furnish an answer to many of the pressing problems," he said. "But it will become a matter of active consideration by Congress if they haven't established a clearer, more positive policy by the time the election is over."

Nelson's theories of permitting some civilian production from plants and materials not required for war operations were described by George as "very, very sound."

DENIES KURUSU FOOLED HULL ON PEARL HARBOR

State Department Makes Reply to Report Given by Magnuson.

SAYS FLEET WASN'T AN ISSUE

Representative Reported Story Kimmel Was Told to Ease Air Patrol.

Washington, Aug. 26 (A. P.).—The State Department declared today that Japanese peace envoys in the immediate pre-Pearl Harbor period never raised any question about the disposition of American naval forces.

The department issued a statement in comment on assertions made by Representative Magnuson (D.-Wash.) in his home State.

The Representative told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer that there were reports both in Washington and on the Pacific Coast that "the Japs made a 'patsy' out of the State Department, contriving to have our fleet bottled up in Pearl Harbor where it could easily be dealt a death blow," in 1941.

Text of Statement.

The State Department's statement:

"At no time did Kurusu during the course of his visit here in 1941—or did any other Japanese representative—raise a question with this Government that the disposition of our naval forces in the Pacific was likely to prejudice the success of the conversations then taking place between the two Governments.

"Furthermore, the State Department did not at any time raise this question with the Navy or War departments."

Saburo Kurusu was the special Japanese envoy who came here for "peace talks" in 1941.

Mr. Magnuson's account of the reports he had heard was that Kurusu protested to Secretary Hull that American naval operations in the Pacific were giving militarists in Japan reason for blocking Kurusu's peace efforts.

Demands an Answer.

"I do not know whether this story is true or false, and I don't venture to speak for or against it," Mr. Magnuson had said, "but I do think the charge should be answered promptly in Washington.

"The report on the West Coast, and I've heard it in Washington, too, is that Kimmel (Admiral Husband E. Kimmel) was instructed to draw in the fleet, curail air patrols and do everything else possible to dispel the notion that America was about to attack Japan.

"The report is that Kimmel was instructed to take all measures necessary to insure that the Japanese consulate at Honolulu would report to the Japanese Government that the fleet did not contemplate any immediate action, which is—so the story goes—why some shore leaves were granted.

Would Turn Off Heat.

"Although I am a Democrat, this report and this situation transcends purely party considerations and if the story is true, some of this heat certainly should be taken off Admiral Kimmel and Gen. Short (Lieut.-Gen. Walter C. Short, Army commander in Hawaii at the time of Pearl Harbor). On the other hand, if it is not true, then the report should be promptly scotched by an immediate and official denial here in Washington. The circulation of such reports as this is not healthy.

"Not only are these reports not healthy, but they cause a lot of ill-founded rumors concerning the operation of the Navy prior to Pearl Harbor."

'White House Pressure' Seen In Socialist Broadcast Ruling

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—The War Department's about-face ban on a Socialist party campaign broadcast to troops overseas stirred up a rumpus today, headlined by a complaint of "White House pressure" to have President Roosevelt's Bremerton (Wash.) speech held non-political.

The Socialist party, describing the address the President made upon his return from his tour of Pacific fronts as a political speech, demanded equal time for a broadcast to the armed forces. The servicemen's vote law says the opposition shall have equal time if a political speech is radioed to troops.

The army first agreed yesterday to give the Socialists the time, then reversed the ruling, holding that the President didn't talk politics.

Complaint By Wherry

Senator Wherry (Neb.), Republican whip, led off Congressional complaints with the assertion that the reversal "was due, without doubt, to White House pressure."

The GOP National Committee jumped into the row with both feet.

"President Roosevelt was undeniably a political candidate at Bremerton," Herbert Brownell, Jr., chairman, said in New York.

Republican members of Congress—and some Democrats—contended that virtually any speech the President makes in this election year must be considered to have political implications.

Norman Thomas, the Socialist Presidential candidate, said in Denver that "it proves the Commander in Chief, who also is a candidate for reelection, ruled that his own speech was not politics."

OVERSEAS TRAVEL PLEAS NUMEROUS

Agencies Deluged With Requests Since Invasion

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—As Allied armies press ever closer to Germany, Europeans anxious to get home and impatient travel-minded Americans are deluging steamship lines, airlines and travel agencies here with requests for passage overseas.

Travel offices said today eager, excited phone calls and letters had been coming in with increasing frequency since the invasion of France, and particularly since the premature report of the liberation of Paris.

Hope For Air Travel

Although after the first World War travel on even a semi-normal basis did not get into stride for two or three years, air travel may present a ray of hope this time.

Malcolm La Prade, a vice-president of Thomas Cook's travel agency, commented:

"While tourism will have to wait until the State Department again freely issues passports for foreign travel, air transport may tend to speed up its revival. Airlines may be prepared to begin overeas operation on tourist routes soon after the war."

A spokesman for American Export Airlines said "we could start carrying pleasure passengers today," should the war, the priorities system and navy contracts suddenly be terminated.

Pan American Airways, reported it had a rapidly growing waiting list of more than 900 names.

REPORT ROMANIA MAY RETURN FLIERS TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26 — Romania's radio surrender raises the possibility — though officials consider it far from a certainty — of getting some 500 imprisoned American fliers back into the fight.

Reliable reports indicate that about that number of Americans were held in the Balkan country at the time of the capitulation.

If the surrender was complete throughout Romania, the most likely prospect would be for early release of American flyers shot down during raids on oil fields, manufacturing plants and Nazi supply lines. However, one highly-placed officer said it is too early to say how soon the Romanian decision may be entirely effective.

It is possible that the Germans may have removed many American prisoners out of Romania to make certain that they could not rejoin their units.

Son Of Bataan Captive Named To West Point

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—James Harris Steel, of Richmond, whose father, an army officer, was taken prisoner by the Japanese on Bataan, was nominated today by Representative Satterfield (D., Va.) as principal candidate for appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Satterfield nominated Robert Barksdale Ooghe, of Richmond, as principal candidate for appointment to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Alternate nominations included:

For the naval academy—Reuben Lindsay Walker, Jr., William Forrest Hawkins and Herbert Robinson Blackwell, all of Richmond.

General Ignico In Spokane

Spokane, Aug. 26 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Robert V. Ignico, until recently commanding general of the 11th Air Force Service Command, which serves the Alaskan and Aleutian theater air operations, arrived by plane today to assume command of the Spokane Air Service Command.

HALIFAX SAYS BRITONS ARE NOT COMPLACENT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—(AP) Although the war soon will be five years old for Britons, they have "no thought that we might begin to relax now," British Ambassador Earl Halifax, just returned from England, told a radio audience tonight.

The destruction done by German robot bombs, he said, serves only to harden British determination to put the last ounce of effort into the struggle against Germany, and then go on to finish the war with Japan. The robots, he reported, have been damaging an average of 700 houses every hour.

Speaking over the Columbia network from the British embassy, Halifax described Germany's leaders as desperate men who have everything to lose by peace.

He reported that in England he found "a conviction that now is the time, when the enemy is gasping and reeling under heavy blows, for us to put in the last ounce of effort and energy, to work and fight harder than ever before."

Brewster Plane Firm Accused By Navy

Washington, Aug. 26 (AP)—Ralph A. Bard, Under Secretary of the Navy, asserted today that the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation has sought "to incite a controversy between the workers and the Navy Department" by failing to make payments on $1,500,000 of retroactive wage adjustments.

He made the assertion in a letter to Preston Lockwood, president of Brewster, which he signed as Acting Secretary of the Navy in the absence of Secretary Forrestal.

"Funds Given For Purpose"

"I can only interpret your action as being motivated by a desire to incite a controversy between the workers and the Navy Department, although the fact that the workers have not been paid is due entirely to your willfulness and refusal to meet your obligations, even though you have in your possession funds which are in effect public moneys and which the Navy Department advanced to you for that purpose," Bard wrote.

He added: "You should immediately pay the just claims of your workers."

WLB Ordered Payments

The retroactive payments were ordered by the War Labor Board after studying wages of workmen who were engaged in producing Corsair planes for the navy before the Brewster company's contract was canceled several months ago.

Brewster plants at both Johnsville, Pa., and Long Island City, N. Y., held contracts.

Lockwood said at Long Island City that he had not received Bard's letter and was unwilling to comment in detail until he had an opportunity to study it and discuss it with counsel.

Lockwood "Surprised"

"I am greatly surprised at and do not agree with many of the statements as read to me," he said. "All I can say at this time is that Brewster has not attempted to incite a controversy between its employes and the Navy Department. Nothing was further from our minds."

Lockwood said the company undoubtedly would issue a detailed reply later.

For months the navy rated Brewster production as unsatisfactory. When Brewster's contracts were canceled, the navy said its production costs were higher than those of other companies producing planes for the navy and that hence Brewster was chosen to bear the brunt of a cutback in the plane program.

"$50,000,000 Advanced"

Bard said he was informed that the Brewster company has drawn checks totaling more than half a million dollars to about 5,200 workers, but has refused to issue them "unless the Navy Department first advances you another million dollars in cash."

"During the entire period since you began production for the Navy Department you have been fully financed to meet all of your obligations," he continued, adding that at one time advances totaled "over $50,000,000."

"Still Had $1,500,000"

At the time of the termination of the Brewster contract, Bard said, the company "had over $2,000,000 of those funds, and on August 16 by your own statement you still had $1,500,000 and other resources which could rapidly be converted into cash to meet the expenses of your termination and the War Labor Board awards above referred to."

ALTHOUGH CONFUSION IN THE LANDING SCATTERED THE COLUMN ALL OVER THE BEACHES, IT SWIFTLY ASSEMBLED AND BY D-PLUS-TWO DAY AT LE MUY AND STRUCK INLAND BEFORE DAWN THE NEXT DAY.
FEDER GRABBED A HELMET AND DASHED AWAY WITH THEM, THE FIRST THREE DAYS RIDING ANYTHING AVAILABLE.

30. 24— 18311

THE FIRST COUPLE OF DAYS HE RODE THE FRONT END OF A LOADED AMMUNITION TRUCK DRIVEN BY PVT.JIM EDWARDS, CENTERVILLE,TEX. DUE TO SUPPLY TROUBLES MANY TIMES THEY LOST THE COLUMN AND WANDERED AROUND ENEMY TERRITORY, ASKING THE MAQUIS QUESTIONS, TRYING TO FIND THE RIGHT ROUTES.

DIXON CAUGHT THE COLUMN AT SISTERON THE THIRD DAY IN A JEEP DRIVEN BY CAPT.RALPH HOTCHKISS, HARTSDALE,N.Y., AND WASHINGTON, D.C., AFTER A WILD RIDE THROUGH STILL UNSECURED TERRITORY IN TH WAKE OF THE WHIRLWIND OUTFIT. HE STAYED EITHER WITH IT OR IN FRONT OF IT WITH MAQUIS GROUPS UNTIL IT REACHED THE GRENOBLE SECTOR.

THE BRILLIANCE OF THE SWIFT, PIERCING TACTICS WAS OBVIOUS TO ANYONE ACCOMPANYING THE COLUMN THUNDERING THROUGH THE PASSES BETWEEN THE TOWERING CRAGS OF THE BASSE ALPS.

AUG 27 1944

THE HIGHWAY HUNG ON THE SIDE OF ALMOST PERPENDICULAR CLIFFS, WOUND THROUGH NARROW GORGES, GASHED DOWN INTO ROCKS THOUSANDS OF FEET BELOW. AT COUNTLESS PLACES A SINGLE GUN EMPLACEMENT COULD HAVE STOPPED A WHOLE ARMY INDEFINITELY, OR A COUPLE OF WELL PLACED CHARGES OF DYNAMITE COULD HAVE CAUSED WEEKS OF STALEMATE.

REMINISCENT OF THE ROCKIES, THE WHOLE BEAUTIFUL, BRUTAL TERRAIN WAS SO EASILY DEFENSIBLE THAT HAD THE GERMANS BEEN GIVEN EVEN A COUPLE OF DAYS TO GET SET THEY COULD HAVE MADE A STAND COMPARED WITH WHICH CASSINO WOULD HAVE SEEMED A KINDERGARTEN. AND WE BOTH KNEW CASSINO.

BUT THEY NEVER GOT THE CHANCE--NEVER KNEW WHAT HIT THEM UNTIL THE FLYING COLUMN HAD COME AND GONE. THE FIRST CRACK OUT OF THE BEACHHEAD BOX, THE COLUMN BAGGED GERMAN LT.GEN.FERDINAND NEULING, COMMANDING THE CORPS CONTROLLING THE ENTIRE COASTAL DEFENSES FROM NICE TO TOULON, WHO WAS SEIZED WITH COMPLETE STAFF AND HEADQUARTERS GARRISON.

HE SURRENDERED TO LT.JOSEPH SIMS, ELIZABETH, N.J., SGT.PREBANK JOHNSTON, DOYLESTOWN, PA., AND CORP.MILTON EARGOOD, JUNCTION CITY, KAS., EARLY THE MORNING OF THE FIRST DAY.

A130

THE COLUMN ROUTED THE HIGH RANKING PRISONERS REAR-WARD AND KEPT ROLLING. THE FIRST FLASHING DAY TOOK THE SPEARHEAD 55 MILES INTO REIZ THROUGH DOZENS OF SMALL TOWNS WHOSE PEOPLE LINED THE STREETS, CHEERING, WAVING AND CRYING WITH JOY.

MEANWHILE THE MAQUIS, MOVING SWIFTLY PARALELLING AND PRECEDING THE COLUMN, MOBILIZING EVERY FIGHTING FRENCHMAN, HELPED THE BOLD MANEUVER.

MANY TIMES THE MAQUIS RAN INTERFERENCE AND SERVED AS INFANTRY. DURING THE SECOND DAY'S 40-MILE RUN WHICH REACHED DIGNE AND SISNERON THE COLUMN HAD TO CROSS THE DURANCE RIVER. IT FOUND THE MAQUIS WAITING ON THE OTHER SIDE. THE MAQUIS TOOK THEM TO A NEARBY SMALL TOWN AND TURNED OVER 100 GERMANS ALREADY ROUNDED UP READY TO BE SHIPPED BACK.

SOON THAT BECAME AN HOURLY OCCURRENCE.

ALTHOUGH SUCH BAGS INCREASED AS THE COLUMN SWUNG NORTHWARD TOWARD GAP AND GRENOBLE IN THE THIRD, FOURTH AND FIFTH DAYS OF FAST DRIVING THERE STILL WAS PLENTY OF SPOTTY, FIERCE FIGHTING. THE FIRST STIFF SCRAP CAME JUST AFTER THE JUMPOFF NORTHWEST OF DRAGUIGNAN.

DIGNE BECAME A BITTER 13-HOUR HOUSE-TO-HOUSE BATTLE FOLLOWING THE COLUMN'S CAPTURE OF A SECOND GENERAL THERE--NATTY, PRUSSIAN, ONE-EYED MAJ.GEN.SHUBERT, CIVIL AFFAIRS COMMANDER OF THE BASSE ALPS DISTRICT OF SOUTHERN FRANCE.

SHUBERT AND HIS HEADQUARTERS STAFF WERE CAPTURED BY A GROUP COMMANDED BY LT.PAUL SIEDEL, SALINA, KKANS. AS THEY ENTERED THE TOWN A VICIOUS RIFLE, GRENADE AND SLUGGING MATCH TOOK PLACE.

GAP ITSELF WAS THE SCENE OF SHARP, CRACKLING STREET FIGHTS--ALTHOUGH THIS WAS MOSTLY HANDLED BY THE MAQUIS--AND MACHINEGUNNERS AND SNIPERS CONSTANTLY PICKED AT THE PASSING COLUMN, SOMETIMES LITERALLY FIRING OVER THE HEADS OF THE CHEERING FRENCH VILLAGE FOLK.

ALMOST EVERY BATTLE BROUGHT A BIGGER BAG OF GERMAN PRISONERS THAN THE LAST. THE GERMANS ALWAYS ADMITTEDLY WERE ASTOUNDED THAT WE WERE THAT FAR INLAND. THEY WERE FEARFUL OF MAQUIS RETRIBUTION AND QUICK TO SURRENDER.

GAS, LIKE ALL OTHER SUPPLIES, HAS BEEN DANGEROUSLY SHORT IN THE ENTIRE OUTFIT. MANY TIMES DURING THE EERIE, HAZARDOUS MISSION WHEN THE COLUMN SEEMED SURROUNDED, OUTNUMBERED AND ISOLATED, SOMEONE ASKED THE COMMANDER WHAT TO DO NEXT.

A131

"CONTINUE THE ADVANCE," HE BARKED. "HELL. WE HAVEN'T GOT ENOUGH GAS TO RETREAT NOW."

IT NEVER HAD TO RETREAT. BETWEEN GAP AND GRENOBLE THE COLUMN STARTED FANNING OUT, FEELING FOR A FUTURE FRONT. BEHIND IT ALONG THE LINE WHICH ITS SWIFT, BOLD STROKE HAD OPENED, SUPPLIES AND MEN FLOWED IN A STEADILY SWELLING STREAM AS THE ENTIRE FRONT SURGED 150 MILES INLAND IN THE HISTORY-MAKING JUMP.

ARLES,FRANCE,AUG.26-(AP)-VIRTUALLY HALF OF THIS SPACIOUS FRENCH CITY IS A PILE OF RUBBLE FROM ALLIED AIR ATTACKS AND THE NATIVES STILL MOURN SEVERAL HUNDRED DEAD, BUT IN THIS TRAGIC SETTING THEY ARE HAPPY OVER THEIR LIBERATION AND PROUD THAT THEY DID SO MUCH TO MAKE IT POSSIBLE.

LOCATED STRATEGICALLY ON THE RHONE, ARLES' TWO BRIDGES WERE TARGETS WHICH THE ALLIED AIR FORCES HAD TO SMASH TO HAMPER GERMAN MOVEMENTS.

THERE ARE STILL ENEMIES IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD, AND WHEN I REACHED THE TOWN TODAY PATRIOT LEADERS WERE JUST RETURNING FROM EXECUTING FOUR GESTAPO AGENTS BACK IN THE BARRACKS.

ONE OF THE THINGS THE POPULACE DID IN THEIR LIBERATION WAS TO ASSAULT THE PRISON, ONLY LAST WEDNESDAY, WHERE THE GERMANS HELD MANY MILITARY PRISONERS. THOUGH MANY PATRIOTS ATTACKED WITH ONLY BARE HANDS AND NAZI GUARDS WERE ARMED WITH MACHINEGUNS, THEY SET THE PRISONERS FREE AND PREVENTED THE GERMANS FROM SETTING OFF DEMOLITIONS BEFORE FRENCH TROOPS ARRIVED -- BUT THEY PAID A HEAVY PRICE.

THEIR JOY AT LIBERATION WAS MORE SUBDUED THAN AT AVIGNON.

THERE, A TEARFUL OLD WOMAN THREW HER ARMS AROUND MY NECK AND CRIED, "MY HUSBAND WAS KILLED WHEN AMERICAN PLANES CAME OVER AND MORE THAN 1,000 WERE KILLED."

IN THE SAME BREATH SHE SAID "MERCI. MERCI TO YOU, OUR LIBERATORS."

MOST OF THE BOMBS LANDED OUTSIDE THE ANCIENT CITY WALLS OF AVIGNON AND THE MAJESTIC PALACE OF THE POPE, BUILT WHEN THIS CITY WAS A PAPAL SEAT IN THE 14TH CENTURY, IS UNTOUCHED.

PARIS, AUG 26-(AP)-THESE ARE STORIES OF PARIS--OF PARIS DURING MORE THAN FOUR YEARS OF IMPRISONMENT--FROM TWO PARISIANS, ONE AN AMERICAN WOMAN MARRIED TO A FRENCHMAN AND THE OTHER A FRENCH PHYSICIAN

THE WOMAN, BORN IN NEW YORK, WHOSE HUSBAND RUNS A PARIS FACTORY:

"TWO THINGS HAVE TAKEN ME BY MY HEART. THE FIRST WAS WHEN THEY PUT THE FLAGS BACK UP SATURDAY ON THE HOTEL DE VILLE (CITY HALL) AND THE PERFECTURE (POLICE STATION). THEN WHEN THEY CAME YESTERDAY TO LIBERATE US.

"IT HAS BEEN FOUR YEARS OF WAITING. I LOVE FRANCE AND I LOVE AMERICA MORE. MY SISTER HAS BEEN SENT TO A CONCENTRATION CAMP. WE HAVE BEEN ON SUCH RATIONS HERE THAT NOBODY COULD REALLY LIVE ON THEM WITHOUT THE BLACK MARKET. THE RATION WAS ONE FOURTH POUND OF BUTTER A MONTH FOR ONE PERSON AND A FIFTH POUND OF MEAT.

"ONLY THE VERY RICH HAVE BEEN EATING DECENTLY HERE. IT WOULD TAKE AT LEAST $600 A MONTH TO FEED A VERY SMALL FAMILY. THE BLACK MARKET PEOPLE USED TO GO OUT OF PARIS IN A HEARSE AND BRING BUTTER AND FOOD IN HERE IN COFFINS. THEY WOULDN'T STOP COFFINS.

"THE GERMANS TOOK ALL THE FOOD. YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE IT BUT THEY HAD EVERY FARM CHECKED OFF. THEY KNEW JUST HOW MUCH EVERY ONE WOULD PRODUCE AND THEY GAVE EVERY FARMER A QUOTA--SO MUCH BUTTER, SO MANY EGGS, SO MUCH WINE.

"I DON'T KNOW OF ANYBODY WHO HAS ACTUALLY STARVED TO DEATH HERE BUT THERE ARE VERY MANY--AND NEARLY ALL OF THEM CHILDREN--WHO HAVE BEEN SUFFERING FOR A LONG TIME FROM UNDERNOURISHMENT."

THE DOCTOR, ONE OF THE REALLY BIG MEN IN THE FRENCH RESISTANCE MOVEMENT:

THE FRONT IS SO FAST-MOVING I TRAVELED 78 MILES EASTWARD TOITHE SEINE TODAY FROM A FORWARD PRESS CAMP AND STILL FOUND MYSELF SOME MILES BEHIND THE BRITISH FRONT LINE.

AFTER BEING SQUEEZED OUT BY THE CANADIAN AND AMERICAN FORCES WHICH SQUASHED THE LOWER SEINE POCKET INTO A SHALLOW SEMICIRCLE AGAINST THE TWISTING SEINE RIVER ESTUAY, GEN.SIR BERNARD MONTGOMERY'S FORCES CUT ALMOST AT RIGHT ANGLES IN A NORTHEASTERLY DIRECTION TO THE SEINE.

A BRITISH HEADQUARTERS OFFICER SAID "WHAT THERE IS LEFT OF THE GERMANS IN THE NORTHWEST OF FRANCE IS HANGING LIKE MEAT ON A BUTCHER'S HOOK WAITING TO BE CUT DOWN."

"WE DO NOT KNOW HOW MUCH OF FIELD MARSHAL VON KLUGE'S ARMY ESCAPED FROM THE NORMANDY TRAP AND IS STILL FIGHTING IN THE SEINE LOOP NORTHWEST OF PARIS," HE SAID. "THE ENEMY MUST HAVE GOTTEN A FEW GUNS, TRANSPORT AND OTHER EQUIPMENT ACROSS ON THE FEW FERRIES STILL OPERATING ACROSS THE SEINE."

VON KLUGE'S STRATEGY SEEMS TO BE TO SPLIT HIS FORCES BETWEEN THE PAS DE CALAIS "BUZZ BOMB AREA" AND THE EAST BANK OF THE SEINE NORTHWEST OF PARIS.

AUG 27 1944

"ACROSS THE SEINE WE ARE MEETING ONLY WEAK AND DISPIRITED RESISTANCE," THE OFFICER SAID. "THERE ARE NO GERMAN TANKS. ENEMY ARTILLERY IS SLIGHT, BUT MORTAR FIRE IS AS HEAVY AS USUAL."

BRITISH TROOPS CROSSING THE SEINE LAST NIGHT IN THE VERNON AREA RAN INTO ONE 88 MILLIMETER GUN, SIX MACHINEGUNS AND APPROXIMATELY 300 GERMAN INFANTRY MEN, WHO WERE QUICKLY WIPED OUT. BY DAWN THE BRITISH HAD THROWN A BRIDGE ACROSS THE SEINE AND WERE DRIVING THROUGH THE VERNON FOREST.

LONDON, AUG 26-(AP)-SHERMAN DALRYMPLE, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED RUBBER WORKS (CIO), DECLARED TODAY THAT ORGANIZED LABOR IN AMERICA WILL SEE TO IT THAT RETURNING TROOPS GET THEIR OLD JOBS BACK AFTER THE WAR. HE SAID IF NECESSARY, THE UNITED STATES COULD GO ON A SIX-HOUR WORK DAY.

HE WAS OPTIMISTIC, HOWEVER, OVER PROSPECTS FOR POSTWAR EMPLOYMENT. HE SAID THE DEMAND FOR CIVILIAN GOODS WILL BE SO GREAT THAT THERE WILL BE NO NECESSITY FOR UNEMPLOYMENT.

IN AN INTERVIEW THE LABOR LEADER STRESSED PARTICULARLY THAT THERE IS A PLACE AWAITING THOSE WHO RETURN FROM THE ARMED SERVICES AND "IT IS NOT ON RELIEF. IT IS WRITTEN INTO LAW THAT SOLDIERS ARE TO GO BACK TO THE EMPLOYMENT THEY LEFT, WITH THE TIME THEY SPENT IN THE ARMY COUNTING IN THEIR STATUS."

DALRYMPLE SAID HE SAW NO DANGER TO THE ECONOMIC STRUCTURE OF THE UNITED STATES IN A RETURN TO THE PRE-WAR SIZE OF PAY ENVELOPES "AS LONG AS THE COST OF LIVING COMES DOWN." HE POINTED OUT THE LARGER WARTIME SALARIES RESULTED GENERALLY FROM A LONGER WORK WEEK RATHER THAN INCREASED WAGES. HE ASSERTED THAT IF THE COST OF LIVING REMAINED HIGH, ORGANIZED LABOR WOULD BE FORCED TO SEEK HIGHER WAGES WITH SHORTER HOURS.

AUG 27 1944

DALRYMPLE PREDICTED A RETURN TO THE SIX-HOUR DAY FOR THE RUBBER INDUSTRY. HE ALSO SAID THERE WAS A PLACE IN THE POSTWAR PERIOD FOR BOTH SYNTHETIC AND NATURAL RUBBER AND PREDICTED THE FORMER EVENTUALLY WOULD BE DEVELOPED TO A POINT WHERE IT WOULD BE MORE UNIFORM THAN THE LATTER AND HELP STABILIZE THE PRICE.

BACK IN LONDON FROM AN INSPECTION TOUR OF FRANCE AT THE WAR DEPARTMENT'S INVITATION, DALRYMPLE SAID HE WAS PLEASED AND THE ARMY WAS PLEASED AT THE WAY THE TIRES TURNED OUT BY UNION MEMBERS WERE STANDING UP TO THE ROUGH TREATMENT OF WAR, "DESPITE THE FACT THAT THEY ARE TAKING A HELL OF A BEATING."

HE SAID HE WOULD RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES AND TELL WORKERS THAT "THIS IS NO TIME TO LET DOWN IN PRODUCTION. NO ARMY EVERY HAD TOO MUCH EQUIPMENT. LET'S GIVE IT A PRODUCTION SHOT IN THE ARM AND LET THE MILITARY DECIDE WHEN THEY HAVE HAD ENOUGH. I AM MORE CONVINCED THAN EVER THAT THE LABOR NO-STRIKE PLEDGE WAS WISE."

(WX) GUAM (DELAYED)--AMERICAN MARINES AND SOLDIERS HERE FOR THE FIRST TIME ARE HAVING FULL OPPORTUNITY TO SEE THE KIND OF "NEW ORDER" JAPAN IS BRINGING TO THIS PART OF THE WORLD.

THE NIPPON AGGRESSORS HAD TWO AND A HALF YEARS TO REMAKE THIS GARDEN ISLAND ALONG THE LINES OF THEIR SO-CALLED "CO-PROSPERITY SPHERE WHEN THEIR STAY ENDED WITH THE RECENT AMERICAN LANDINGS, THEY LEFT BEHIND SOME 20,000 BITTER NATIVES--CHAMORROS--MANY OF THEM IN RAGS AND TEARS, HIDING IN CAVES AND HILLS, WAVING HOME MADE AMERICAN FLAGS AND SINGING HYSTERICALLY AN UNDERGROUND SONG WHOSE REFRAIN RAN, "DEAR UNCLE SAM, WON'T YOU PLEASE COME BACK TO GUAM."

DURING THE AMERICAN DAYS PRECEDING PEARL HARBOR, THEY ENGAGED PRINCIPALLY IN FARMING AND CATTLE RAISING. MODERN SCHOOLS, SANITAT-

ION AND PUBLIC WORKS RAISED THEIR STANDARDS OF CULTURE AND WELL-BEING.
THE STORY THEY TOLD OF JAPANESE OCCUPATION REVEALED A REVERSAL OF THEIR CLIMB TO HAPPINESS. A TYPICAL ACCOUNT WAS GIVEN BY GAILY R. KAMMINGA, 50-YEAR-OLD, FORMER MEMBER OF THE GUAM CONGRESS.

"WE WERE ABSOLUTE SERVANTS," HE SAID. "WE HAD NO RIGHTS AND EXISTED ONLY FOR THE JAPANESE. OUR WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE FORCED TO DO HARD LABOR IN THE RICE FIELDS AND ON FORTIFICATIONS. THEY WERE PAID THREE CENTS A DAY. THEY WERE SLAPPED AND KICKED IF THEY DIDN'T WORK HARD ENOUGH.

"MANY PEOPLE WERE TERRORIZED AND KILLED. SCHOOLS WERE RUN AT NIGHT AFTER THE CHILDREN RETURNED FROM THE FIELDS. THE USE OF ENGLISH WAS OUTLAWED. RELIGIOUS SERVICES WERE BANNED BECAUSE THE JAPANESE THOUGHT THEY WOULD BE USED TO KEEP ALIVE HOPE FOR THE AMERICANS RETURN."

KAMMINGA WAS CONSIDERED AN AMERICAN SPY BY THE JAPANESE. WHEN U.S. FORCES BEGAN BOMBING GUAM LAST FEBRUARY, HE AND HIS NIECE WERE MOVED TO A PENAL CAMP IN THE HILLS.

WHEN HE WAS FREED, ONE OF THE FIRST PERSONS HE MET WAS AN OLD FRIEND, COMMANDER JOHN B.COOKE, U.S.N., OF VENTURA,CALIF., WHO HAD SERVED ON GUAM BEFORE THE WAR. BEAMING HAPPILLY, KAMMINGA RIPPED OPEN A PILLOW WHICH HE STILL CARRIED AND, PULLING OUT A FADED AMERICAN FLAG, GAVE IT TO THE COMMANDER. IT WAS THE FLAG THAT HAD FLOWN OVER THE PITI NAVY YARD PRIOR TO THE JAPANESE ATTACK ON PEARL HARBOR.

THE CHIEF FEAR OF THE JAPANESE, ACCORDING TO RESCUED CHAMORROS, WAS THE CONTINUING NATIVE LOYALTY TO THE UNITED STATES.

"THEY TOLD US ALL MARINES WERE DEAD, THAT THERE WAS NO MORE UNITED STATES FLEET OR AIR FORCE, THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WAS A PRISONER IN JAPAN, AND THAT THE AMERICANS WOULDN'T BE BACK IN A THOUSAND YEARS," SAID MARIANO GUMAPAO, A 26-YEAR-OLD FORMER MESS BOY IN THE MARINE BARRACKS HERE.

"THEY WERE GOING TO KILL ME," HE SAID. "THEY KILLED MANY OTHERS. TWO BOYS WHO HAD A BROTHER IN THE U.S. NAVY WERE CAUGHT ON A CLIFF CHEERING AN AMERICAN PLANE IN A FIGHT WITH THREE ZEROS. THEY WERE TAKEN TO THEIR VILLAGE AND BEHEADED IN FRONT OF ALL THE PEOPLE."

American Armored Spearhead Drives North To Marne

YANKS SEEK TO OUTFLANK FLEEING FOE

Four Bridgeheads Built Up Between Paris And Mouth Of Seine

WH-Boni

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Monday, Aug. 28 (AP)—After virtually clearing all Germans from the Seine between Paris and Troyes, United States armored spearheads wheeled northward yesterday in a move taking shape as a flanking drive against the retreat route of the German Fifteenth Army from the Channel coast to Belgium and the Reich.

One of the probing spearheads reached the Marne in the vicinity of Lagny, 15 miles east of Paris and within 10 miles of Meaux, where the Kaiser's armies were halted 30 years ago.

AUG 28 1944

Meet Stiffer Resistance

Far to the southeast, forces which reached Troyes last week, thrust a column northward 12 miles toward Arcis-sur-Aube, encountering stiffened Nazi resistance. This force was but 118 miles from the Reich border.

[The Algiers radio said United States spearheads had crossed the Marne at Vitry, 45 miles southwest of Verdun.]

Between Paris and Troyes ground troops mopped up small German pockets by-passed in the armored advance. Tank forces also reached Pecy, Nangis and Provins—all southeast of Paris between the Seine and the Marne—and farther east drove to Romilly.

Build Up Bridgeheads

Between Paris and the mouth of the Seine there was activity of three types—the British building up a bridgehead at Vernon to strike out probably in the direction of Beauvais, the Canadians, and Belgians and Dutch engaging in what one observer called a "fair sized slaughter" of Nazi Seventh Army remnants and the Americans cleaning out German stragglers between Mantes and Paris.

AUG 28 1944

The British Second Army and Canadian First Army poured into four bridgeheads over the lower Seine, where Nazi resistance evaporated under an artillery barrage, and struck out in a pursuit aimed at the rocket coast.

Rouen and Le Havre were in danger of being enveloped, and the Germans already were reported evacuating the port of Le Havre except for a few rear guards and demolition troops.

Break Resistance At Melun

German resistance was broken at Melun, 25 miles southeast of Paris, where heavy fighting flared only yesterday. American armor crashed through the wilting lines and overran Nangis and Pecy in a 21-mile lunge to the northeast.

Fifty miles to the east, supreme headquarters reported rising opposition as other tank columns struck 12 miles north of Troyes to within 118 miles of the German's Saar border. It was the first report of resistance of any consequence in this area.

At Pecy, a crossroads hamlet, the Americans were 20 miles south of the Marne, only 31 miles from where their fathers fought at Chateau-Thierry. Sixty miles northeast is the railway city of Reims.

Mopping Up Along Seine

The Americans were mopping up along the Seine southeast of Paris, all the way from Fontainebleau to Nogent, whose capture was announced. Nogent is 37 miles east of Fontainebleau. A number of villages to the south also were liberated.

The British Second Army, striking across the Seine far to the northwest, at its new bridgehead at Vernon, reached toward high ground to the northeast.

British officers indicated that Le Havre, 70 miles to the northwest, might fall without a major blow being struck. Its capture would give the Allies an excellent port to pour in reinforcements. It was one of the main debarkation points for Americans in the first World War.

The German 15th Army and what is left of the Seventh, after the Normandy defeats, were reported streaking east toward Germany under aerial attacks.

Head Toward Beauvais

The British were headed toward Beauvais, some 35 miles northeast, whose capture would snap one of the main German retreat lines from Rouen, now the chief core of resistance left on the Seine northwest of Paris.

A pitched battle raged on the southwest approaches to Rouen, the chief enemy crossing of the Seine northwest of Paris, with Canadians locked with German rear guards in the northern fringes of the Forest of La Londe.

The Canadians planted two more bridgeheads across the Seine between Elbeuf and Pont-de-L'Arche and were in position to come upon Rouen from the rear.

The American bridgehead at Mantes was holding firm. Front-line dispatches said there was no enemy defense in strength anywhere between the American and British bridgeheads, some 15 miles apart.

30. 24— 18317

Folding Up Pocket

The heaviest German resistance was from rear guards protecting the withdrawal of enemy forces still south of the Seine.

Gradually folding up this pocket, the Canadians, Belgians and Dutch were making progress described as steady rather than rapid, and it appeared it might be eliminated in little more than 24 hours.

One decisive engagement was being fought at Bourg-Achard, two and half miles south of the Seine at a loop in the river southwest of Rouen, and victory here would cut the pocket in half.

Stubborn rear guards also prevented the Canadian forces from widening their bridgehead across the Risle river at Pont-Audemer, 13 miles west of Bourg-Achard, but most of the road between those two towns was in Allied hands.

Gen. De Gaulle Fired On At Notre Dame Service

By HAROLD

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP—Delayed)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle escaped death or injury today and thousands of Parisians were thrown into panic as the French capital's great liberation parade broke up in wild flurries of gunfire along the four-mile line of march.

Several spectators were killed and dozens were wounded as the shooting spread. A few moments before these people had given de Gaulle a thunderous ovation as he sped along the parade route at a 40-mile-an-hour clip.

He was preceded by an armored motorcycle guard and followed by French light tanks and heavily armed scout cars.

Patriots Fire At Roofs

French patriots in the parade began firing at roof tops from which French Fascist militia had sniped at them. The crackle of gunfire quickly spread along the route from the Arc De Triomphe to the Hotel De Ville—and the famed Notre Dame cathedral.

Soon thousands of men of the French Forces of the Interior were pouring rifle, machine gun and pistol fire at the bordering roof-tops and the fighting extended rapidly throughout Paris as the parade crowd melted into the nearest shelters.

The victory address was postponed. Thousands of men, women and children milled about in terror as rifles and machine guns kept up a continuous fire which spread rapidly to other sections of the city as though by signal.

De Gaulle Had Just Passed

I was standing at the corner of the Rue de Bourdonnais and the Rue de Rivoli, the Fifth Avenue of Paris, when a shot rang out from the roof of Chezesders, a large men's clothing firm.

De Gaulle, his thin face set in the slight smile that did not relax his customary serious expression, had just passed the crowds, packed scores deep, which gave a tremendous cry of "bravo" again and again like a crashing sea.

First I thought one of thousands of FFI men marching and riding past accidentally had discharged his rifle. But this was dispelled by the steady exchange of gunfire from the roofs and streets.

Crowd Thrown Into Panic

Scores of excited French claimed that Nazi sympathizers had hidden in strategic spots on roofs along the route of march to disrupt the parade—and perhaps to kill or injure de Gaulle.

Mothers grabbed children and ran into doorways. The crowd became more panicky when the firing spread into side streets and there was no place to find refuge. At one point near the Hotel De Ville the spectators thought one sniper had been captured and they tried to lynch him, but the attempt was broken up.

The panic was greatest around the Hotel De Ville and Notre Dame Cathedral, where the crowd was concentrated the most heavily. Both the Hotel De Ville and the cathedral were struck by many bullets.

French Fascists Still Fight

Most of the Germans in the capital had been flushed from hiding and killed or captured in running street battles, but still continuing was the vendetta between French patriots and the native collaborationists. Patriots armed with tommy guns, captured German rifles and pistols, whirled about the streets at 60 miles an hour, seeking hideouts of French Fascists who pitched in with the Nazis earlier in the battle for Paris.

Particularly deadly have been the bitter street duels between the French resistance fighters and members of the Fascist militia—the Miliciens—set up by collaborationist leader Marcel Deat and others before they fled with the Vichy Government.

As soon as a hideaway of these furtive characters was discovered it was surrounded by excited patriots who plugged away until the fugitive gave up or was killed.

Many of these native turncoats have chosen to fight pitched battles, leaping from roof to roof until they were cornered and killed.

In the waning hours of German resistance yesterday 400 German troops were barricaded in the great Chamber of Deputies, and they fought fiercely for an hour before they surrendered late in the day. This was the last major stand in any force within the city.

French Set Up Government Despite Firing By Snipers

NCD-NORDNESS

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP)—A new French Government is being set up rapidly in liberated Paris even as snipers continue a desultory fire, some of which has been aimed at those who will have a part in France's new government.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, here today for his third day along with Gen. Alphonse Pierre Juin, French chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, was fired on by a sniper yesterday.

Algiers Officials On Way

The Algiers Government is en route to Paris, and already here are nearly all the directors of the French resistance movements who will have prominent parts in the new government.

The first appointment has been made to a man who goes by the name of Quartus Cerat, head of all French resistance, as Minister at Large under de Gaulle. Even now his real name must remain a secret for he has much to do with directing the resistance in Nazi-held portions of France.

Posts For Two Others

Other leaders of the French resistance are being assigned a full share in the task of guiding France back to her feet, said Frenchmen close to de Gaulle, and when the Algiers Government arrives there will be many changes.

Besides Cerat, at least two other resistance leaders will be assigned prominent positions in the new government. They are George Bidault, president of the National Council of Resistance, and Roger Stephan, head of the FFI in Paris.

Cerat stood at the city's entrance while fighting was raging in the streets and welcomed de Gaulle back to the capital. Stephan, arm bandaged and gun in hand, welcomed de Gaulle at the Hotel De Ville—the Paris city hall and FFI headquarters.

Germans Unsuspecting

During all the years of his work, Cerat functioned unsuspected by the Germans—until last Sunday. It is believed the Germans were prepared to shoot him on the spot, but the general councilor of Sweden protested vehemently in his behalf and the Nazis finally released him.

Cerat was appointed to his hazardous position by the Algiers Government and at all times his work was known and approved by de Gaulle and the Algiers group Bidault presided over the council of directors of the various resistance groups and also acted in close conjunction with Algiers.

Young Stephan, stern resistance leader in Paris, formerly was in the prefecture of police and it was his signal that set the FFI against the Germans in Paris until they were driven from the city.

MARSEILLE FIGHT RAGES

Scattered Nazi Forces Join In Line On Water Front

Jap Version

London, Aug. 27 (Reuter)—Marseille, France, Aug. 27 (AP)—The battle for Marseille, supposed to have been officially finished five days ago, started all over again today as the remaining Nazis fell back to powerful, prepared defense positions along a line covering virtually the entire water front except part of the southern position of this great seaport.

Until yesterday these enemy soldiers had been separate, scattered pockets of resistance throughout the town, but with the assault of French troops on the Notre Dame de la Gard hill and an attack on artillery positions near the St. Charles railroad station, the Germans were driven back to a line which one American colonel described as "well prepared and stocked and supplied possibly enough for a year."

More Than 5,000 Captured

How many of the enemy is left is problematical. More than 5,000 already have been captured here but it is estimated there were some 2,000 or 3,000 remaining after the Germans gave up on the tall hill on which Notre Dame de la Gard sits.

This morning they threw a thunderous barrage into the St. Charles station area from artillery in their prepared water-front positions and at noon were blasting at various parts of the town.

One round landed directly in front of the building being used as Seventh Army headquarters and sprayed the front of the building with splinters, but fortunately no one was on the street at the time.

Guns Bear On Heart Of City

The Germans bulwarked their pillboxes and dug-in positions with the key strong points, forts St. Jean and St. Nicholas. From them German guns still bear on the heart of the city, making the main thoroughfares a no-man's-land.

Notre Dame de la Gard remained a hot spot today. It was reported the cathedral had suffered some damage. The battle for the hill was lively but short, as the Germans, realizing the French were too strong for them, pulled back toward the water front and the French took over.

PETAIN MAKES EXPLANATION

Sends Parting Message Trying To Justify Action

By DON WHITEHEAD

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP) — Marshal Henri Petain, Pierre Laval and Edouard Herriot, former Premier of the republic, were arrested by the Gestapo and taken to Germany a few days before American and French forces entered Paris.

Before he left, Petain sent a clandestine message to the people of France urging them to unite and stating that all he had submitted to had been for their welfare.

[Dispatches from Delle, France, dated Thursday, said Petain and Laval were still at Marvillars, near Belfort, France, despite reports they had been taken to Germany.]

The 88-year-old chief of state said in his message he knew he would be arrested, and on August 2, five days before Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's troops entered Paris, he was taken to Belfort near the Swiss frontier and then on to Germany.

Text Of His Message

Petain was taken into custody by an official of the German Embassy, but he sent this message before leaving:

"Frenchmen: when this message reaches you I shall no longer be free.

"In the extreme condition that I now find myself I have nothing to reveal to you except the simple confirmation of what has motivated my conduct for the past four years.

"Having decided to remain among you I have tried day by day to find the best way to serve the permanent interests of France loyally and without compromise.

"One Object—To Protect You"

"I had but one object—to protect you from the worst.

"All that I have done and all that I have accepted, consented to, or submitted to, whether willingly or by force, has been solely for your welfare; because if I could not be your sword I wanted to be your shield.

"Under certain circumstances my words and my acts must have surprised you. You must realize that they have hurt me more than you can possibly imagine.

"Suffered For And With You"

"I have suffered for you and with you, and I have marshaled all of my forces against what is menacing you. I have shielded you from some certain perils. However, there were some, alas, that I could not prevent.

"My conscience is my witness that no one from any party can contradict me on this point. What the enemy wants today is to take me away from you. I don't have to justify myself in their eyes. I care only for the people of France. For you as for me there is only one France—the France of our ancestors.

"Again once more I advise you to unite.

Unity Called Duty Of French

"It is not difficult to do one's duty, even though it sometimes is hard to recognize it. Yours is simple. Unite with those who will give you a guarantee to lead you along the road of honor and order.

"Order must reign. And because I represent order legitimately, I remain your chief. Obey me and obey those that will bring you words of social peace without which order cannot be reestablished.

"Those who will tell you to follow a policy of reconciliation and renaissance of France through reciprocal forgiveness and love of your fellow-countrymen—those are the real French leaders. They continue my work. Be at their side. For myself, I have been separated from you, but I do not leave you and I hope that all of you will give your utmost loyalty to France which, God willing, will be restored to her grandeur.

"Destiny Takes Me Away"

"Destiny is taking me away. I undergo the greatest constraint that a man can suffer. It is with joy that I accept this suffering, should it be a condition of your deliverance, if before foreigners, even should they be allies, you remain faithful to the true patriotism which thinks only of the true interests of France, and if my sacrifice enables you to find again the way of sacred union for the renaissance of your fatherland.

"Henri Philippe Petain."

Herriot was brought to Paris from Nancy by Laval expressly to attend and join a meeting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies to discuss problems arising from the Allied advance on Paris and the possibility of moving the French Government from Vichy to Belfort. But the meeting never was held.

Laval Hand In Herriot Arrest

Many Parisians are whispering that Laval arranged the arrests of Petain and Herriot and then his own arrest in a deal with his German masters which would prevent the Allies from getting the custody of Petain and Herriot. At the same time, he was said to have tried to make it appear to his countrymen that he did not leave Paris voluntarily as the Allied troops drew near.

Whether these rumors have any basis cannot be determined at this time. Copies of letters reliably reported to have been exchanged between Laval and Otto Abetz, German Ambassador to Vichy, make it appear as though Laval opposed the German determination to move the French Government to Belfort and was arrested because of his determination and his desire to stay in Paris.

Chronology Of Events

According to my informant the chronology of events leading up to the situation was this:

Herriot, who had been under guard, was brought to Paris August 15, and stayed at the Hotel De Ville (city hall). Next day he lunched with Laval and Abetz. At 11 P. M. that same day Laval was told that the chief of the Gestapo had presented himself with an ordor from the head of the Gestapo, Heinrich Himmler, to bring Herriot to Germany.

Laval immediately went to Herriot at the Hotel De Ville. Herriot gave the following letter to Laval, which was dated August 16:

"After having been informed at Nancy by President Laval that I was free without any effort to seek freedom on my part, and after having been taken back to Paris, I am again taken to an unknown destination with my wife, who courageously and voluntarily followed me, regardless of the lot that may befall me.

"I have no means to resist the command enforced by arms, especially when this command is a breach of a word of honor. But I want to leave with you, President Laval, this solemn protest which I ask you to transmit to the German Ambassador. HERRIOT."

Laval's Letter To Abetz

After receiving this letter Laval sent the following letter to Abetz, dated August 17:

"I was informed by you that I could announce to President Herriot that he was free. I went to Nancy for this purpose and brought him back to Paris.

"News of his arrest and his transfer to Nancy or to Germany, which I have just learned, affects me deeply.

"Should this order be executed I shall have to construe it as a grave offense to me personally. People will not hesitate to implicate me in this act and you know very well that I have never been party to this sort of conduct.

Asked To Be Prisoner

"I should ask you to consider me as a prisoner in the same manner as President Herriot and in any case that you force me to renounce all my powers as head of the state.

"The relations that I have had with Chancellor Hitler authorize me to address myself directly to him through you as intermediary, in order to have him revoke this order. PIERRE LAVAL."

It was reported Abetz did not reply to the letter but informed Laval it was impossible to cancel the order. However, he did send Laval a letter August 17.

Abetz Ordered Transfer

Abetz's letter said "considering the situation created by military operation the German Government begs me to inform you that it believes that for the welfare of France the seat of the Government should be transferred from Vichy to Belfort.

"I know that you, as head of the Government, have decided to stay amongst our people come what may and I have so informed my Government of your decision.

"The German Government well realizes the reasons for your wanting to stay, but it cannot reconsider.

"This decision will be reconsidered whenever the military situation permits."

Shift To Belfort Opposed

To this Laval replied August 17:

"This is to acknowledge your letter, the contents of which I have made known to the Council of Ministers.

"The French Government does not accept the invitation to change the seat of government from Vichy to Belfort regardless of the reasons you may propose.

"In this case, after having conferred with all the Ministers present we cannot consider your invitation to move."

In saying he had conferred with "all Ministers present" Laval probably knew that Marcel Deat, Joseph Darnand and Fernand de Brinon had left for Germany two days before.

"Irrevocable Decision"

Abetz's reply to this letter follows:

"Mister President, the communication that I had the honor of sending you this afternoon concerning the transfer of the French Government to Belfort is the irrevocable decision of the German Reich.

"I regret to inform you that, in case the French Government refused to move, forceful means will be employed.

"I trust that you, Mr. President, and the members of the Government will realize this decision not only was taken to maintain order in the rear of the German army but to assure the personal security and safety of the French Government."

Laval Forced To Yield

Laval replied the same day:

"In answer to your letter I regret to think that the German Government would not hesitate to employ forceful means to effect the transfer of the French Government to Belfort.

"You are very anxious to assure the personal security of the French Government, but allow me to say that my anxiety was of a higher nature—I wanted to accomplish to the very end, regardless of the risks, my duties as head of the Government.

"I am forced to accept. But you understand that under these conditions I can no longer exercise my powers."

Laval was arrested at midnight August 17 at the Hotel Matignon and transferred to Belfort. On the same day Petain had written Laval from Vichy but it was dispatched at 8 P. M. and never reached Laval.

PARIS IS BOMBED BY GERMAN PLANES

Many Casualties Reported. St. Maur Suburb Hardest Hit

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP)—The suburbs of Paris were bombed by German planes shortly before midnight, and early today the skies were aglow from the light of fires.

[The Paris radio in a broadcast recorded in London said the Germans also shelled Paris early Sunday morning.]

At this hour there is no estimate of the damage, and it is not known whether any historical buildings or monuments were hit.

Death Toll Put At 110

The death toll from the raid was placed at 110, with 719 persons injured.

With this grim reminder that Paris still was in the war zone, the Paris radio announced all work would be resumed tomorrow morning and summoned all of last week's anti-German strikers back to their jobs except in Nazi-controlled areas.

Restoration of telephone and telegraph communications and mail services are to be hastened in liberated areas. Train service between Paris and liberated provinces is to be resumed early in the week.

Bombs Ended Merry-Making

The planes came over at 11 P. M. while the people still were in the streets, singing and strolling through the warm night. Merry-making which began with the entrance of American and French troops still was in progress.

Pathfinder planes hung their flares in the heavens and then came the crump of heavy bombs. The shudder of concussions ran through buildings, and plate glass crashed into the street.

It sounded as though there were many raiders above. Anti-aircraft guns crackled, and there was even some small arms fire from the streets as some planes came over very low to pick out targets.

PLANES SPEED FOOD TO PARIS

Special Ration For Children Included In Shipments

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 27 (AP)—Allied air forces started rushing emergency food supplies to Paris by air with hundreds of transport planes hauling 500 tons today from Britain to a point near the French capital to be moved the rest of the way by truck.

"The air move was the first of a series which will be continued to expedite the work of revictualling and supplementing the move of many hundreds of tons now on the way to Paris on the ground from Allied stock piles in Normandy," an official announcement said.

Airmen Help Load Planes

It added that "all available air force personnel worked ceaselessly today to speed these shipments: British aircraftsmen helped load United States planes while American airmen helped load RAF planes."

The shipments included biscuits, canned meat, dried peas and beans, sugar, canned soup, margerine and coffee, as well as vitaminized chocolate and dried milk, which the announcement said were special rations for young children and expectant mothers under medical care in the French capital. Disinfectants and soaps were also being sent.

Distributed By French

The French themselves will handle the distribution of the supplies on their arrival at Paris.

The Civil Affairs Division of Supreme Headquarters, which was responsible for planning the relief, said French authorities were also moving into Paris hundreds of tons of other foodstuffs obtained elsewhere in France.

German Positions Critical

Soviet Order of Day Says Debacle Worse In Portent Than Stalingrad.

18,000 MORE NAZIS CAPTURED

300,000 Killed or Taken Prisoner in Eight Days Of Lightning Drive.

By Tom Yarbrough

LONDON, Monday, Aug. 28 (AP)—An avalanche of Russian tanks and motorized infantry poured into the rich Ploesti oil region in the heart of capitulated Romania yesterday, shattering the Galati Gap defenses between the Danube and the Carpathians and overhauling thousands of Germans trying to escape to Hungary.

In a disaster of Stalingrad proportions, the Germans were overwhelmed at Focsani and Galati, anchors on the defense line, and the Russians rolled on through the petroleum fields of Ramnicul-Sarat, 22 miles beyond Focsani and only 75 miles northeast of Bucharest.

On Edge of Belt

Ramnicul-Sarat is on the edge of the Ploesti oil belt whose center in the town of that name lies only 57 miles southwest of the advancing Russians.

Romanian troops going over to the Allied banner struck the Germans at Ploesti, a Bucharest communique said, and blocked the mountain passes leading through the Carpathians to Hungary via Transylvania.

Berlin frankly admitted the German position was "precarious," and said Nazi troops were locked in an "unusually ferocious" battle with Romanian troops amid the twisted wreckage of the installations at Ploesti.

Will Be at Ploesti Soon

The Russians were expected to reach Ploesti shortly, moving over highways littered with German dead and abandoned equipment. The Germans were even throwing away their guns in their flight, Moscow said.

Two Russian orders of the day and a communique announced the German debacle which in its strategic portent even surpasses the Nazi Stalingrad disaster.

Besides the sweep toward Bucharest and Ploesti, the Russians climbing westward into the Carpathians above the Galati Gap seized a number of localities on a railway leading to the Transylvanian plateau, including Comanesti, 60 miles northwest of Focsani, and Targuocna, Romania's largest salt-mining center.

A total of 18,000 more Germans were seized yesterday by the two Soviet armies moving toward the heart of the Balkans, and the bulletin said two Romanian divisions of 12,000 men surrendered with all their equipment. The remnants of two other Romanian divisions also gave up.

In addition, the bulletin said the remnants of 12 Nazi divisions pocketed southwest of Chisinau, 140 miles behind the Russians spilling through the Galati Gap, had been compressed into a small wooded area and were being annihilated.

This trapped force has been estimated at between 40,000 and 80,000 men, and the bulletin said three more Nazi generals had been killed and four captured.

On the basis of Moscow announcements the Russians in eight days of a lightning drive have killed or captured more than 300,000 Germans and Romanians. That would make an overall total of 1,081,886 Axis troops killed or captured since the gigantic Soviet summer offensive began June 23.

Romanians Capture 12,000

A Bucharest communique announced that Romanian troops, obeying the new pro-Allied government's declaration of war on Germany, had captured more than 12,000 Germans.

It said the Germans had been thrown out of Bucharest, and were being engaged hotly along the Ploesti-Buzau highway. Buzau is 42 miles northeast of Ploesti and only 16 miles from the Russians who seized Ramnicul-Sarat.

The Germans were said to be trying to marshal their troops to the Ploesti area at the foot of the Predeal pass in an effort to escape through the mountains into Transylvania. But Bucharest said Romanian troops at the other end of the pass, at Brasov, had disarmed the enemy in that area and secured the town.

Targoviste, 28 miles west of Ploesti, along with its airfield, was captured by Romanian troops speeding the advance of the Russians, the Bucharest announcement said.

Romanian Gunboats Sing Germans

Romanian gunboats sank two Nazi motor torpedo boats, captured two and damaged 10 out of a German convoy of 40 attempting to flee up the Danube, Bucharest said.

In the disputed province of Transylvania, the northern part of which was taken from the Romanians and given to Hungary in 1940 by the Germans, the Bucharest bulletin said that "Germans, reinforced by weak Hungarian elements, have tried to cross the border." They were repulsed with heavy losses, it added.

On the Estonian front Moscow announced the capture of 50 localities by Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's Third Baltic Army, including Tsirguliina and Igaste, seven miles northeast of the Littvian-Estonian border city of Valga, a big rail junction. Karula, eight miles east of Valga and Hargla, 16 miles southwest, also were seized.

North of Valga the Russians, driving straight westward toward the Gulf of Riga in an effort to split Germany's two imperilled Baltic Armies, captured Pikasilla on the south shire of Lake Vartsjaru, 57 miles from the sea.

Northeast and east of Praga, Warsaw's eastern suburb, the Russians said they had improved their positions. Berlin also told of heavy fighting west of the Vistula river, south of Warsaw, where the Soviets have built up a powerful bridgehead aimed at German Silesia.

In their Romanian victories the Russians have overrun since Aug. 20 a territory of about 18,500 square miles, equal in size to New Hampshire and Vermont combined.

In their strides toward Ploesti's fields, Germany's last big fuel source before Allied air attacks sharply curtailed their output in recent months, the Russians overran more than 150 localities.

Stalin Announces Successes

Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin in two orders of the day announced the Russian smashes into the Danubian lowlands by the powerful Second Ukraine Army commanded by Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky, victor at Odessa, and the equally massive Third Ukraine Army under Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin, Crimean hero.

Malinovsky's troops in a 38-mile advance in two days, toppled Focsani, western anchor of the 45-mile defense line between the Danube and the Carpathian mountains, and then went on to capture by storm Ramnicul-Sarat, 22 miles below, on the trunk railway leading to Ploesti and Bucharest.

To the east, Tolbukhin's forces shattered the eastern anchor by seizing Galati on the Danube in a 12-mile strike from Reni, farther downstream. Tolbukhin's men on Saturday had seized Reni and other ports along the Danube reaching down to the Black Sea, thus reconquering all of Bessarabia, lost to the Germans and Romanians in 1941.

Pouring onto the Romanian plains below the curving Transylvanian Alps section of the Carpathian mountain wall the Russians now were in position to strike a staggering series of blows to the Germans.

Not only were the Ploesti fields doomed as far as the Germans were concerned, but also another great prize—wheat. For years the Germans have been taking hundreds of thousands of tons of Romanian wheat surpluses to bulwark their own vulnerable economy.

In wheat, rye and grain, Romania is one of the richest countries of southeastern Europe, and also has manganese deposits which the Germans have been exploiting.

95 Miles From Bulgaria

At fallen Ramnicul-Sarat the Russians were within 95 miles of the Bulgarian frontier and 135 miles from the Yugoslav frontier. With Bulgaria's and Romania's defection, Germany now may be forced to recall the 15 or more divisions which she has strung out through Yugoslavia and Greece in the south, or risk their entrapment.

Germany's Black Sea naval units and ships also are lost now.

Second Attack on Silesian Plants

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP)—Fifteenth Air Force Flying Fortresses and Liberators from Italy drove through heavy flak and attacked two synthetic oil refineries at Blechhammer in Silesia today. Reports from Rome said about 750 heavy bombers and a huge fighter escort made the attack, the second at Blechhammer this month.

In addition United States heavies from Italy and their fighter escort blasted bridges over the Po, the Aviso viaduct in the Brenner Pass and the Venzone viaduct on a line running from Austria. The Borovinica viaduct in Yugoslavia also was hit. Returning airmen said all of the targets were straddled with bombs.

The daylight penetration of the Ruhr by 1,000 of the RAF's giant Halifaxes was the second precedent-breaking operation by the British in twenty-four hours, following the long-distance attack on Koenigsberg. The saturation attack on the East Prussian capital was in support of the Red Army offensive.

Despite elaborate German defenses and the size of the huge Halifaxes, making them a conspicuous daylight target, the Ruhr attack was a success, the Air Ministry said. Bombs were dropped visually and were "well concentrated."

the waterfront, but elsewhere over southern France Allied troops ranged far and wide seeking the enemy whose principal aim appeared to be to escape northward.

Well Stocked Position

The waterfront line which Nazis in Marseille occupied and from which they shelled the city at intervals was described by an American officer as "well prepared and stocked with supplies possibly for a year."

Until yesterday the Germans had been scattered pockets, and organized resistance was believed at an end but an assault by French troops on Notre Dame de La Gard drove them back to the waterfront line. While 5,000 Germans have been captured it was estimated there might be 2,000 to 3,000 remaining.

The Allied High Command remained silent on progress of columns charging up the Rhone and those far to the northeast who were in position to swing northwest to Lyon and close the last main exits for Germans in the south.

U. S. Columns Roll Along Border

(Reports in London from Switzerland said American columns had rolled along the Swiss border from Perly, three miles south of Geneva, and now were within 170 miles of Americans at Troyes.

(An Algiers broadcast said French Forces of the Interior had liberated Vichy, French collaborationist capital, but gave no details.)

As the bag of prisoners since invasion passed 23,000, German resistance collapsed inside the city and port of Toulon, but use of the big naval base was denied the Allies by enemy units which took refuge on a peninsula dominating the harbor.

A front-line dispatch said that on ever other sector it appeared obvious that the Germans were fighting only to escape—not to resist the advance of the French and Americans.

1,000 Germans Quit

One thousand Germans threw down their arms north of Grenoble when their regimental commander ordere an attack and went over to the Allied lines.

There still was heavy fighting such as that around Toulon and in hold-out positions in Marseille, but it came from forces hopelessly cut off.

The strategy is to keep the fleeing enemy in the dark as to what roads still are open.

While the Americans in the south last were reported less than 200 miles away from powerful U. S. armored units southeast of Paris, the German line of retreat is in much greater peril than the mileage indicates.

Only a Few Roads Passable

Only a few roads toward the Reich along this route are even partly passable, and these are under bombing attack and are made hazardous by the French forces of the interior, which now control most of southern France.

The extent of the Nazi disintegration in southern France was indicated by the announcement from French FFI officers at Hendaye, France, near the Spanish border, that 10,000 Germans who had abandoned Bordeaux, last stronghold in southwestern France, had surrendered. Allied headquarters had issued no announcements concerning the situation in southwestern France, however.

In the fierce but small-scale battle being waged for the final liberation of Marseille, the French seized another general—the fourth to be taken since the Allies stormed the southern beaches.

He is Major Gen. Sigurd Boje, commander of the Nazi administrative headquarters in the city.

Nazis Driven from Square

French troops reached Marseille's waterfront at several places and Colonials drove the Germans from the square of Notre Dame de la Garde, highest ground in the city, but several thousand of the enemy still held out on heights to the north.

The low caliber of some of these garrison forces was illustrated by the capture of 11 soldiers from one guard unit whose ages ranged from 21 to 71 years. Five were physically disabled.

Marseille's Forst St. Jean and San Nicolas were surrounded and were under attack by infantry and tanks. The Germans answered with light artillery.

A communique from Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army headquarters reported that forces driving east toward northern Italy along the Riviera were being slowed by dense minefields and some artillery fire.

Planes Sweep Line of Retreat

Allied warplanes swept the lines of enemy retreat and bombed strongpoints in close support of the ground forces.

American Mitchells made 12 bombing attacks during the day on German gun positions on the islands of Pomegues and Ratonneau in Marseille harbor.

The Mediterranean air force reported the attacks were successful, presumably indicating the island guns which had been shelling French troops in the Marseille area had been silenced.

The seventh Army command disclosed that Col. Edwin A. Walker now is commanding officer of the first special service force operating in southern France. The force, a mixed American and Canadian combat unit, won fame on the Anzio beachhead and in subsequent operations. The special service force formerly was commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert T. Fredericks who now heads the Allied airborne forces which have been operating in southern France.

Paris Is Visited By Eisenhower On Tour of Front

He Goes to Arc de Triomphe With Bradley and Koenig, Gets a Frenzied Greeting

By Howard Cowan

For the combined American press

PARIS, Aug. 27 (AP).—Liberated Paris got up this morning after its wildest Saturday night in years to touch off another frenzied demonstration of greeting to General Dwight D. Eisenhower and his British, French and American staffs.

"I have come here to pay the tribute of the Allied forces to the indomitable spirit of Paris," the Allied supreme commander said at a ceremony at one of the city ended at the Arc de Triomphe.

The Luftwaffe tried to burn Paris down last night and a handful of British, Canadian and American troops with the help of the Parisians themselves tried to drink the town dry, but this morning crowds standing on tiptoe jammed the Champs-Elysses and shouted themselves hoarse for the four-star general with the smile as broad as the Kansas prairie.

Bradley, Koenig With Him

With the supreme commander were Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of the United States 12th Army Group; Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior; Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, French Second Armored Division commander; Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, deputy supreme commander, and Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Fifth United States Corps commander.

General Eisenhower wanted General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and Gen. Charles de Gaulle in on the show, but the exigencies of war prevented their participation.

Armored cars and motorcycles, with sirens wailing, preceded the Allied commanders, who waved their greetings from open touring cars. The route took them past the Washington monument in La Place de Lafayette, then down the Champs-Elysees with its world-famous Place de La Concorde and the Arc de Triomphe.

Started On Visit To Front

Eisenhower had not planned to visit the French capital when he left his Normandy headquarters yesterday for a tour of the Falaise pocket to get a first-hand look at what happened to Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge's Seventh Army when the British-Canadian and American vise closed on the Germans.

The 200-mile trip took the supreme commander past scores of blackened hulks of Nazi tanks, many of them reeking with the stench of unburied dead. At Aubryen-Emes near Chambois the general left the car and walked a half a mile up the road to look upon the ghastly scene of death and destruction where the last large roundup of fleeing Germans was turned into a slaughter both from the air and ground.

In the midst of the area of confusion and death a French family was going about its business placidly, as if nothing had happened. The mother, who had been hanging out the wash, was setting the table in a two-story house with the entire front blown away. The family hardly looked up as the party walked past.

"It's Ike," GI's Shout

Exclusive of the climactic entry into Paris, the trip was worth millions in morale both to the general and to the thousands of GI's who hailed him along the way.

"It's Ike," they shouted as they craned to get a glimpse of the Allied commander and his party.

The group stopped by the roadside near Argentan for lunch and a little French girl from a cottage across the road timidly handed Eisenhower a bouquet of cabbage-sized dahlias. The general was red-faced and flustered because he could not say "thanks" so that she would understand.

Apple Hunting Stopped Him

At another spot the general's car was held up on a narrow road blocked by two empty trucks. The driver stepped on the siren and several dozen GI's came scampering out of an orchard, their pockets bulging with apples given them by a farmer. They clambered in the trucks as General Eisenhower roared in amusement.

The party stopped to repair a tire in mid-afternoon, and a perspiring Frenchman, pushing a bicycle up a hill, stopped to catch his breath. He had only one arm.

He told General Eisenhower he wanted to reach Paris by nightfall.

The four-star General stepped in the road as the next convay stopped and issued his only order of the day: He told the driver to give the Frenchman and his bicycle a lift.

The Supreme Commander visited General Bradley and General Montgomery, and it was at the Twelfth Army headquarters that he suddenly took a notion he would like to see Paris. He waited until General Bradley returned to get his permission, explaining that he was in his area.

General Eisenhower graciously sent the four correspondents assigned to his headquarters into the French capital for a Saturday night in Paris. He came in himself this morning. After the parade he returned by car to his Normandy headquarters.

Nazi Generals Out of Action in France Total 25

One Admiral Also on List of Those Killed, Wounded, Captured or Vanished

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Aug. 27 (AP).—Twenty-five German generals and one admiral have been killed, wounded, captured, replaced or have disappeared in western France since D Day, June 6, it was announced late today.

Since generals do not ordinarily take a position on or very near the battle line, this unusual toll was seen as an indication both of the speed and the power of the Allied attack, and was a hint that Adolf Hitler was making it uncomfortable for leaders who backpedaled for reasons of personal safety.

The list, as read out by a staff officer, follows:

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, severely wounded and probably dead.

Field Marshal Karl Gerd Rudolf von Rundstedt, dismissed by Hitler.

Colonel General Friedrich Dollman, commander of the German 7th Army, dead, cause not known.

General Marcks, commander 84th Corps, killed.

General Otto von Steulpnagel, commander in France, severely wounded in the head.

Lieutenant General Drabich-Wachter, 326th Infantry Division, killed.

Lieutenant General Elfeldt, commander 84th Corps, captured.

Lieutenant General Hellmich, commander 243d Infantry, killed.

Lieutenant General Praun, commander 277th Infantry, killed.

Lieutenant General Spang, commander 266th Infantry, captured.

Lieutenant General Carl Wilhelm von Schlieben, commander at Cherbourg, captured.

Lieutenant General Stegmann, commander [illegible] Infantry, killed.

Major Generals von Bayards and Ritter Andelder, Panzer commanders, reported killed, proof lacking.

Major General Falley, commander 92d Infantry, killed.

Major General Menny, commander 84th Infantry, captured.

Major General Satler, commander 77th Infantry, killed.

Rear Admiral Walter Hennecke, naval commandant at Cherbourg, captured.

Major General Lammerding, commander 2d S. S. Panzer, wounded.

Major General Ostendorff, commander 18th Panzer, wounded.

Major General Witt, commander 12th S. S., killed.

General Alexander von Faulkenhausen, commander in Belgium and north France, replaced.

Colonel General Von Schweppenburg, Panzer commander, replaced.

General Sodenstern, commander 19th Army, resigned.

Another Lost in East

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP).—The German official news agency D. N. B. said today Nazi Infantry General Hausfe had been killed in action on the eastern front east of Lwow in southern Poland.

Vansittart, in Talk to U.S., Insists on a Hard Peace

Says Whole German People

Is Responsible

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP).—"The entire German people is responsible for aggressian and war, and only a hard peace involving disarmament, decentralization and reeducation will be a just and durable peace," Lord Vansittart, former British permanet Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, declared today.

Speaking on a short-wave broadcast to the United States on the University of Chicago's Round Table discussion by the National Broadcasting Company, Vansittart said that occupation is the key to a successful German settlement and without it all other reform will either not get a chance or will collapse like a house of cards."

"Only a police force without military equipment may be allowed Germany," Vansittart stated.

"All Allies must share in the occupation, which at most will require only a dozen divisions of mechanized force. No time of occupation can be set. It may have to last for generations; it may be shorter. The world's safety will set the period."

Vansittart suggested establishment of an Allied high commissioner of education in Germany backed by a large staff and authority to keep a vigilant eye on education, press, radio and films until a new spirit arises and takes hold of Germany.

RAF BOMBERS HAMMER RUHR

U. S. Heavies Raid Synthetic Oil Plants In Silesia

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Powerful formations of Allied war planes, striking from bases in Britain and Italy, smashed again at Germany's synthetic oil sources today and strafed and bombed fleeing units of the retreating German army.

The big daytime operations followed RAF night assaults on Konigsberg, Kiel, Hamburg and Berlin.

RAF heavy bombers, making their first daylight assault in the heavily defended Ruhr, bombed synthetic oil plants at Homberg-Meerbeck, while United States Flying Fortresses and Liberators from Italy drove through heavy flak and attacked two synthetic oil refineries at Blechhammer in Silesia.

German-Held Italy Pounded

In addition to the attack on the Silesia oil refineries, the United States heavies from Italy and their fighter escort blasted bridges over the Po, the Aviso viaduct in the Brenner Pass and the Venzone viaduct on a line running from Austria. The Borovinica viaduct in Yugoslavia also was hit. Returning airmen said all of the targets were straddled with bombs.

Some 500 Britain-based Liberators and Fortresses with an escort of 1,000 Mustangs and Lightnings raided military objectives in northwestern Germany and on the Nazi-held Danish peninsula. The Eighth Air Force formations encountered no enemy fighter opposition but 3 bombers and 11 fighters were downed by flak.

United States Thunderbolts bombed and strafed targets in the Metz and Saarbruecken areas smashing 12 enemy planes, 116 locomotives, 440 railway cars, 65 fuel cars, an ammunition train and 41 motor vehicles.

More than 200 Marauders and Havocs flying in nine waves attacked German troop and equipment concentrations on the west bank of the Seine near Rouen.

Cruiser Sunk At Brest

Late in the afternoon RAF Lancasters attacked German shipping at Brest. Lancaster pilots described the bombings as effective.

The Ninth Air Force announced the destruction of a German light cruiser and heavy damage to a destroyer and 14 merchant vessels in the harbor of Brest during a concentrated attack Friday by Thunderbolts.

Sixteen Thunderbolts participated in the attack, diving through a hole in the cloud cover over the harbor to bomb and strafe the Nazi fleet.

No Enemy Planes Met

No Thunderbolts were lost and no enemy aircraft was encountered, but an intense wall of flak was hurled at the raiders.

Indicating that the daylight American assault on the Continent was in full strength, the German radio flooded the air with warnings of approaching bombers, especially over the northwest.

The daylight penetration of the Ruhr by 1,000 of the RAF's Halifaxes, escorted by Spitfires, was the second precedent-breaking operation by the British in 24 hours.

Huge Fires At Konigsberg

In the raid of Konigsberg last night RAF Lancasters attacked their most distant target. The saturation attack on the East Prussian capital was in support of the Red army offensive. The Air Ministry said huge fires were left burning.

Despite elaborate defenses and the size of the Halifaxes, making them a conspicuous daylight target, the Ruhr attack was completed without the loss of a single bomber, the Air Ministry announced. Bombs were dropped visually and were "well concentrated," the communique said.

In addition to the RAF night assault on Konigsberg, another and larger force dropped 1,700 tons of high explosives and incendiaries on Kiel, where smoke from large fires rose to a height of 15,000 feet. Mosquitos slashed at Berlin and Hamburg while other RAF planes carried out extensive minelaying operations.

RAF Loses 29 Bombers

The night's assaults cost the RAF 29 bombers, the Ministry communique said.

The flight to Konigsberg involved a 2,000 mile roundtrip for the Lancasters and for nine-and-a-half minutes the big bombers poured down their lethal loads which included new flame-throwing incendiaries on the east Prussian capital.

Returning RAF pilots reported Konigsberg fires were visible for 250 miles and one pilot described the target as the "biggest blaze I've seen."

Seldom hit, Konigsberg threw up a heavy anti-aircraft barrage in a desperate attempt to ward off the raiders.

Nazis Left Versailles Palace Intact, but in Need of Repairs

VERSAILLES, France, Aug. 27 (AP).—The beautiful Palace of Versailles, where the 1919 peace was signed, is a picture of neglect today, with its classic gardens overgrown with weeds, but the palace is structurally intact. The Germans did not molest the palace, despite Adolf Hitler's vehemence against the "dictate of Versailles," but it is run down and its halls are badly in need of repair.

Earlier reports that the west wing had been burned proved untrue.

The many fountains, dry for the last four years, were turned on today at an impressive ceremony celebrating the liberation of Versailles.

The palace itself was stripped by the French in 1939, when its priceless royal trappings and Gobelin tapestries were carried away to a secret hiding place. The Germans carried on a fruitless four-year hunt for them.

During the last few days of German occupation the French underground kept watch on the palace and prevented its destruction by a vengeance-bent enemy.

A care taker said the Germans left the palace grounds on the night of Aug. 23. Since 1940 they had restricted visitors to German troops and junketing civilians and French collaborationists. French guides who were present at the 1919 peace signing said the Nazis closed the main palace with the hall of mirrors in 1940 when Nazi leaders, including Hitler, visited the palace.

Dampness caused from lack of heating resulted in serious damage to some of the historic chambers of the palace, including Marie Antoinette's reception room.

The monument to General John J. Pershing at the entrance to Versailles is intact, as is the monument to Napoleon. The near-by City Hall and prison were wrecked by French patriots who released imprisoned countrymen.

REVOLT URGED ON HUNGARY

Call Issued To Overthrow Government, Oust Germans

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Pro-Allied Hungarians called on the last big Axis satellite in Hitler's Balkan front to quit the war today as the Germans strove desperately to keep Hungary in line by rushing defense construction workers to her frontiers.

With Bulgaria awaiting delivery of American-British armistice terms and persistent reports that troops of capitulated Romania already were fighting the Hungarians in disputed Transylvania, the Free Hungarian Council in London issued an appeal to all Hungarians to overthrow their Government and turn their weapons against the Germans.

[CBS quoted the London radio as saying that Hungarian underground stations likewise called on the Hungarian army to "throw the Germans out of their country and quit the Russian front."]

Drafted By Count Karolyi

The Free Hungarian Council manifesto was drafted under the chairmanship of Count Michael Karolyi, who was briefly President of the Hungarian republic in 1918, before the regime was supplanted by Bela Kun's Communist government.

A Moscow dispatch said the Germans had rushed workers to Hungary's borders, particularly in Transylvania where they are particularly vulnerable because of Romania's capitulation and declaration of war against Germany. King Mihai's new pro-Ally government in Bucharest has announced its intention of regaining Transylvania, ceded to Hungary in 1940 under Nazi dictation.

Romania Issues War Order

In Bucharest the Romanian Government issued a manifesto calling on troops and civilians to chase the Germans out of that country and prevent them "from destroying the wealth of our country"—a nation rich in oil and wheat.

[Gen. Iosif Teodorescu, Bucharest military commander, ordered all Germans between 16 and 60, troops or civilians, to report to police authorities by 7 P. M. tonight or face treatment as spies, in a decree broadcast by Bucharest radio and reported by the Federal Communications Commission.

[Nazi Elite SS troops or others changing into civilian clothes will be treated as spies, and anyone committing an act of sabotage against the Romanians will be shot on sight, the broadcast said.]

It was learned authoritatively that Anglo-American armistice terms already are en route to Bulgaria, and that Moscow has been fully informed of them.

Bulgaria Disarms Germans

[Radio Ankara in a broadcast recorded by CBS said German troops in Bulgaria "are now completely disarmed."]

The armistice terms being offered to Bulgaria in her avowed wish to revert to "absolute neutrality" have not been disclosed. Bulgaria feels entitled to some reward for not joining in the war against Russia, but at the same time has laid herself open to punishment by joining the war against the United States and Britain.

Involved also is Bulgaria's spoliation of Greece and Yugoslavia by her occupation troops sent into those countries after the German conquest. The Greeks and Yugoslavs repeatedly have made clear their case against the Bulgars, similar to the Belgian, Dutch and French cases against Germany calling for retribution and assurances of future security.

The London Daily Mail said the terms for Bulgaria, drafted by the European Advisory Committee in London, would require complete surrender and relinquishment of all territory seized.

Istanbul Believed Site Of Bulgarian Parley

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 27 (AP)—Presence here of the American and British ambassadors and the Bulgarian Minister to Turkey led to the strong assumption that Istanbul was the scene of Bulgarian armistice negotiations.

POLES FORCE THE METAURO

8th Army In Italy Follows Foe Toward Gothic Line

Rome, Aug. 27 (AP)—Eighth Army troops, following up an enemy withdrawal along the entire eastern portion of the Italian front, have crossed the Metauro river, Allied headquarters announced today.

General Sir Harold Alexander's headquarters announced that Polish troops and other Eighth Army assault forces crossed the Metauro on a front six to seven miles wide. They established a bridgehead two-and-a-half miles deep, extending from Borgo Lucrezia, six and a half miles from the Adriatic, inland to Montefelcino.

The onslaught was made in the face of determined fighting by strong enemy rearguards. The Poles charged across the river under heavy shellfire and sniping.

Town Of Saltara Taken

On the Pole's left flank other forces, with tank support, rolled across an important lateral road paralleling Metauro and captured the towns of Saltara, nine miles southwest of Fano, and Serrungarina, a mile and a half farther to the southwest.

Other armored force units were firmly established in the mountains north of Apecchio.

The latest gains brought the Eighth Army to within 25 miles of Rimini, in the vicinity where the Gothic Line ends and the broad plains of the Po river valley begin.

Nazis Retreat To Gothic Line

German withdrawals into their Gothic Line defenses were reported along the whole Eighth Army front from the Adriatic to the great bend of the Arno river east of Florence.

On the Fifth Army front, where elements of the American 92nd Infantry Division, a Negro formation, were disclosed to have gone into combat, only mortar dueling and patrol activity was reported.

Arrived In Italy July 13

The division's first man to give his life in the Italian theater was a captain, commander of a company, who was killed by mortar fire while going forward in a reconnaissance mission, it was learned today.

The 92nd, activated in September, 1942, at Camp Breckenridge, Kentucky, arrived in Italy July 13 as a completely self-sustaining combat organization with its own artillery, anti-aircraft and communications and supply.

First Lieutenant Philip Grayson, assistant personnel officer, Columbus, Ohio, said it was equipped "with everything we asked for."

The division was fed into the line within a fortnight after its arrival. The name of its commanding officer was withheld.

The division's chaplain, First Lieutenant Allen L. Johnson, of Mississippi, described the men as "the best bunch" he ever saw.

"That's right," said Technical Sergeant Robert E. Bazemore, of Portsmouth, Va. "We're going to make news."

Liberation of Paris Credited to 1st Army

PARIS, Aug. 27 (AP).—Censorship permitted the disclosure tonight that units of the American 1st Army, which is under the command of Lieutenant General Courtney H. Hodges, were credited with the liberation of Paris.

The official letter that will turn Paris back to the French was drafted for Hodges's signature, but the general insisted that Paris was taken by one of his corps commanders and said the glory belonged to that officer.

Actor Chevalier Reported Killed

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—Maurice Chevalier, former French film actor, was killed by the French Maquis last Friday, Reuter said today in a dispatch from Paris.

French headquarters in London said it had received no confirmation of Chevalier's death and added that if it were true, "we would be very much surprised, because orders were that any suspects were to be arrested for trial, not shot immediately."

Sang In Occupied Paris

30 24— 18321

Chevalier, Paris slum boy whose smile, straw hat and Parisian slang made him a world idol on the stage and screen before the war, turned up a month after the French defeat in June, 1940, on the Riviera.

A year later, on September 5, 1941, he arrived in Paris where he was reported singing many times in German-occupied Paris.

In November, 1941, he went to sing for French prisoners at Magdeburg, Germany, where he himself was imprisoned during the first World War.

Chevalier was well-known to American movie fans, having made several pictures in this country. His last visit to the United States was in 1935.

MRS. BOLTON TO URGE IMPROVED HOSPITALS

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP)—Representative Frances P. Bolton of Ohio said today that in her month-long survey of fifteen American hospitals in Britain she had found conditions "very fine with the morale of both patients and staff high now" but that she would lay before the War Department what she considered was a need for an increase in medical personnel in the European war theatre.

She said a "very serious problem" had been created by "the influx of casualties coming hard after a reduction in medical personnel in proportion to the size of other groups in the Army."

"It must be taken into consideration," Mrs. Bolton said, "that at these hospitals the medical outfits get no personnel for general utility work such as taking care of the grounds and the upkeep of the buildings."

The mother of two sons in the service, Mrs. Bolton has been talking with wounded soldiers. She said the men wanted her to be frank with them even when she told them, "It took two years to get you over here and we can't get you all back in a week after the war."

PILOT'S FIERY MEMORIAL

Gold Ring Tied to Bomb Loosed On Boxcars in France

ROME, Aug. 27 (AP) — In the dawn bombings on D-day along the French Riviera, Lieut. Col. Gilbert T. Mullins of Pagosa Springs, Col., cut loose two 500-pound bombs from his Thunderbolt at a string of boxcars — and thereby kept a promise made nearly two years ago.

The promise was made in a New York restaurant when a stranger introduced himself to Mullins and said he was the brother of a transport pilot who had crashed and been killed before he had a chance to fight overseas.

"Tie this to one of your bombs sometime," the stranger said, handing Mullins a gold ring that had belonged to the dead pilot. "My brother would like that."

Through the campaigns in North Africa, Pantelleria, Sicily and up the Italian peninsula Mullins carried the ring. "Now is the time," he mused. "This might be the last big show."

The brother of the dead pilot is William Radebeau of Camden, N. J.

Thunderbolt Gets Train And Bridge in One Pass

20 Ammunition Cars Explode, Flip Plane Upside Down

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP).—Major James N. Wood, of Rogers, Ark., in a single attack today, blew up a twenty-car ammunition train and a bridge in the Saarbruecken area in Germany.

Major Wood, piloting a Thunderbolt, reported he saw the train pulling out of a tunnel and attacked from the rear. Immediately he was rewarded with an explosion so tremendous it flipped his plane upside down.

Fellow flyers, 7,000 feet higher were shaken by the blast. When Wood got his plane under control again and circled to survey the damage he saw the entire train wrecked and off the tracks

New Robot Bomb Salvos Shatter 60-Hour Respite

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 27—The Germans fired brief salvos of flying bombs shortly after midnight last night and again at dawn today, causing some casualties and damage.

The brief flurries marked the only robot attacks on the capital and southern England during the past sixty hours. Anti-aircraft batteries and fighter planes attacked the missiles successfully.

Some got through, however, flattening houses and blasting buildings in the business district.

Swiss Let Nazi Wounded Pass

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP).—The German Transocean news agency said in a broadcast dispatch today that Swiss authorities were permitting hospital trains with severely wounded Germans from the Italian front to pass through Switzerland to Germany.

321st Bombardment Group Gets Citation

Rome, Aug. 27 (AP)—The 321st Bombardment Group has received a Presidential citation and battle streamers, it was announced today by Allied headquarters.

The veteran B-25 force, which served through the Tunisian, Sicilian and Italian campaigns, is commanded by Col. Richard H. Smith, of Belle Meade Park, Nashville, Tenn., and has flown more than 500 combat missions.

It was the first group to operate from Italian soil and was the first to fly from the United States to an overseas base in a single mass flight. The group has shot down eight enemy fighters for every bomber lost.

U. S. Now Possesses Airfield 600 Miles From Philippines

ASHTER-BUSH

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Monday, Aug. 28 (AP)—Disclosing completion of an Allied airfield within 600 miles of the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported today aerial strikes from Palau to Davao and a new flareup of ground action in Dutch New Guinea.

American patrols fanning inland from their month-old beachhead at Sansapor, on the northwest tip of New Guinea's Vogelkop peninsula, intercepted groups of Japanese soldiers attempting to move westward across the peninsula.

In a series of jungle skirmishes, 320 Japanese were killed and 199 captured.

Airdrome On Middelburg

Announcing in his communique that "one enemy plane under cover of darkness raided our newly-completed airdrome on Middelburg Island," MacArthur thus revealed completion of an air base 200 miles closer to the Philippines than the former most advanced bases on Noemfoor and the Schouten Islands, in New Guinea's Geelvink Bay.

Middleburg and Amsterdam islands, lying off Sansapor, were occupied July 30 when Sansapor was taken.

A Liberator bombed Davao on Mindanao island.

57 Tons Of Bombs On Palau

Liberators showered 57 tons of bombs on Palau, in the Carolines, Saturday destroying three enemy planes on the ground and setting large fires near the docks. There was severe anti-aircraft fire but no aerial interception.

Heavy aerial assaults against the Moluccas continued Saturday. Liberators dumped more than 50 tons of bombs on Liang airdrome, Amboina island, starting fires on the runway and in dispersal areas. Lightnings swept Miti drome on Halmahera. Neither island offered aerial interception, and there was no anti-aircraft fire at Halmahera.

Japs Caught Fleeing Trap

A headquarters spokesman said the Japanese units decimated or forced back in the skirmishes on Vogelkop peninsula appeared to be segments of the Manokwari and other Geelvink Bay garrisons.

"They apparently were trying to escape the trap effected by the Sansapor landing," the spokesman explained.

At the time it was cut off by the Sansapor landing, the Manokwari garrison, under Lieutenant General Ikeda, was estimated at 15,000 troops. MacArthur announced early this month that the Japanese Second Army under Gen. Fustataro Teshima was abandoning 700 miles of coastline in the Geelvink Bay and upper Vogelkop area, on which United States troops had not set foot, and was attempting to withdraw south and west.

Iwo Jima Is Plastered With 42 Tons Of Bombs

United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 27 (AP). The dropping of 42 tons of bombs on Japan's Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands, by American army Liberators, was reported today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

The attack; a continuation of neutralizing raids in that area, was made Friday by Seventh Airforce bombers. They met intense anti-aircraft fire and strong fighter opposition, indicating the islands still are strongly fortified and that the Japanese have no intention of lessening resistance in that last defense sector on the direct sealane from the Marianas to Tokyo.

Several Liberators Damaged

Several of the Liberators were damaged but they destroyed two and damaged two of eight or ten intercepting fighters.

The raiders hit Iwo's airfield and other military installations.

Other Yank flyers hit Truk, in the central Carolines, with 64 tons of explosives on Thursday and damaged one of a group of interceptors. Yap island, 525 miles southwest of American-held Guam, also was raided.

JAPS OPEN SIXTH FRONT IN CHINA

Renew Fighting On Long Static Front In Honan

Chungking, Monday, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Chinese Central News Agency said today that the Japanese Shanghai radio had broadcast announcements that three planes dropped a number of bombs between Shanghai and Woosung at midnight Saturday and that two planes from China had penetrated to Anshan, southwest of Mukden.

Chungking, Aug. 27 (AP)—Japanese troops in a sudden renewal of fighting on the long static Honan province front north of Hankow and the Yangtze have fanned westward from the Peiping-Hankow railway and have reached points about 30 miles northeast and 25 miles east of the highway and river junction of Miyang, the Chinese high command announced today.

The new drive was launched from the railway town of Kioshan, 40 miles above the southernmost Japanese Honan bastion of Sinyang on the Peiping-Hankow route. It was believed aimed at eliminating any threat to the Japanese hold on the conquered stretch of trackless railway through the province, which has been open to hit-and-run attacks by the Chinese from the west.

Fighting Rages In Six Provinces

With the opening of the new drive, fighting now rages in Honan, Hupeh, Hunan, Chekiang, Kwangtung and Yunnan provinces.

In Hunan, the Chinese were battling the invader east of Yungfeng, 45 miles northwest of the fallen Canton-Hankow rail junction of Hengyang, and below Hengyang were struggling to stem the Japanese tide southward to Kwangtung.

In Kwangtung province, where the Japanese knifed north from Luichow peninsula, street fighting was proceeding in Limkong, focal point of four highways into which the invaders had broken. Both sides were suffering heavy losses.

Japs Halted At Chekiang

In Chekiang, where the Japanese struck southward from Wuyi, 95 miles south of Hangchow, the invaders were being halted after a ten-mile advance.

In Hupeh, fighting continued in the Ichang area near the Yangtze river.

In Yunnan the Chinese were enjoying their only success in the entire country. They have laid siege to Tengchung, the main Japanese bastion guarding the route to North Burma, and were making progress in storming the city.

Tokyo Says Americans Move To China Front

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—Berlin reports from Tokyo said today there were growing indications that American and Japanese formations would meet in open battle in southwest China soon.

DNB said there were indications American troops would take part in the Hunan front fighting for the Canton-Hankow railway.

Moves To Evacuate Manila Reported In Axis Broadcasts

London, Aug. 27 (AP)—The German news agency DNB in a broadcast of Tokyo dispatches, said today that "the town of Manila is being evacuated," but the context of the broadcast indicated the evacuation was limited to civilians not required for necessary functions of the Philippine capital.

Japanese fear of air attack apparently motivated the sweeping measures, which possibly applied chiefly to women and children.

No One To Be Allowed To Enter

"The town of Manila is being evacuated" the broadcast said, "and a number of restrictions on passenger traffic have been issued by President Laurel. [The Japanese puppet in the Philippines.]

"No one will be allowed to enter Manila effective August 25.

"Permission to stay in the capital will be granted only in cases of absolute necessity.

"Severe penalties will be inflicted on those disregarding this order."

Fear Of Invasion

With Gen. Douglas MacArthur's bombers pounding the Halmahera steppingstone and Davao in the south Philippines, and with Admiral Chester W. Nimitz establishing strong positions to the north, the Japanese evidently feared imminent invasion.

[Tokyo radio said in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission that the "committee in charge of the evacuation of citizens" from Manila "has discussed the advisability of closing the principal hotels and transferring elementary schools and charity houses to places removed from the capital."]

SHANGHAI SHIPPING CUT

Chinese Say Japanese Are Forced to Use Wooden Vessels

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 27 (AP)—Transportation between Shanghai and Kobe, Japanese seaport, is now being conducted mainly with large wooden boats that take twenty-seven days for a journey that pre-war express liners did in thirty-six hours, a Chinese report said today.

Japanese authorities have requisitioned all available timber stocks in Shanghai to build flatbottomed boats. The larger ones are equipped with motors.

Allied bombing of coastal shipping has crippled coal transportation from north China and as a result the power output in Shanghai has been reduced to 15 per cent of the pre-war level. Most private-owned factories are closed.

The suburban area of Shanghai has been denuded of trees to obtain firewood. Coffins have become a luxury only available to the wealthy.

Japanese Army officers and merchants and rich Chinese business men have occupied all the tall buildings, believing them safer in the event of large-scale Allied bombings. A nightly blackout is being enforced.

State Department Denies Rumors

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Japanese envoys who came here for peace talks immediately prior to the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor never protested that the disposition of our naval forces might affect the success of the talks, the State Department said last night.

The department's statement was issued as a result of an assertion by Representative Magnuson (D., Wash.) that he had heard reports that Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy, had complained to Secretary of State Hull that Pacific fleet operations gave Japanese militarists a reason to oppose Kurusu's peace efforts.

Magnuson told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer that reports in Washington and on the West Coast were that the "Japs made a patsy out of the State Department, contriving to have our fleet bottled up in Pearl Harbor where it easily could be dealt a death blow."

Because of Kurusu's protest, Magnuson said the report went, the State Department succeeded in getting sea and air patrols curtailed while the "peace" talks were under way.

The State Department's brief statement declared that neither Kurusu nor any Japanese representative had raised the question that the disposition of the naval forces was likely to prejudice Kurusu's mission.

"Furthermore, the State Department did not at any time raise the question with the Navy or War Department," the statement added.

Chinese Execute General For Changsha Dereliction

By The Associated Press.

CHUNGKING, China, Monday, Aug. 28—It was announced officially today that Gen. Chang Teh-seng, commander of China's Fourth Army, was executed Aug. 25 for dereliction of duty during the defense of Changsha.

Ordered to hold Changsha at all costs, the general was convicted by a court martial of having allowed a commanding hill to fall into enemy hands, thus leading to the Japanese capture of the city.

FLEET AIR ARM HITS SUMATRA

Admiral Moody's Planes Pound Jap Bases Near Padang

Colombo, Ceylon, Aug. 27 (AP)—Allied carrier-borne aircraft, with heavy support of the far-ranging Eastern Fleet, have smashed again at Japan's industrial installations near Padang on the west coast of the island of Sumatra in the Dutch East Indies.

This fourth blow against the island's installations since it was taken over by the Japanese in March, 1942, was carried out in the early hours of Thursday.

Chief target was the great cement manufacturing plant at Indaroeng, near Padang, which supplies the Japanese with material for fortifications in much of the occupied area. Large numbers of heavy bombs were dropped on the plant, a special communique said, and flames and smoke rose from 800 to 1,000 feet.

Port Also Is Attacked

The planes also attacked Padang's port of Emmahaven, and the airfield of Padang itself. Padang is the chief city on the western coast of the island.

At Emmahaven a merchant vessel of about 3,500 tons was hit four times, and a smaller vessel of about 2,500 tons was hit twice. Both ships were left burning. Wharves, warehouses, a coaling jetty and a rail yard were hit many times and were heavily damaged, the communique said. Harbor installations were strafed by fighters.

Once again complete surprise was achieved by the attacking force under the command og Rear Admiral Ciement Moody.

Few Enemy Planes Seen

Only moderate anti-aircraft fire was met. One of the attacking planes was shot down. The communique said a few enemy aircraft were in the air at the time of the attack, but no serious attempt was made to interfere with the Allied planes, and no attempt was made by the enemy to intercept the escorting surface forces, either during or after the operation.

It was noted that Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, far Eastern Allied commander in chief, recently returned to his Ceylon headquarters after a conference in London on Allied plans for the war Against Japan.

Fourth Allied Raid

The last raid was on August 10 by superfortress bombers of the United States 20th Bomber Command which, flying from their southeast Asia bases, struck at oil refining installations at Palembang. The Pladjoe refinery there, a principal source of Japanese aviation gasoline, was struck. The refinery had been believed operating at or near its capacity of 18,000,000 barrels of crude oil a year, and was the largest in the Orient. Palembang is in the southwestern part of the island, 350 miles from Padang.

On April 19, 1944, a carrier-borne task struck at the island, blasting airfields, shipping and installations at Sabang and Lhonga in the northern section of Sumatra.

Another recent carrier task force raid on a Japanese-held island stronghold was carried out June 21 when fighters and bombers of the Eastern Fleet hit installations at Port Blair, capital of the Andaman Islands group.

'Decisive' Peace Step Attributed To Finland

Stockholm, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Stockholm paper. Svenska Dagbladet said today that while only those closest to Finland's President Mannerheim knew whether an actual peace contact has been established with Russia, a "decisive step" was believed to have been taken in recent days and that Finland was on the verge of important developments.

The cautiously worded article said Finland had arranged to obtain from other sources—presumably Sweden—food and material heretofore supplied by Germany.

WRITER FREED BY ARGENTINA

Arnaldo Cortesi, Of N. Y. Times, Held 11 Hours

Buenos Aires, Aug. 27 (AP)—Arnaldo Cortesi, New York Times correspondent, was released tonight after having been detained 11 hours by police, who arrested him in bed at his apartment this morning.

It was learned that the reason for his detention was a dispatch he filed yesterday dealing with an address made by Vice-President Juan Peron at a private session of stock exchange members. The dispatch was not transmitted, having been intercepted by the Government Interventor at the cable office.

Consul Could Not See Him

Prior to his release, United States Consul Hiram Bingham, Jr., was denied permission to talk to Cortesi, and officials of the Press and Propaganda Department had pleaded ignorance, saying the order to hold the writer came from "higher up."

Argentine Government officials asserted that Cortesi's dispatch was incorrect. They specifically objected to a statement that Peron had expressed the Government's intention of "ruthlessly" eliminating opposition to its social program.

Explained Social Projects

Peron appeared before the exchange to explain the regime's projects in the social field but correspondents were not given access to the full record of the meeting.

Cortesi said he was treated correctly during his detention, which ended with the intervention of Lieut. Jorga Rassi, acting on instructions from the Minister of Interior.

Cortesi, an Italian citizen who has made application for United States citizenship, came to Buenos Aires from Mexico City, where he had been the Times correspondent from 1939 to 1941. Previously he had been Times correspondent in Rome, from 1921 until 1939, when a Government decree forbade correspondence by an Italian citizen for a foreign newspaper.

Fought To Lift Censorship

While in Argentina 47-year-old Cortesi played an active part in the efforts of correspondents for American newspapers to persuade the Argentine Government to lift its press censorship.

He took part in the conference a month ago with Vice-President Juan Peron, which finally led to removal of drastic censorship controls. On that occasion Cortesi made a vigorous plea to the Government to permit foreign correspondents to discharge their missions in the country honestly and freely.

DYNAMITE CARGO BARED

Concealed Shipment Slated for Liner Going to Yucatan

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 27 (AP)—Agents of the Defense, Navy and Finance Ministries are investigating an attempt to ship to Yucatan a great quantity of dynamite, listed and marked as other merchandise, Navy Ministry officials disclosed yesterday.

The dynamite was to have been transported aboard the coastwise steamer Lurline, in the hold of which an explosion occurred a week ago, seriously injuring six stevedores.

At that time the Lurline was being loaded in Veracruz with heavy sacks of silver pesos for a bank in Merida. A sack fell on a package marked "clothing" and listed as such in the ship's manifest. The package was full of shotgun primers.

Authorities discovered that still to be loaded was the dynamite.

Official reports from Veracruz said today that the agents of the Lurline and the forwarders of the explosives disclaimed all responsibility, saying they had accepted the shipments in good faith.

Historian's Arrest Reported In Paris

New York, Aug. 27 (AP)—John Thompson, correspondent for the Chicago Tribune and Mutual Broadcasting System, today reported in a broadcast from Paris that Bernard Fay, historian and former faculty member of Harvard and Northwestern universities, had been arrested as a Nazi collaborationist by French Forces of the Interior.

Fay was appointed by Pierre Laval in 1941 as director of the French National Library. In that capacity, according to Thompson, he opened secret archives dating back to World War I which contained information about Freemasonry often used as fuel for the Nazi propaganda machine.

Thompson said Sascha Guitry, French actor and playwright, also had been arrested as an alleged collaborationist.

Capt. E. P. Barrows Dies In France Of Wounds

Newton, Mass., Aug. 27—(AP) Capt. Edward P. Barrows, 24-year-old son of Lewis O. Barrows, former Governor of Maine, died in France, August 5, from wounds suffered in action, the War Department reported to his father today. No details were available.

Captain Barrows, awarded the Silver Star for gallantry during the first invasion of France, is survived by his parents, his widow and a 7-month-old son whom he had never seen.

Captain Barrows, reported seriously wounded July 30, went overseas with the Second Division last year.

Navy Retiring Corsair II After 16 Months at Sea

Former Morgan Yacht Charted Bougainville Waters

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Aug. 27 (AP).—From a world of pleasure in which she traveled as one of the most luxurious yachts afloat, the former Corsair II, once owned by J. P. Morgan, became a trail blazer on the road toward Tokyo, and now her voyaging—at least for the Navy—is ended.

Today the ship, having completed sixteen months in the south Pacific charting the way in advance of the fleet and vast invasion armadas under the name U. S. S. Oceanographer, is tied up at the United States naval operating base at Terminal Island here, awaiting the order that will confer honorary retirement.

Her tour of war-time duty, manned by Navy and Coast and Geodetic Survey personnel, was a far cry from the days when she was a seagoing palace known as "the Morgan's $3,000;000 plaything." Then her fittings were lush, and gold filigree decorated the stern and bow.

The Oceanographer, under the command of Commodore M. W. Graybill, U. S. N., of Long Beach, Calif., was used to make charts of the Bougainville area just a few days before it was attacked by American forces, accomplishing her mission by sending survey parties into enemy-held waters and land positions.

GLOBAL AIR CARGO TOTAL IS GREAT

Value, Pound For Pound, Exceeds Ship Freight

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—An aerial freight system which taps remote corners of the globe brought in 22,000,000 pounds of materials, many of them highly strategic, in the first six months of 1944.

This amounted to only .065 of one per cent. of imports by ocean vessel, but in dollar value, pound for pound, aerial imports were worth 99 times the imports by ship.

OWI Reports

Operations of the aerial freight system from January 1 to June 30 were related today by the Office of War Information, based on information supplied by various Government agencies, including the war and navy departments.

Ownership of the materials which were flown:

Purchases by the Foreign Economic Administration and other United States agencies, including army and navy materials, 12,000,000 pounds; Russian and United Kingdom materials, 7,000,000 pounds; private purchases by American importers, 3,000,000 pounds.

Imports by ocean vessels totaled 33,600,000,000 pounds (15,000,000 long tons.) Aerial imports thus amounted to 1.46 pounds for each long ton (2,240 pounds).

Relative Values

Ocean imports had a value of $1,230,000,000, aerial imports $79,000,000, or 6.42 per cent. of the value of ocean cargo.

Air cargoes traveled over two main routes "over the hump" from China to India, and from Karachi, India, across Africa, the South Atlantic and South America to Miami, Fla., or New York.

Wounded personnel, mail and army priority items divide space on returning army and navy planes with strategic materials. Less needed raw materials are moved only as "filler cargoes," with priority ratings below those for passengers, mail and army and navy equipment.

OWI described the "main line" route from Karachi to Miami and New York and the most heavily traveled of all global freight airways.

EMPHASIS IS PUT ON BIGGER PLANES

Long-Range Bombers And Transports Given Priority

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Increased emphasis on planes to bomb Japan was indicated today.

Within a few months, the Office of War Information reported, long-range bombers and long-distance transports will remain the only "expanding" aircraft programs.

Long-range bombers, such as the Boeing Superfortress (B-29) and the recently-announced consolidated Dominator (B-32) are designed primarily with Japan in mind. Long-distance transports are required in increasing numbers to carry personnel and supplies to and from the far-flung battlefronts.

Reviews Labor Situation

In a review of the labor situation in various military categories, OWI said present indications do not point to a shortage in the aircraft industry, which accounts for roughly one third of the entire munitions program.

Despite declines in total aircraft production in the last two months, OWI reported, "high-priority" planes were delivered at close-to-current schedules. These are the planes most wanted by army and navy commanders and our allies.

Employment Declining

Employment in the aircraft industry began to decline even before production reductions were started and the War Manpower Commission predicted 50,000 would leave the industry monthly toward the end of the year.

Latest available reports placed total aircraft employment at 1,199,000, a decline of 127,440, or nearly ten per cent. from the peak of December, 1943.

Almost all of the decline occurred in the airframe industry. Eight plants making big bombers and other badly needed types, however, showed substantial employment increases.

Canada Gets U. S.-Built Air System Profitably

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—The system of Canadian air bases and landing strips for which Canada has agreed to pay the United States $76,811,551 cost this country $90,683,571, American Aviation magazine says in its current issue.

The difference between the cost and the purchase price, previously disclosed by the Canadian Government, represents barracks and facilities regarded of non-permanent value, the magazine says.

However, in addition to the purchase price, the article points out, Canada had agreed to defray the cost of an additional $34,760,963 of improvements requested by the United States.

Talks On Aviation Held With India Government

Washington, Aug. 27 (AP)—Preliminary and exploratory talks with representatives of the Indian Government on post-war civil aviation have been completed here, the State Department announced today.

Both sides, it reported, agreed on the desirability of promoting early expansion of international air services.

Agreement was reached on the idea of calling an international conference to draw up a multilateral air-navigation convention.

Army Gives Equal Political Radio Time

Five Major Political Parties Will Have Equal Opportunity to Reach Men Overseas on Shortwave Broadcasts—GOP's Say Any FDR Speech Should Come Out of Democratic Quota.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Army announced today a policy of equal time for five political parties on its shortwave broadcasts to troops overseas, and Republicans immediately raised the contention that any speech by President Roosevelt should come out of the Democratic time quota.

Viewpoint Summed Up

Senator Revercomb (R-W Va) summed up the GOP viewpoint:

"Any troop broadcast time given to a speech by the President certainly should be a part of the time allotted to the Democrats. He is a candidate, and whatever he says amounts to an appeal for support."

The Army did not go into that question.

A specified period will be available to the Democratic, Prohibition, Republican, Socialist and Socialist-Labor parties each week between "early September and Nov. 1," the Army said. Failure of a party to use its scheduled time will not prejudice any other party's right to time.

Relation of Events Indicated

The sequence of events indicated a relation between today's enunciation of policy, based on a recent law which permits rebroadcast of "political addresses" if equal time is offered each party having a presidential candidate in at least six states, and the War Department's reversal last week of its decision to give the Socialist party overseas broadcast time. The Socialists had claimed the time on the contention that the President's Bremerton, Wash., speech was political.

Not a Political Address

Acting Secretary of War John J. McCloy, in reversing the ruling, said that the Bremerton address was not political. The change brought allegations of "White House pressure" from the President's political opposition.

Apparently with reference to this charge, Republican National Chairman Herbert Brownell, Jr., said in New York that before commenting on the Army's new plan he thought he would "wait to see if the ruling is reversed by any higher-ups."

A major effect of the latest decision on political rebroadcasts appears to be a definite limitation on the amount of time which will be devoted to such programs on the Army's 17 short-wave beams. The Army statement said in part:

Period for Each Party

"In order to provide orderly opportunities for members of the armed forces overseas to receive information by radio rebroadcast with reference to the coming election, the armed forces radio service will make available from its allotted overseas rebroadcasting time a period each week for each political party, qualified under the statute, between early September and Nov. 1. Overseas voting should be completed by this date."

"The armed forces radio service will establish a schedule of rebroadcasting times, in conformity with the law and within the practical limitations of its facilities, and will notify each qualified party of the arrangements made. A party failing to use its scheduled time in any week will be deemed not to have requested time for such week, but such failure will not affect the right of the other parties to use their scheduled times for that week."

WAC Officer Finds Queen Is "Charming"

Washington, Aug. 27(AP)—Queen Elizabeth of England is "charming" and "even more beautiful than she appears in pictures" in the opinion of Women's Army Corps officer.

The comment came from Capt. Pauline E. Spofford, Miami, Fla., after she and two sister officers, Capt. Janet C. Varn, Jacksonville, Fla., and Lieut. Aileen M. Witting, Gonzales, Texas, met the Queen during the course of the latter's visit to the A. T. S. wing of the British Staff College.

The three officers are the first American service women to attend the college, similar to the American army's Command and General Staff School.

"Her Majesty asked us how we liked England and military life, and was interested to know about our home States," said Captain Spofford. "She spoke to every student, and had some gracious comment for each."

FORD MEN AGREE TO RETURN TO WORK

Union Officials Say It May Be Days Before All Strikers Are Back

DETROIT, Aug. 27 (U.P.)—After a stormy three and one-half hour meeting today with 1,500 striking employes of the Ford Motor Company's Highland Park plant, officers of Local 400, United Automobile Workers (CIO), announced that the workers would return to their jobs on the midnight shift tonight, but said that the return would be an "infiltration" process lasting several days.

The strike began Thursday when 3,400 Highland Park workers walked off the job, protesting against alleged failure of the company to grant wage increases which the union said had been approved and against alleged violations of seniority.

The strike made all 8,000 Highland Park workers idle yesterday, and company and Army procurement officials added that continuation of the walkout would soon put out of production 13,000 men at the Ford Rouge aircraft plant and 30,000 at Willow Run.

A War Labor Board directive ordering the men back to work was read today to the 1,500 members who attended the meeting, but was not presented for a mass vote. The vote was confined to twenty-one officers and committeemen of Local 400, of whom eighteen favored the return and three opposed it.

Herbert Hindmarsh, local president, said he believed that the majority of the union members would heed their officers and return to work, although reluctantly. He said the Ford Company did not negotiate in "good faith," and added that it probably would be several days before all the strikers were back at their jobs.

IT WAS JUST THE AGELESS LITANY - AND ONLY THAT. THE PRIESTS HAD FEARED TO HOLD A GRAND SERVICE OF THANKSGIVING BECAUSE THAT WOULD HAVE BROUGHT THOUSANDS HERE AS TARGETS FOR GERMAN SNIPERS AND FRENCH TRAITORS STILL HOLDING OUT IN THIS AREA.

THE MASS WAS NOT SAID AT THE HIGH ALTAR, BUT AT THE SMALL AND ESPECIALLY BELOVED ALTAR OF NOTRE DAME DE PARIS. PRAYERS WERE SAID FOR ALL WHO DIED IN THE DEFENSE OF FRANCE.

UPON THE ALTAR WERE FLAGS OF FRANCE AND THE CROSS OF LORRAINE. AMONG THE WORSHIPPERS WAS A HANDFUL OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS. THERE WAS AWE-INSPIRING SIMPLICITY ABOUT THIS SERVICE IN ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREAT CATHEDRALS.

THESE GREAT WALLS WILL ECHO SOON WITH TRIUMPHANT BURSTS OF GREAT MUSIC IN A COMMEMORATIVE MASS WHICH CANON BROT HOPES TO CELEBRATE SEPT.10, BECAUSE THAT IS THE NEAREST SUNDAY TO THE FEAST OF THE NATIVITY. BUT THERE CAN BE NO CELEBRATION YET, FOR WILD AND HIDDEN MURDER STILL LIVES IN SHUTTERED ROOMS JUST OUTSIDE THE CATHEDRAL.

IT WAS HERE THAT THE SECOND OF YESTERDAY'S ATTEMPTS WAS MADE ON THE LIFE OF GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE AS HE SAT IN THE RED AND GILT CHAIR RESERVED FOR THE FRENCH HEAD OF STATE AND JOINED OTHER WORSHIPPERS IN SINGING THE MAGNIFICAT.

THE SHOT WAS FIRED DOWN FROM THE TWIN SPIRES OF THE CATHEDRAL AND FRENCH PARTISAN FIRE RANGED BACK.

IT WAS HERE, TOO, THAT UNTIL THREE DAYS AGO GERMAN SOLDIERS WERE COMING TO MASS AND TAKING THEIR RIFLES INTO THE PEWS WITH THEM.

TOULON AUG 25-(DELAYED)-(AP)-NAZI MARINES WERE STILL HOLDING OUT TODAY IN TOULON'S PENINSULAR FORTS DOMINATING THE HARBOR, WHILE REFUGEES BEGAN THEIR DREARY TREK BACK INTO THE DEVASTATED PORT CITY.

FROM THE MOUNTAINS, NEARBY CAVES AND INTERIOR RETREATS HUNDREDS OF CIVILIANS RETURNED AFOOT OR ON BICYCLES TO THEIR HOMES--IN MOST CASES DEMOLISHED COMPLETELY BY BOMBS.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF FRENCH NAVY AND ARMY OFFICIALS LOCAL PARTISANS BEGAN DIGGING FOR BODIES LEFT WITHIN THE HOMES. POTS OF LYE STOOD READY FOR SPREADING UPON THE NUMEROUS CORPSES FOUND WITHIN.

GARRISONS STILL WITHIN FORT MALBOUSQUET AT THE WATERSIDE FRONT, DARTIGUES WITHIN THE CITY, AND THE GARRISON AT THE MOURILLON ARSENAL ALONG THE "OLD PORT," SURRENDERED AFTER COLONIAL INFANTRY ASSAULTS DURING THE EARLY MORNING HOURS.

MORE THAN 1,400 PRISONERS SURRENDERED AT MALBOUSQUET WHILE 500 OTHER SURVIVORS CAPITULATED AT THE ARSENAL AND FORT DARTIGUES.

MEANWHILE THE RELENTLESS HOUSE-BY-HOUSE MOPUP OF PARTISANS CONTINUED UNTIL ALL BUT THE WESTERN HALF OF THE CITY WAS CLEARED OF SNIPERS.

DE CHASTELAIGNE, WHO TOLD THE FIRST DETAILED STORY OF THE ROMANIAN ABOUT-FACE AFTER HIS ARRIVAL IN TURKEY ABOARD A SPECIAL ROMANIAN PLANE, SAID THE CAPITULATION TO THE ALLIES FOLLOWED THE DRAMATIC PALACE ARREST AUG. 23 OF MARSHAL ION ANTONESCU, THE PREMIER, WHILE THE LATTER WAS TRYING TO PERSUADE KING MIHAI THAT THE WAR AGAINST RUSSIA SHOULD CONTINUE. THE KING HIMSELF ORDERED ANTONESCU ARRESTED.

AUG 29 1944

DE CHASTELAIGNE LEARNED OF THE CAPITULATION WHEN GUARDS AWAKENED HIM IN THE BUCHAREST JAIL THE MORNING OF AUG. 24 AND TOLD HIM HE WAS A FREE MAN AND AN ALLY.

ANTONESCU LAST SAW HITLER AUG. 4. HITLER, WITH PROMISES TO RETURN THE ARMORED DIVISIONS MOVED FROM ROMANIA TO THE LWOW REGION AND ASSURANCES THAT GERMANY HAD SUFFICIENT RESERVES TO STABILIZE THE EASTERN AND WESTERN FRONTS, WON ANTONESCU TO A CONTINUATION OF THE WAR.

HANSEN INDICATED ASSENT AND LEFT THE PALACE ALMOST SIMULTANEOUSLY WITH THE KING. THE ROMANIANS, HOWEVER, ANTICIPATED GERMAN TREACHERY. ROMANIAN TROOPS STATIONED NORTH OF THE CAPITAL WERE ORDERED TO PROCEED IMMEDIATELY TOWARD THE CITY TO PROTECT IT FROM GERMAN ARMORED UNITS AT PLOESTI.

ROMANIANS IN TURKEY GAVE THIS BACKGROUND TO THE ROMANIAN ABANDONMENT OF THE GERMANS:

WHEN PRINCE BARBU STIRBEY, ROMANIAN PEACE ENVOY, WENT TO CAIRO IN MARCH TO NEGOTIATE WITH THE ALLIES, THE ROMANIAN OPPOSITION TO GERMANY AND TO MARSHAL ION ANTONESCU THOUGHT ANTONESCU WOULD BE WILLING TO NEGOTIATE AN ARMISTICE AND THEN RELINQUISH HIS POWER. PATTON'S TROOPS CROSS MARNE IN 30-MILE ADVANCE

Doughboy Tanks Storm Eastward from Captured Town of Meaux.

DRIVE TOWARD REIMS

Fall of Rail City Would Wreck Enemy Hopes of Stand in France.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 28. — (AP) — Powerful American forces broke across the Marne at Meaux today and stormed on eastward in a 30-mile advance to within five miles of the World War battlefield of Chateau-Thierry.

Other U. S. Third army spearheads, sweeping northeast from the broken enemy line along the upper Seine, welded a 45-mile arc of steel within 40 miles of the great rail city of Reims, whose fall would imperil any German attempt to stand in northern France.

AUG 29 1944

In their advance on Chateau-Thierry, where their fathers helped to shatter the final German offensive in 1918, the Doughboys were 30 miles east of Lagny, a Marne town whose capture was announced yesterday.

Near Compiegne Forest

With their breakthrough at Meaux, which blasted any enemy hope of a determined stand along the natural barrier of the upper Marne, the Americans were 25 miles south of the forest of Compiegne, where the First World War armistice was signed and where Adolf Hitler forced his harsh truce on France in 1940.

The general 10-mile advance below Reims will force the Germans to decide quickly whether they will try to defend the robot bomb coast to the northwest or fall back toward the Reich.

The Americans were about 35-40 miles away from Reims on the southwest, south and southeast — before Chateau-Thierry, at the big road junction of Montmirail, Sezanne, and at an undefined point about 30 miles north of Troyes, the farthest eastward advance 85 miles east of Paris.

All these latest surges on the plains between the Marne and Seine were from 10 to 18 miles north of last reported positions, and outlined a great wheeling movement which now has swept to within about 110 miles of German's frontier at the Saar.

The American columns were knifing in behind the Germans' 15th army, which was believed being bolstered by troops pouring into France along virtually every rail line from Belgium despite a storm of bombs and bullets from hundreds of Allied warplanes.

In the race from Meaux, the tanks of Lt. Gen. George S. Patton bowled through a La Ferte-sur-Jouarre and rumbled on east.

Reach Chateau-Thierry

One field dispatch said they had reached Chateau-Thierry, and while it was not confirmed it was possible, since tank columns often maintain radio silence.

This was all new terrain for the troops of this war, but for at least some of their field officers it was a return to a battle-ground where they fought more than two decades ago.

Among the other towns caught up in the whirlwind advance were Coulommiers, 35 miles east of Paris, and La Ferte-Gaucher, 10 miles farther on.

Swiftly, tanks and infantry were consolidating assault lines along the Marne and upper Seine along an 85-mile front while the spearheads swept on in a great wheeling movement designed to turn any positions the enemy may try to plant on France's plains.

Fresh troubles brewed for the Germans northwest of Paris, where a fifth bridgehead was forced across the Seine while a battle of extermination thundered toward a climax for 20,000 Germans still caught in pockets south of the river.

The British Second army broke across at St. Pierre-du-Vauvrey and gouged out five miles of territory against faint-hearted resistance 16 miles southeast of the doomed enemy bastion at Rouen, his last upon the Seine.

Troops and tanks were streaming across the river at the British bridgehead of Vernon, the American at Mantes, and two Canadian between Elbeuf and Pont-de-L'Arche, eight miles southeast of Rouen.

AUG 29 1944

They were marshalling their forces for a fresh offensive which may drive up robot bomb row along the channel coast, enveloping Rouen and the great Atlantic port of Le Havre en route.

Strongest opposition appeared before the Americans at Mantes, but even there good progress was reported and it appeared that the Germans had neither the men nor the stomach for a strong stand.

Expands Vernon Bridgehead

Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's Second British army also expanded its bridgehead at Vernon to a depth of three miles and a width of five. One unconfirmed report said some Allied units were as much as 25 miles north of the river.

The Canadian First army ran into heavy mortar and machinegun fire as it closed on the last Germans south of the Seine, but it was launching the same sort of annihilating attack with artillery and bombs that marked the final liquidating of the Normandy trap.

Trains apparently loaded with reinforcements and rocket bombs jammed lines leading into France from Belgium. Some of them were blown up with tremendous explosions as they flashed beneath the sights of Allied fighters and fighter bombers which destroyed or damaged 400 locomotives in the forenoon in one of the biggest aerial roundups of the war.

American armor thrust through Meaux, 25 miles east and slightly north of Paris, was moving at such a pace that Supreme headquarters was hours behind its movement, but it seemed clear that the Germans were yielding the historic barrier of the Marne without a fight.

Meaux marked the high tide of German conquest in 1914. Chateau-Thierry, where American Doughboys helped shatter the last great enemy offensive in the fateful Summer of 1918, is 25 miles to the northeast.

Win Vital Positions

(The German military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, said the Americans had won positions from which they could head east toward Nancy and the Maginot Line or sweep around Reims in a vast new encirclement.)

At Meaux the Americans were ten miles east of their first Marne positions won at Lagny yesterday. They were 105 miles southwest of Sedan, where the Germans twice conquered France—first in 1870 and second in 1940 when they unhinged the Maginot Line.

Besides this electrifying drive that put Americans on World War I battleground for the first time, lines of tanks and infantrymen were reaching out in every direction between the Seine and Marne.

At the extreme east, the Americans were headed northeast of Troyes toward Vitry, which is less than 100 miles from the German border and 45 miles southeast of the fortress city of Verdun.

There was no confirmation of an Algiers radio broadcast that Vitry already had been reached, and 12 miles north of Troyes, in the neighborhood of Arcis-sur-Aube, Supreme headquarters reported a stiffening of German defense.

Reach Romilly Suburbs

Another American column reached the outskirts of Romilly, 21 miles northwest of Troyes on the Seine. A third column just to the west reached Villenauxe in a seven-mile march from Nogent. Provins, 10 miles west of Nogent and 45 miles southeast of Paris, was captured.

Behind these armored columns came infantry, cleaning out pockets which the tanks had by-passed or overlooked.

A British staff officer said that all German reinforcements appeared to have been switched to this front southeast of Paris "in an effort to meet an American drive which threatens to outflank the whole Le Havre peninsula and the Pas-de-Calais coast."

It was on such reinforcement trains that Allied air blows fell heavily in the day's clearing weather.

Eleven troop trains were strafed during the morning alone by 400 fighters and fighter bombers, who also destroyed 200 motor vehicles and destroyed or damaged 2,200 railway cars.

The successes southeast and northwest of Paris put Allied armies on or across the Seine for almost its entire 200 miles from its source to the sea.

On Road To Beauvais

The three Allied armies pouring across the Seine northwest of Paris faced whatever remains of the Seventh Army from Normandy and the 15th Army, guardian of the rocket coast.

The Americans and British from bridgeheads at Mantes and Vernon were on the road to Beauvais, supply junction for the lower reaches of the rocket coast. Beauvais is 45 miles east of Rouen.

It remained to be seen whether Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge would try a real stand on a natural line such as the Somme, or whether he would make a delaying fight back to the Reich.

The Somme and the upper Marne would form a natural barrier to the Allied drive on Pas de Calais, where the robot-bomb roosts are concentrated.

Mostly Mopped Up

Supreme headquarters said all enemy positions south of the Seine were now mopped up with the exception of Germans in three pockets southwest of Rouen, which remains the main core of resistance, and a few scattered groups numbering less than 1,000.

The remnants of three infantry and two armored divisions filtering out of the pockets were trying to swim or ford the Seine, which is more than 300 yards wide at this point.

Along the coast, Allied forces seized Quillebeuf in a seven-mile advance that placed them at the mouth of the Seine.

Other forces closed to within two to four miles of the Seine with sweeps southeast of Quillebeuf which overran the important road points of Bourg-Achard, Bourneville and Routot.

In Paris the last mopping up proceeded in the northern suburbs, where by one account German parachute troops from the same unit which "rescued" Mussolini from Italy had been encountered.

In the battle for the big Breton port of Brest, the Americans scored a 1,000-yard advance and pressed into the main defense network protecting the landward approaches.

U. S. FORCES REACH OLD BATTLEGROUNDS

AUG 29 1944

British, Canadian and American Armies Pour Across Lower Seine in Pursuit of Beaten Foe.

Long

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—American troops, sweeping in a wide arc threatening German lines of retreat into the Reich, have crossed the Marne and captured Meaux in the loop of the river twenty-three miles east of Paris.

The Germans were yielding the battleground of the first world war without a fight as the Americans swept on through Meaux unchecked. Sedan, a famous battlefield in 1870 and 1940, was 105 miles to the northeast.

[The German military commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, declared over the Berlin radio that the Americans had won positions from which they could head east toward Nancy and the Maginot Line or sweep around Reims in a vast new encirclement.]

British Take New Bridgehead.

Toward the sea the British established a fifth bridgehead across the Seine, swinging their forces across the river near Louviers, between Vernon and Point de l'Arche, where the Canadians have crossed.

For the first time in this war American troops were fighting on a battlefield of the first world war. The quaint town of Meaux marked the high tide of the German attempt to take Paris in September, 1914—an attempt which ended with the Allied victory of the first battle of the Marne when the Paris taxicab army stemmed the German tide.

The town is twenty-four miles southwest of Chateau-Thierry, where American troops in the second battle of the Marne held the Germans during the fateful days of June and July, 1918, and took part in the counter-offensive launched on July 18.

AUG 29 1944

Whole Line Swings North.

The whole Allied attack today was swinging north on or across the Seine River along almost the whole 200 miles from its source to the sea.

AUG 29 1944

The last three pockets of Germans south of the Seine—probably embracing 20,000 troops and forces of tanks—were under the same sort of annihilating attack by artillery and bombs that marked the final liquidation of the Normandy trap.

Between Paris and the English Channel, American, British and Canadian armies deepened four bridgeheads over the Seine and have doomed Rouen, where Joan of Arc was tried and burned. Rouen, thirteenth city of France, with 122,800 population, now is the center of German resistance, such as it is. The Allies also virtually doomed the great port of Le Havre and have opened the way into the Germans' flying bomb belt in the Pas de Calais farther north.

The American bridgehead was at Mantes, the British at Vernon and the Canadians had two between Elbeuf and Pont-de-L'Arche.

American Third Army infantry was streaming into the tank-won bulge between the Seine and the Marne forming a cosolidated front eighty-five miles or more almost due east of Paris in a great half wheel around the French capital.

The push through Meaux, 10 miles beyond the first-won foothold along the Marne at Lagny, was described as meeting virtually no opposition. It gave the Americans an assault line from which they could turn any Marne defense or stab north in a deep encirclement—or cut off—of the rocket bomb coast.

American Positions

To the southeast one American column was at Nangis, across the Seine, 16 miles east of Melun; a second was at Provins, 45 miles southeast of Paris, and a third pushed seven miles north of captured Nogent to Villenauxe.

Beyond Troyes on the American right flank a fourth column jabbed toward Vitry, on the upper Marne, 45 miles southwest of Verdun, and less than 100 miles from the German border.

There was no confirmation at supreme headquarters of an Algiers broadcast reporting that the Americans had reached Vitry—but the extent of the gain beyond Troyes was kept a security secret.

Nazi Pockets Being Erased

The Americans closed in to the outskirts of Romilly, 10 miles east of Nogent.

Supreme headquarters said that the whole front south of the Seine "except in the last shredded Nazi pocket south of the Seine mouth has been mopped up except for scattered groups of nowhere more than 1,000 Germans, and these are being cleaned out swiftly."

A front dispatch said that a trap spelling death for many Germans was established in three loops on the left bank of the Seine in the area of Rouen. Scattered elements of five German divisions, totaling perhaps 20,000 men, were being pounded from the ground and air as they scrambled madly to get across the river and join in the retreat to the east.

This was the last stand of the tag end of the broken German Seventh Army, and the 15th Army, which came too late to its aid. The Germans, pinched into the three pockets in the Seine bends between Rouen and the sea, are attempting to cross the river which there ranges in width from 300 yards to a mile. Their only escape is by swimming or barge.

Germans Leaving Le Havre

At their bridgeheads northwest of Paris the Americans and British also were pouring an unbroken flood of troops and tanks across the river to write off the last of the German 15th Army. These bridgeheads at Vernon and Mantes were on roads to Beauvais and Amiens, the back doors to Dieppe and Abbeville.

Front reports said the Germans had withdrawn from Le Havre all but a few rear guards and demolition squads—which might yet make a backs-to-the-sea stand as at Brest.

At Brest, besieging American troops fought forward 1,000 yards in an assault that now has carried into the main inland defense system close around the town.

New Nazi Train Movements

Reconnaissance showed heavy renewed German train movements in the past 24 hours between Belgium and the German border and in the area just north of the Seine between Paris and the Pas de Calais coast.

There was no way of telling whether this was another indication of a hurried eleventh-hour withdrawal from the rocket-bomb coast or merely the rushing in of supplies to stiffen a delaying fight.

Whatever its purpose and whatever the Germans' course, there was no indication that the enemy has the force or the strategic position for a successful maintained defense anywhere short of the Belgian frontier—if there.

Yanks Reach Battlefields Of Last World War

Yankbrough

LONDON, Aug. 28—(AP) Allied forces in both northern and southern France drove deeper into the flanks of German retreat routes today, the American armored columns east of Paris racing through Marne river battlefields of World War 1 and advancing toward Reims from several directions.

Although making progress in their primary objective of destroying German armies, the two forces apparently did not narrow the gap between them last reported at about 170 miles.

CHAIN

Drive in Chateau Thierry

American armor east of Paris stormed along north of the Marne river to within five miles of Chateau Thierry, where Americans helped halt the final German drive in 1918. Now more than 40 miles from Paris, this force was one of three reported within 40 miles of Reims, all are threats to the retreat route of the Germans whose channel positions are menaced by the drive.

In the south Allied units broke out into the broad Rhone valley below Lyon in an effort to block off German forces retreating northward toward the Reich.

The British Second army forced a fifth bridgehead northwest of Paris and drove ahead five miles against weakened German forces which appeared unable to make an immediate stand. Canadians encountered stiff resistance from enemy units hemmed into three hairpin bends of the Seine between Rouen and the channel.

Lt. Gen. Patton's Third army forces across the Marne already were in possession of battlefields along the river to which Germans drove in 1914 and 1918.

German commentators speculated that this impressive force might be bent on a vast new encircling movement around Reims, now some 550 miles to the northeast, or might be driving due east toward the Maginot Line.

Consolidate Lines

American forces were consolidating assault lines along the Marne and Seine rivers for a distance of 85 miles east of Paris.

The German 19th army appeared to be in a bad way in the Rhone valley, with the Americans breaking out of the mountains across their line of retreat north of Montelmiar, less than 90 miles south of Lyon and 100 miles north of Marseille.

Forty-five miles south of this fighting, other American forces of the Seventh army were hammering up from Avignon.

All bridges across the Rhone have been wrecked, and the Germans are harried by French Forces of the Interior, who control whole regions of southern France through which the fighting must pass and who make repeated sorties against the enemy.

An official announcement said heavy losses had been inflicted on fleeing enemy troops on the east bank of the Rhone.

The French estimated the total bag of Germans captured at fallen Marseille was 17,000.

The fall of the naval base of Toulon yielded 7,000 prisoners and it was estimated that 50,000 German troops—possibly half the garrison of southern France—had been killed, wounded or captured in less than two weeks of lightning warfare.

30. 24 — 18329

The Americans storming the Breton port of Brest advanced 1,000 yards through the landward defenses.

SWIFT RED DRIVE CRACKS NAZI LINE IN TRANSYLVANIA

New Push Aimed at Trapping Enemy Fighting South of Carpathians.

ADVANCE ON BUCHAREST

Soviet Spearheads Imperil Ploesti Oil Wells in Romania.

Hercher

LONDON, Tuesday, Aug. 29—(AP) Soviet troops, cracking Germany's last big natural defense wall in the east, crossed the Carpathians yesterday and penetrated 10 miles inside Hungarian-held Transylvania in a swift drive aimed at trapping scores of thousands of disaster-ridden Germans caught south of the mountains in the Ploesti-Bucharest area of capitulated Romania.

Simultaneously Red marines, spilling out of ships of the Black Sea fleet, captured Romania's second seaport of Sulina in the southeast, and overran the Danube delta by seizing Tulcea, 42 miles inland, a port at the head of the Danube's three channels.

Capture Danube Port

Other Soviet land armies captured Braila, big Romanian port on the twisting Danube farther west, cleaned out the Galati gap defenses in the center, and plunged on toward the rich Ploesti oil wells and Bucharest. Moscow dispatches said tank-tipped Russian spearheads were within 50 miles of Bucharest, but the communique did not mention the Ploesti-Bucharest sector where Romanian troops are locked in fierce struggles with their former Allies.

Russian troops crossed into Hungarian Transylvania through the pine-clad Oituz pass at Poiana-Sarata. Gen. Rodio Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukraine army units then rolled on ten miles through Bretcu, only 43 miles northeast of Brasov, the Romanian-held city which controls four of the Nazi escape passes from Romania into Hungary.

Eleven thousand more German prisoners fell to Malinovsky's troops and the Third Ukraine army under Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin, and the latter army completed the liquidation of 12 Nazi divisions, originally estimated at between 40,000 and 80,000 men, which had been trapped southwest of Chisinau, fallen Bessarabian provincial capital.

Axis casualties on the eastern front since the big Summer offensive began on June 23 are now well past the 1,000,000 mark, on the basis of Moscow announcements.

Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian army in northern Poland meanwhile scored a great victory by toppling the communications center of Ostrow-Mazowiecka, 50 miles north east of Warsaw, Moscow's bulletin disclosed.

On that front the Russians rolled ahead on a 21-mile sector, capturing Piski, 32 miles south of Germany's East Prussian border, and Czerwin, 12 miles northwest of fallen Ostrow-Mazowiecha and only nine miles southeast of Ostrolenka, big German stronghold on the Narew river.

Road Junction Falls

The fall of Ostrow-Mazowiecka knocked out an 11-way road and rail junction connecting Nazi lines between Warsaw and East Prussia. Among the 50 localities taken were Brok, on the Bug river seven miles south of Ostrow, and Udrzyn, another Bug village six miles beyond Brok.

AUG 29 1944

Zakharov's troops were fighting over the same invasion path that Russian Czarist armies took 30 years ago when they invaded East Prussia in the first World war. The fall of Czerwin put the Soviet forces within nine miles of the Narew river, last big obstacle short of East Prussia. The crossing of that river also would outflank Warsaw.

A dispatch by Daniel de Luce, Associated Press correspondent, field from Lublin, Poland, said that Russian and Polish troops had established a bridgehead across the vistula river only 30 miles south of Warsaw at Warka.

In confirming what Berlin has been saying for weeks, but Moscow has never officially announced, De Luce quoted Col. Gen. Mihail Dola-Zymierski, Polish commander-in-chief.

The Polish leader estimated the Germans were using "more than a dozen Panzer divisions" in defense of the embattled Polish capital, which he said had been burning for three weeks.

Russian troops hold an even larger bridgehead southwest of Sandomierz, 110 miles below Warsaw, and Soviet units at the end of that salient last were reported fighting within 35 miles of Krakow in southern Poland and within 75 miles of German Silesia.

Nazi Attacks Repulsed

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian army beat down a series of powerful German counterattacks east and northeast of Praga, a suburb of Warsaw. These forces killed 600 Germans in one area, a midnight communique said, in their fight along the south bank of the Bug below the troops under Zakharov.

General Malinovsky's troops in Romania captured more than 15 towns and villages in the push into Transylvania and in cleaning out sections of the shattered Galati gap.

A midnight bulletin said that both German and Hungarian troops were met in the push through the Oituz pass to Bretcu. They were hurled into retreat, it said.

Fifty-seven miles to the north other Russian units driving through the Carpathians west of Piatra-Neant captured a fortified zone with numerous concrete firing points and routed the 20th German tank division, Moscow said. More than 2,000 Germans belonging to this division surrendered. The Third Nazi Alpine division also suffered heavy losses, the bulletin added.

Rail Station Falls

A third Russian column, pushing west from Comanesti, taken Sunday, made a three-mile advance and captured the rail station of Ateu, within 11 miles of Hungarian-held Transylvania.

Soviet entry into Hungarian Transylvania, taken from Romania by the Germans in 1940 and given to Hungary, knocked out one of the main natural fortifications in the east. Romanian troops, turning against the Germans, intend to aid in the reconquest of Transylvania, a province larger than Indiana, and half of which now is administered by the Hungarians.

The Russians, in one of the war's greatest diplomatic and military strokes, were moving swiftly in an effort to trap large German forces scattered throughout Romania, and were within sixty-eight miles of the big Black Sea port of Constanta and eighty-four miles from the Bulgarian frontier.

Premier Stalin announced the new triumphs in two orders of the day, one of which was addressed to Admiral E. S. Oktyabrsky, Sevastopol siege hero.

The admiral's ships and landing detachments of the Black Sea Fleet captured Sulina and Tulcea, the latter forty-three miles up the Danube at the apex of the delta. Sulina was described by Stalin as an "important naval base of the German invaders," who no longer can prey on Russian shipping, now that Romania and Bulgaria have deserted the Axis.

Romanian troops still were fighting the Germans in the Ploesti oil region, thirty miles north of Bucharest, Berlin said. Bucharest already had declared that its troops, turning against their former ally, had sealed off the escape passes through the Carpathians. Moscow dispatches confirmed this Romanian announcement.

BERLIN DECLARES RED FORCES REACH HUNGARIAN BORDER

Cossack-led Russian Drive Carries Into Oil Region of Romania.

London, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Russian troops have reached the Hungarian border, the German radio announced tonight.

In a broadcast communique the German High Command said earlier that "counter-attacks by Hungarian and German troops to prevent the enemy from entering Hungary through the eastern Carpathians are making good headway," and that Russian attacks had been repelled at Piatra-Neamt, at the edge of Transylvania.

The communique also declared that the Russians continued their great attack between Warsaw and East Prussia in the region between the Vistula and Narew Rivers, and reached the Bobr area.

In its later announcement, the Berlin radio said that the Russians reached the Hungarian border at one of the Carpathian passes, adding: "In Hungarian territory to the southwest, a German counter-attack was successful."

Though vague, the announcement seemed to indicate that the Russian advance was through Romania to the edge of the Transylvania. However, other Russian Army groups in Southern Poland have been within thirteen miles of five mountain passes leading into provinces which Hungary annexed from Czecho-Slovakia when that republic was partitioned.

Tonight Premier Stalin announced in two orders of the day that the Russians have captured Tulcea on the south bank of the Danube, forty miles southeast of Galati; Sulina on the central mouth of that big river, and Braila, a Danube river port, twelve miles south of Galati.

50 Miles From Bucharest

Moscow, Aug. 28 (AP)—Two great Russian army groups paced by colorful Cossacks advanced within less than 50 miles of Bucharest today in a drive swiftly overrunning the wealthy Ploesti oil region.

An unconfirmed report said some columns had plunged also 50 miles [illegible] Transylvania.

The 10,642-square-mile northern section of Transylvania was cut away from Romania and awarded to Hungary by Hitler in the 1940 Vienna dictate. Yet there were no reports of Hungarian fighting alongside the Germans in that area.

German Report

(The German communique said "counterattacks by Hungarian and German troops to prevent the enemy from entering Hungary through the eastern Carpathians are making good headway. Russian attacks at Piatra-Neamt at the edge of Transylvania were reported foiled.

(The Germans said the Russians "continued their big attack" between Warsaw and East Prussia in the region between the Vistula and Narew rivers and "reached the Bobr area.")

The main Russian direction in Romania was toward Bucharest, but numerous columns moved off the Russian right flank into the Carpathians. It was one of these which was reported deep in Transylvania (which capitulated Romania has sworn to retake from Hungary).

Germans Bombed, Strafed

Strong air forces were bombing and strafing the disorganized Germans day and night.

East of captured Galati in the breached defenses in the gap between the mountains and the Danube mouth, advance Russian troops poured down the highway toward Bucharest on roads which skirt the Baragan steppe north of the Bulgarian frontier.

Front dispatches said Nazi storm troopers were haranguing and threatening the German troops in efforts to make a stand. There was sporadic resistance, but the armies of Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin and Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky appeared to have broken the back of the Nazi forces before Bucharest.

[A Bucharest communique said that the Romanian troops, going over to the side of the Allies, also attacked the Germans at Ploesti and blocked the mountain passes leading to Hungary by way of Transylvania. The Berlin radio frankly admitted that the German position was precarious and said that the Nazi troops were locked in unusually ferocious battle with the Romanians amid the twisted wreckage of the Ploesti oil field installations.]

Overwhelm Nazi Anchors.

The Russians overwhelmed the Germans at Focansi and Galati, anchors of the once vaunted Nazi defense line, and rolled on through the oil fields of Ramnicul-Sarat, twenty-two miles beyond Focansi and seventy-five miles northeast of Bucharest. Ploesti is fifty-seven miles southwest of the advancing Red armies, one of which moved on Ploesti and Bucharest, down the southern side of the Transylvanian Alps, while the other rolled ahead from the Danube. The way to Bucharest appeared wide open.

The Russian communique said that other Russian forces climbing westward into the Carpathians above the Galati Gap captured some localities along a railway leading to the Transylvanian Plateau, including Gomanesti, sixty miles northwest of Focsani, and Targu-Ocna, Romania's largest salt mining center. The surrender of two Nazi corps commanders and two major-generals, together with 18,000 soldiers, indicated the seriousness of the Germans' position.

The remnants of twelve German divisions pocketed southwest of Chisinau, 140 miles behind the Russians pouring through the Galati Gap, had been compressed into a small wooded area and were being destroyed, the communique said. In eight days of the Romanian drive the Russians have killed or captured more than 300,000 Germans and Romanians. This made 1,051,886 Axis troops killed or captured since the summer offensive began on June 23.

AUG 29 1944

The Moscow communique said that Russian positions northeast and east of Praga, Warsaw's east suburb, had been improved, and that fifty additional localities on the Estonian front capitulated to the Third Baltic Army.

YANK AERIAL ATTACK RISES

Fighters Batter Rail Lines In Four Countries

Agnew

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—United States Eighth Air Force fighters today made their heaviest raids since D-day on enemy railroad junctions and equipment in all-day attacks ranging over the Franco-German border, Belgium and Holland, as Ninth Air Force Marauder bombers continued the offensive at dusk with sharp attacks in France against fuel dumps at Amiens and ammunition stores at L'Aigle.

Aimed at liquidating any attempts to bolster the fading German defenses, 500 fighters ranged over thousands of square miles attacking from Nijmegen, Holland, to Frankfurt, Germany, and encountered negligible opposition.

Shoot Up Troop Trains

The airfield continuous attacks shot up 13 German troops trains, strafing German soldiers as they leaped from the trains to seek cover, destroyed or damaged 270 locomotives and 1,496 railroad cars, shot up 237 trucks, blew up two ammunition trains and set fire to several ammunition cars.

In addition, 21 planes were destroyed, 13 in the air and 8 on the ground.

Nineteen of the Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings failed to return.

Canals Get Attention

The fighters paid special attention to canals, machine-gunning scores of barges and oil tanks, further depleting Hitler's ebbing oil supply.

Pilots reported a number of trains carrying armored vehicles, trucks and field guns on flat cars, and that the Germans had taken considerable effort to camouflage parked aircraft. They reported that yards were choked with equipment and that there were plenty of vehicles on the highways.

"There were trains everywhere," said Capt. L. B. Reid, Jr., of Kansas City, who led a Mustang group over the area near Metz and Nancy. His group blew up two ammunition trains and destroyed or damaged 340 railway cars and disabled 47 locomotives.

A Thunderbolt squadron led by Capt. Richard E. Conner, of Vicksburg, Miss., caused a "tremendous" explosion in the rail yard near Namur.

Attack Flying-Bomb Sites

Early tonight Halifaxes and Lancasters of the RAF bomber command attacked a number of flying-bomb launching sites in northern France.

A number of rail lines along the Seine east of Paris were slashed by pilots who reported traffic far heavier than normal.

Light and medium bombers yesterday rained more than 4,000 bombs on Nazis attempting to flee from the area south of Rouen and during the night Mosquitos revisited the German chemical and industrial center of Mannheim, pounded Seine crossings south of Paris and freight yards at Lille.

Pound Concrete Structure

RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes with fighter escort hammered a concrete structure at Mimoyecques in the Pas de Calais area believed to be connected with the Nazis' secret "V-2," the Air Ministry announced. The Germans have been threatening to unlease a 60 to 90 ton rocket with an estimated load of ten tons, capable of wreaking far greater damage at longer range than the present robot bomb.

Striking from Mediterranean bases to complete a huge two-directional attack on the enemy, between 500 and 750 Fortresses and Liberators bombed oil refineries and other targets in Austria, Hungary and northern Italy.

Western front operations were made despite a heavy forenoon ground mist and low clouds. Pilots reported visibility was so poor that it was difficult to avoid trees and buildings. One group said telephone wires and trees tore auxiliary tanks off three of its Mustangs.

Strong forces of the 15th Air Force in the Mediterranean area attacked the Moosbierbaum oil refinery in Austria and another at Szony, the Szolnok rail bridge and Miskolcz rail yards in Hungary and the Avisio viaduct and Ora bridge on the Brenner Pass rail line in northern Italy.

Score Many Hits

Despite a dense smoke screen, Fortresses scored many hits on the Moosbierbaum refinery. Liberators plastered the Szony plant 50 miles northwest of Budapest which had been producing 1,000 tons of gasoline monthly.

Fires and explosions raged through the Miskolcz yards 100 miles northeast of Budapest at junction lines to Romania and Czechoslovakia following the Liberators' attack.

Liberator crewmen reported a good pattern of bombs on a rail bridge over the Tisza river at Szolnok, 55 miles southeast of Budapest. Liberators also battered the Avisio viaduct and Ora bridge 30 miles north of Avision.

Tactical air forces operated over southern France and northern Italy, bombing three bridges in the vicinity of Lyon, an airdrome at Villa Franca di Verona ten miles southwest of Verona and harbors at Imperia and Savona on the Italian Riveria.

Flash

400 Fighters In Raid

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—Enemy airfields and transportation facilities in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany were attacked today by more than 400 American fighters which swept the Continent as far east as Frankfurt. (Other details on Page 3.)

Site Of Super-Rockets Believed RAF Target

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes with fighter escort attacked a concrete structure in the French coastal area late yesterday believed to be connected with the Nazis' secret long-range "V-2" rocket, the Air Ministry announced today.

The Berlin radio reported Allied bombers blasting again today at Nazi Europe from both Italy and Great Britain, striking in northwest Germany, Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The concrete structure was at Mimoyecques, in Pas de Calais. The Nazis have been threatening to use a 60-to-90-ton rocket with a warhead estimated at about ten tons and capable of wreaking damage far beyond that of the present robot bomb.

Low Countries Blasted

Last night RAF Mosquitos slashed at the Rhineland industrial center of Mannheim and attacked German transport in the Low Countries.

Heavy bombers, which have flown 8,500 sorties in large-scale assaults from British and Italian bases in the past four days, were apparently idle overnight, but the Mosquitos struck into Holland, bombing and strafing trains, motor convoys and barges while others slashed at Mannheim.

Yesterday powerful formations of Allied planes from Britain and Italy smashed at Germany's synthetic oil sources and strafed and bombed retreating Nazi troops in France, after RAF assaults Saturday night on Konigsberg, Kiel, Hamburg and Berlin.

Nazi Reinforcements

Pilots report considerable movement of German reinforcements and supplies from the Low Countries into France, operations which the Mosquitos harassed in Holland particularly. Fighter-bombers extended their operations farther north and east of the Seine.

Some trains blown up were believed to have been loaded with ammunition or possibly flying bombs en route to platforms which may soon be enveloped by the Allied advance.

The air blows at the flying bomb ramps, depots and supply routes were believed responsible for the respite that London has enjoyed for three days.

3,500 Tactical Flights

Early today, air activity over northern France was restricted by rain and cloud banks. Planes based on England and France flew about 5,000 sorties yesterday, 3,500 by tactical units helping the infantry and armor round up and annihilate battered German divisions. They unloaded thousands of fragmentation aid high explosive bombs on Germans, vehicles and barges concentrated near Rouen.

Medium and light bombers attacked fuel and other stores northeast of Paris. Fighter bombers ranged over a wide area, blasting hundreds of locomotives, railroad cars and motor vehicles from the mouth of the Seine to Luxembourg and Germany.

Denmark also felt Allied air blows for the first time since D-day.

Transport Damage Listed

The day's score included destruction or damage to 191 locomotives, 1,100 railroad cars, 700 motor vehicles, 39 barges and 44 field guns.

American and British heavy bombers kept up their two-directional bombing of military objectives in Germany. Oil plants were battered.

In all operations from the west yesterday, Allied flyers destroyed 18 German planes aloft and 22 aground. Twenty Allied planes were lost, three of which were United States heavy bombers.

Bulgaria Reports All German Troops Being Withdrawn

Romania Disarming Them at Border; Sofia's Surrender Nearer

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The Moscow radio, quoting the Bulgarian news agency, said tonight the Germans had begun withdrawing troops from Bulgaria and that the withdrawal would be completed within a few days. "Disarming of German troops crossing the Bulgaria-Romania frontier is going on," the broadcast said.

LONDON, Aug. 28 — (AP) Allied surrender terms are expected to be presented to an envoy of Bulgaria within a few days and the Germans put on the pressure today to keep this Balkan satellite from joining Romania in flight from the Nazi orbit.

Peace terms drawn by the European Advisory commission were submitted to Washington and Moscow for approval, and they are believed insistent that Bulgaria disgorge the parts of Greece and Yugoslavia which she seized at the height of Germany's successes.

Romania to Sign Soon

Romania, already fighting beside the Red armies sweeping toward her capital of Bucharest, will sign her armistice in Moscow shortly, it was learned here.

(Secretary of State Hull said in Washington that Bulgarian officials had been in contact with Allied governments on the question of an armistice, and added that the United States probably would be represented by both diplomats and military officials at the Romanian armistice proceedings in the Russian capital.

(Washington also reported the Allied attitude had stiffened toward Bulgaria in view of her attempt to bargain on retaining parts of Yugoslavia and Greece and failure to turn against the Germans.)

The pressure was on against Finland, Hungary and Slovakia, with the Russians calling on them to get out of the war before they too are carried down with the final crash of the Reich.

The German News agency DNB said Gustave Beckerle, the Reich's minister to Bulgaria, was hastening back to Sofia to discuss "with the Bulgarian government the new situation in that country."

Bulgaria is believed to have six divisions in Macedonia and southern Serbia, heavily outnumbering the German troops in that region.

Marshal Tito told Associated Press Correspondent Joseph Morton in Italy recently that he could see Bulgaria's peace overtures only in the light of the activity of Bulgarian forces of occupation, according to dispatch from Bari, Italy, datelined Sunday.

"Bulgarian troops, together with the Germans," he said, "are again attacking the army of national liberation in Montenegro, are fighting our forces in Serbia, and in Macedonia are engaged in the same crimes as the Germans."

Must Withdraw Troops

British broadcasts beamed to Bulgaria told the Hulgarians flatly there would be no armistice until they pulled their forces from both countries.

Swiss reports said German forces in Greece, threatened with isolation by the sweep of events in the Balkans, were prepared to fight their way home through Yugoslavia, but a Cairo dispatch said they were preparing for another suicide stand in Greece.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftontidningen said Germany had promised to send ten divisions of reinforcements within four weeks to Hungary, where Red army troops now stand on the borders.

This account also declared Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had conferred in Budapest after Romania capitulated.

German propaganda described the situation in Romania as "very confused" with German troops encircling Bucharest, and some Romanian troops siding with the Germans despite King Mihai's orders to turn against the occupying forces.

These developments were shaking the Reich, and the German army radio felt called upon to broadcast to the soldiers to "remember your oath to Adolf Hitler."

"There are quarters in Germany," the broadcast said, "where doubt is gaining the upper hand and where confidence is shaken."

It declared that persons "drenched in poisonous Allied propaganda" had begun "to argue instead of obey and criticize instead of work" and these must be "ruthlessly eliminated."

"escape the disastrous consequences of the criminal policies of their governments."

Quick Capitulation Urged

"Events are developing so rapidly," said Pravda, "that they leave no time for hesitation. The situation is quite clear. The Germans have no hope and he who does not break with them will share their fate."

While Russia is not at war with Bulgaria, Pravda's warning seems aimed rather as much as at Hungary and Finland.

Moscow is believed fully informed of the armistice terms forwarded to Sofia. The terms were not disclosed, but it was believed that, besides demanding unconditional surrender, they called upon Bulgaria to give up all territories acquired since the war and turn over to the Allies all facilities needed in the war against Germany. The latter presumably includes right of passage for Allied troops.

There seemed little possibility that either Washington or London would be satisfied with the position of "complete neutrality" Bulgaria seeks.

"Bulgaria, with its record of greed and guilt, cannot slide gently into neutrality," said the Times of London, and other papers expressed similar sentiments.

Bulgarians Soon To Get Terms Of Surrender

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—Surrender terms for Bulgaria probably will be handed to an envoy of that Nazi satellite in Cairo within a few days and armistice terms for Romania are expected to be signed shortly in Moscow, it was learned today.

Greek and Yugoslav interests are understood to have full protection in the terms to the Bulgars, despite that Balkan kingdom's strange plea to be allowed to retain parts of those Allied nations which Bulgaria grabbed with German approval. The peace terms were prepared by the European Advisory Commission and submitted to Washington and Moscow for approval. Steps were taken to obtain Greek and Yugoslav concurrence.

Satellites Urged To Quit

The Russians asked Germany's remaining allies—Finland, Hungary and the rump state of Slovakia—to quit the Nazis before it is too late.

Urging other countries to turn against the Nazis like Rumania, the official Communist party organ Pravda said only thus could they

ROMANIA OFFERED CO-BELLIGERENCY STATUS BY ALLIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 — (AP) A status approaching co-belligerency, plus hope of regaining Transylvania, is offered Romania in armistice terms scheduled to be signed in Moscow shortly, it was reliably reported today.

The Allies are taking a stiffer attitude toward Bulgaria, partly, at least, on account of that country's attempt to bargain on getting out of the war and its failure to turn on the Germans as Romania has done.

Outlined by Hull

That outline of American-British-Russian policy in the Balkans took shape after Secretary of State Hull told his news conference that American diplomatic and military representatives probably will take part in signing the armistice with Romania.

Hull also said that the Allied governments recently have been in touch with Bulgarian officials.

Terms, it is understood, have not yet been delivered to Sofia, but demands are expected to include: withdrawal of occupation forces from Greece and Yugoslavia, at least demobilization of German forces within Bulgaria, return to Greece of the Thrace and Macedonian territories awarded Bulgaria by Hitler, and probably the right of passage for Allied troops.

The Romanian terms are, with minor modifications, the same as those drawn up by the Russians and approved by the United States and Britain last spring. These were given to Prince Barbu Stirbey in Cairo at that time. Romania did not respond until last week when King Mihai declared that his government was abandoning Berlin.

Actual co-belligerency is not covered in the armistice, it was said authoritatively, the question being left for consideration later.

30. 24— 18331

A statement last week by Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov that Romania's fighting equipment would be left intact if the Romanian army used it against the Germans is understood to be included.

May Get Transylvania

Transylvania, given to Hungary by Hitler, is not definitely promised to Romania, in line with the American policy of leaving territorial adjustments until after the war. However, indication is given of an Allied attitude favorable to Romania on the future of that province if her troops fight against German and Hungarian forces there now.

While unconditional surrender has been the basis for terms drawn for both Romania and Bulgaria, the Allies have used the discretion left them under this formula to vary conditions according to the circumstances and especially the timing of surrender.

Hull said that the State department has been kept informed of developments with regard to Romania primarily through the Soviet Union which has taken the initiative in the negotiations.

It is understood that the British have been taking the lead in the negotiations with Bulgaria, which is not at war with Russia, and that the Soviet Union has been kept up to date on all steps.

terms of the armistice made with Italy almost a year ago would be made public. There are more varieties of information on that question than any other, he said.

SINK NAZI VESSELS

London, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Allied naval forces sank an enemy supply ship, probably sank another and made hits on the escort ships in a sharp naval engagement off Cap d'Antifer, France, early today, the Admiralty announced. This was the fourth successive night channel engagement in which Allied navies intercepted enemy shipping attempting to escape from French channel ports.

U. S.-British Naval Force Hits Nazi Patrol

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—British and American light naval forces engaged a German patrol vessels on the Dutch coast yesterday, sank one, torpedoed two and drove another ashore, the Admiralty announced today.

Off the Dutch coast, British motor torpedoboats sank a German mine sweeper. Two casualties aboard British boats were reported in these engagements.

HALF-BUILT CLEMENCEAU SUNK BY RAF BOMBERS

LONDON, Aug. 28—(AP) Beating the Germans to it, the RAF sank the half-built French battleship Clemenceau in Brest harbor yesterday, the Air ministry announced tonight.

The ship, which was unfinished at the time of the fall of France in 1940, was to have been a 35,000-ton vessel of the Richelieu class.

The RAF sank the hulk in a safe place to prevent the Germans from using it to block the important harbo.

Broadcasts Call Roll Of Collaborationists

London, Aug. 28 (AP) — The American Broadcasting Station in Europe (ABSIE) tonight began calling the roll of collaborationists in Nazi-occupied countries who will stand trial with German war criminals.

In inaugurating its new policy, ABSIE began with Denmark, naming Fritz Clausen, organizer of the Schalburg Corps (Danish-Nazi militia), as the first Dane to be castigated as "a traitor and man without a country."

Collaborators and their Nazi colleagues in other occupied countries will be named in subsequent broadcasts—every Monday night.

London Holds Services

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—The liberation of Paris was observed today at thanksgiving services at St. Paul's attended by members of the British War Cabinet, the diplomatic corps of the United Nations and representatives of the armed forces.

The pealing of the bells of the cathedral attracted a large crowd.

Forgive Foes, Pope Urges Londoners

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—Pope Pius XII has appealed to the people of London to bear their trials with fortitude and with "Christian sentiments of forgiveness, charity and mercy, so that God may reward what the world will admire—an example of magnanimity inspired by the spirit of Christ's gospel."

The Pontiff's message was brought to London by Mgr. Bernard Griffin, Archbishop of Westminister, who recently returned from a visit to the Vatican and oner.

Germany demanded of the United States measures "to prevent the recurrence" of the reported incident, the broadcast said.

the Italian battlefront.

"You and yourselves, beloved children," the Pope said, "were not the least of our anxieties. For you, yes, you also, have had to pass through black days in this most terrible of all wars, and those days are still with you.

Prayers Offered

"We have sympathized deeply with your affliction and when destruction and death were among you we prayed for you daily and hourly.

". . . Our lively hope and our confident conviction is that you will work toward realization of universal harmony in Christ while in word and act, through prayer and personal sacrifice and the shining example of a sincere Christian life, you help those millions of noble souls who are your separated brethren to return to the fold and so make your contribution toward the establishment on earth of the reign of Christ, the Prince of Peace."

ROBOTS HIT LONDON FROM NEW ANGLE

London, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Robot bombs fell in London and the south of England around noon today, breaking a lull of more than thirty hours, but the attacks were limited and short. Some buzzed in from directions that suggested that the Germans are using new sites, possibly some held in reserve, or newly constructed or shifted from other locations.

A communique said that 450 flying bombs were launched against England in the week ended at 6 A. M. today, making the total about 7,700 since the blind attacks started.

Last night was free of bombs.

Mussolini Rescuers at Paris

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 28 (AP).—Among the German parachutists found in action in Paris, according to an unconfirmed report reaching here today, were members of the unit which claimed to have rescued Benito Mussolini from imprisonment in Italy.

Polish Unit Bore Brunt Of Fighting At Falaise

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Aug. 28 (AP)—A Polish armored division, long trained and keyed for vengeance, was hurled into the last six days of fighting in the Falaise trap in Normandy, it was announced tonight. The division beat off breakout attempts by two German SS Corps and left the battlefield at Chambois one of the worst shambles of the whole front.

For three or four days, the division bore the whole weight of the German attempt to break out. For a time it stood astride the gap under attack from nearly all sides. When the shooting died down, the Poles had 5,000 prisoners and a German divisional commander, General Maczek. They held their ground firmly until joined by Canadians on the south and Americans on the north.

LIBERATED PARIS IN NEED OF FOOD

PARIS, Aug. 28.—(AP) Paris wants food, which the Allies can and will give her, and, now that she is rid of the Germans, she also wants disorderly elements of the Maquis and the French Forces of the Interior kept in check.

The Allies are determined that Gen. Charles de Gaulle must solve the latter problem.

Today, some 72 hours after Paris was liberated, the city is still in an uproar. Wild-eyed youths waving rifles and machineguns in one hand and driving careening automobiles with the other still roam the streets.

There still are sporadic outbursts of rifle fire and fist fights among the French themselves. The streets present no semblance of order.

The majority of the Maquis and French Forces of the Interior were described as level-headed patriots anxious to get on with the task of restoring peace and order.

De Gaulle requested that two divisions (one British and American troops parade through Paris and it is likely such a show will be arranged but Gen. Dwight W. Eisenhower has given no indication that he plans to take over the policing of the city.

The need for food is evident on every hand. Already the Allies have arranged a fleet of 3,000 trucks to carry foodstuffs into the city. The present need has been estimated at 75,000 tons a month.

De Gaulle, who barely missed assassination Saturday at the hands of snipers who some resistance leaders believe were left behind by the German army for the express purpose of killing members of the French government, was reported to be in southern France.

De Gaulle Goes To South

The French-controlled Vichy radio reported de Gaulle had conferred with Andre Diethelm, French Commissioner for War, and Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, commander of the French army which made the Riviera landings, somewhere in the south.

De Gaulle Has Left Paris

He left Paris Sunday after numerous conferences with resistance and Government leaders and is reported to be in southern France.

The flareup of shooting caused postponement of de Gaulle's victory address in Paris and priests canceled, for a time at least, plans for a grand service of thanksgiving, because of the fear that the large crowd would offer targets for German snipers and French traitors still holding out in the city.

Plans were made for a solemn funeral for eight young French resistance fighters who were executed by German troops after their capture on the first day of the mass uprising in Paris August 19.

Eight Dug From Common Grave

They were dug from a common grave today in the courtyard of Caserne barracks in the Place de la Republique. They were slain by blows on the head or by bullets at the base of the skull. Autopsies were ordered to see if they had been tortured before their execution.

Other graves were expected to be found in the same courtyard.

Roger Stephane, fictitious name of the commandant of the Paris resistance forces, said the battle in Paris started when an unknown Frenchman raised the de Gaulle flag over German headquarters in the Hotel de Ville the morning of August 19.

560 Germans Killed

He said the revolting Parisians battled 12,000 Nazis for a week before French forces and the United States Third Army entered the city.

"Our job now is to reorganize and set up a Government of Free French. That we can do," Stephane said.

The Administration Generale Assistance Publique de Paris reported that 560 Germans were killed and 969 wounded in fighting for Paris. It was estimated that more civilians than Germans lost their lives in the eight days fighting.

entered the city last Friday, before the formal enemy surrender, and since then hundreds more have arrived.

Planes brought in the most urgently needed food and medical supplies.

From Allied Supply Pool

The supplies are coming from a pool set up by the Americans, British and French, with supply lines manned by troops of the three nationalities.

"We'll have plenty of meat, salmon and flour, but no caviar," said Lieut. Col. Frank Howley, of Philadelphia, the civil affairs officer who set up headquarters in the Place Vendome yesterday.

"Ration cards have been printed for all the city's 5,000,000 residents and are being distributed through an organization already set up. This organization is functioning without a hitch. They are off to do a great job and they are doing it in a sensible manner."

He said the food supplies would be distributed from central concentration points, among them the historic Les Halles market place, where almost every American tourist has had onion soup at dawn.

French To Take Over

"The rations will be the same as before communications were disrupted," the colonel said. "As communications are repaired, the French will take care of themselves, for they have big supplies of food stacked out. They also have one of the biggest wheat crops in history to go on.

"After the meat—which includes American bully beef—we are giving top priority at present to chocolate, soap and medical supplies. We also are providing what gasoline we can right now and at the same time take care of our own war needs, for fuel is one of their biggest problems."

Bulgars in Touch With Allies

Hull Makes Flat Assertion to This Effect—London Hears of Contact in Cairo.

Washington, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull said today that Bulgarian officials have been in touch with Allied governments on the questions of an armistice, but that he did not know whether any American officials had been among those with whom the Bulgars had been in contact.

In the case of Romania,, Mr. Hull asserted, this Government had been kept advised, mainly by Russian officials, of the progress toward making armistice arrangements.

Questioned about London reports that a Romanian armistice would soon be signed in Moscow, Mr. Hull observed that the United States would probably be represented by both diplomatic and military officials. Romania, being in the Russian military sphere, is being handled primarily by the Soviet Union, he added.

Mr. Hull also said he could not state definitely whether the Nazis Protest To U. S. On Prisoner Handling

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Berlin radio said today that the German Foreign Office had sent a protest to the United States Government via Switzerland, alleging that German prisoners had been placed on American tanks on August 14, in the assault on St. Malo, "to increase the difficulties of defense for the German garrison."

The statement said that the incident had been reported by the St. Malo commander, Col. Andreas von Aulock, and was a "serious infringement of the laws of warfare." Colonel von Aulock is now a pris-

Food Enough For All Begins Reaching Paris

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP)—Food arrived here in an uninterrupted stream today. Allied authorities said they expected to bring 2,400 tons daily—enough to feed everyone.

mander of Paris, at noon today.

General Koenig now is responsible for security in the city, but if any disorder arises an American Army unit is prepared to aid.

The job of supplying Paris with extra food was turned over to a major general who is commanding the services of supply here. Army food supplies now are coming in and no shortage is expected.

Koenig will organize into a new army the French forces of the interior, thousands of whose members now are wandering around in civilian clothes carrying guns.

U. S. A.-A. Batteries In City

Paris still is in the operational zone, and all of its facilities are at the disposal of the Allied armies. American heavy and light anti-aircraft batteries have been moved in for air-raid protection.

It was believed the city and environs were entirely cleared of German resistance.

The American commander turned over the city in a formal letter embodying decisions reached by American, British and representatives of Gen. Charles de Gaulle in London.

The generals met at Koenig's headquarters in the Hotel des Invalides, where the American general, who served in the Signal Corps in World War I, found a record of his award of the French Legion of Honor still there.

barracks Aug. 19. The building borders one of the busiest traffic centers in the metropolitan area—seven important thoroughfares juncture at the Place de la République.

German troops quickly broke up this initial foray and captured many of the men. They were taken into the enclosed courtyard, shot and buried. Several of the dead men's skulls were crushed as if from a blow with a rifle butt. A number bore bullet wounds at the base of the skull.

All papers and identifying marks had been removed from the corpses before they were tossed into the grave. French physicians began autopsies to determine whether the men had been subjected to physical torture before they were killed.

Eisenhower wanted General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., and de Gaulle to participate in the parade, but duty prevented their appearance.

German planes had bombed Paris suburbs the night before, and early yesterday the skies were aglow from the light of fires. The death toll was placed at 110, with 719 persons injured.

Thrown Into Panic

When the raiding came over, people were still in the streets celebrating despite the battle which broke out Saturday afternoon when snipers started firing during the victory parade for de Gaulle.

Thousands of Parisians were thrown into panic as the parade broke up in wild flurries of gunfire.

Several spectators were killed and dozens were wounded as the shooting spread, a short time after de Gaulle had sped along the parade route.

A simple low mass was said before a small assembly at the Cathedral of Notre Dame yesterday, and prayers were offered for all who had died in defense of France. A grand service of thanksgiving was not held because priests feared the worshippers would afford targets for German snipers and French traitors.

New Government Is Being Set Up In Paris After Frenzied Week End

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP)—A new French Government was being set up in liberated Paris today after a frenzied week end, in which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was given a tumultous welcome, the Germans bombed the city, and Gen. Charles de Gaulle escaped death or injury from snipers' bullets.

(The Paris radio in a broadcast heard in London said the city was quiet today and that two additional nests of enemy resistance had been mopped up.)

Nearly all of the directors of the French resistance movements, who will have promfnent parts in the new government, were in the city. The Algiers government was en route.

Many Names Assumed

Quartus Cerat, head of all French resistance, was appointed minister-at-large under De Gaulle. Cerat's name, like some others in the resistance movement, is an assumed one.

Crowds jammed the Champs-Elysees yesterday as General Eisenhower and his British, French and American staffs made a ceremonial tour of the city.

Eisenhower told cheering Parisians: "I have come here to pay the tribute of the Allied forces to the indomitable spirit of Paris."

Bradley Is Present

With him were Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of the United States 12th Army group; Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior; Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclere, commander of the French Second Armored Division; Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder, deputy supreme commander; Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Fifth United States Corps commander.

Panicky Nazi In Louvre Ruins A Mummified Egyptian Sheep

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP—Delayed)—The chief guard of the famous Louvre art museum said that in four years' occupation, the Germans destroyed only one valued exhibit—a 4,500-year-old mummified Egyptian sheep.

It was torn to pieces yesterday by a frantic German soldier in the basement as he sought shelter during the panic caused by wild bursts of gunfire between rooftop snipers and French patriots marching in the great liberation-day parade.

The Louvre is considered the most magnificent public building in Paris and in the courtyard of the 40-acre structure were 750 temporarily quartered German prisoners.

When the shooting started, the prisoners frantically besieged the guards asking protection. They were taken into the museum but opened a wall panel and torn out the 4,500-year-old sheep mummy and crawled into its place to hide. The Germans were terribly frightened."

He said "the Germans made no attempt to steal art pieces—we simply took them to safer places when the war broke out."

ings for safety. Dozens of windows in the museum were broken by stray bullets.

The Louvre, during its three centuries of construction, served as the home of French kings. Among the broken windows were several in the room which once was the boudoir of Marie Antionette.

Eight civilians were wounded in the crossfire outside and were brought into the almost empty museum and treated on its marble floors. Bloodstains still are there.

Nazis Hiding In Sarcophagi

"When the shooting died down, we started to take the German prisoners outside again," said the chief guard, Albert Mairot. "We found six of them hiding in two ancient Egyptian sarcophagi and one had opened a wall panel and torn out the 4,500-year-old sheep mummy and crawled into its place to hide. The Germans were terribly frightened."

He said "the Germans made no attempt to steal art pieces—we simply took them to safer places when the war broke out."

Disorderly Elements In Paris Worry Allies

By Howard Cowan

[Associated Press Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press]

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP)—Paris wants food—that her Allies can and will give her.

But, rid of the Germans, she now also wants disorderly elements of the Maquis and the French Forces of the Interior kept in check.

The Allies are determined that Gen. Charles de Gaulle must solve that problem.

Still In Uproar

Today—some 72 hours after Paris was liberated—the city is still in an uproar. Wild-eyed youths waving rifles and machine guns in one hand and driving careening automobiles with the other still roam the streets.

There still are sporadic outbursts of rifle fire ad fist fights among the French themselves. The streets present no semblance of order.

Tanks which Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc's French Second Armored Division drove into the strife-torn city still are parked under trees which line the capital's broad avenues. There are ugly gaps these lines of sentinel trees. Many of them are reduced to stumps in little pools of sawdust. Some are bullet chipped and parts of long barricades blocking streets.

Majority Level-Headed

The majority of the Maquis and the FFI, one highly competent observer estimated, are level-headed Patriots who are anxious to return to the task of restoring Paris and France to pre-war existence.

A small percentage was described as the "rougher element" who do not intend to give up the weapons which the Allied dropped to them by parachute in darkness.

The situation is unpleasant. The Allies are shying away from the use of the military, which would expose them to the accusation of using Nazi methods.

De Gaulle Sees Eisenhower

Though he was conspicuously absent from Sunday's parade, General Eisenhower saw de Gaulle when the supreme commander visited Paris yesterday. It is known that he asked Eisenhower to send two divisions of British and American troops on parade through the city, and it is not unlikely that Paris will see a demonstration of Allied might, sooner or later.

But the supreme commander has given no indication that he intends to take over the job of policing the city.

A huge fleet of almost 3,000 trucks will carry foodstuffs into the capital. It is estimated that 75,000 tons a month must be moved into Paris for the time being. There is little doubt that there is real need.

Wine For Food

A jeep with four Americans stopped outside a fashionable Paris hotel yesterday and immediately was besieged by well-wishers. One thrust a bottle of red wine into the jeep and announced bluntly:

"We are hungry. Have you any food?"

The Frenchman was well dressed and would have pased for a prosperous doctor, businessman or lawyer. It was not pleasant to watch him stand there in the street, unashamed, and wolf down rock-like hardtack biscuits from the GI's K rations. He even ate the crumbs which he caught in his left hand.

Finds Paris Still Very Chic

Reporter Sees Frenchwomen Showing Their Traditional Smartness Despite War.

By LEE CARSON.

Representing the Combined American Press.

AUG 29 1944

Paris, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—After a couple of days looking around a reborn Paris, this correspondent goes on record as saying that the city still is the style center of the world—war or no war.

Paris still is chic, and if materials are inferior, cut and design have disguised them completely. The women of Paris this summer are wearing bright prints cut with full swinging skirts, a molded midriff and deep V-necklines. Sleeves vary, but for the most part they are short, falling straight from square shoulders.

Their shoes would make any American woman weep with envy. Platform soles are the thing and they usually are in bright reds and greens, while other colors usually accent the print of the dress.

There are lots of acid colors with white patterns, also combinations of gray and red with a white curlicue pattern.

The hair usually is worn just above shoulder length, with a complicated pompadour in front, softly curled, while snoods tied on with a ribbon bow are very popular. There are very few suits and those have straight lines with hip-length jackets.

No one has stockings. Leg make-up is the substitute. Cosmetics abound—and face make-up usually is dark, with a pinkish lipstick and eye accent.

French women are not wearing furs. The women say there are none, so furs have been ruled out as not chic. Handbags are enormous and all have shoulder straps. Most are of the envelope type. Gloves all are of wrist length, crocheted in wide mesh and only in white or black. There are earrings on every smart woman and most wear huge flowers of red, white and blue rosettes made of fabric.

The ingenious French have used anything at hand and turned it into very smart jewelry. I have seen a number of earrings of starched lace with black velvet ribbons.

Beauty salons are doing a land office business. Famous face parlors have reopened and I have a date this afternoon to get the works—which, after all these weeks with the Army, is badly needed. I have been promised a real Parisian hair-do; then I may be able to look at the smartest and most beautiful women I have seen in Europe without cringing.

FRENCH DIG UP BODIES OF 8 SLAIN PATRIOTS

PARIS, Aug. 27 (Delayed) (AP)—The bodies of eight young French resistance fighters, slain by German troops who captured them on the first day of the mass uprising of Paris, were dug from a common grave today in the courtyard of Caserne barracks in the Place de la République.

It was here that 350 Germans barricaded in the great eighty-six-year-old stone barracks fought a five-hour battle last Friday with hundreds of attacking French Forces of the Interior men before surrendering to regular troops of the French Second Armored Division.

Inspection of the courtyard disclosed several mounds and the first one opened yielded the eight bodies.

"We expect to find many more here before we are through," said one French resistance leader.

He explained that the men had been part of a group that courageously but prematurely attacked the

'Assassin Squads' Laid To Nazis

Paris, Aug. 27 (AP—Delayed)—French resistance leaders expressed belief today that German officers left behind for the very purpose were responsible for two attempts on the life of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The first shot was fired at the leader of the French Committee of National Liberation yesterday while he was driving from a square crowded with thousands of Parisians before the Hotel de Ville (City Hall).

The general did not know at the time that he was fired upon in the square, where a near-riot was caused, but he certainly knew of the second attempt, which was made as he was entering Notre Dame Cathedral to hear a prayer of thanks for deliverance of the city.

Was Under Guard

Guards surrounded de Gaulle at the cathedral, and they promptly searched through the crowd for the

would-be assassin.

Members of the skeleton government staff said they believed many Germans were left behind in France for the special purpose of killing de Gaulle and other members of the French Government and leaders of the resistance movement.

The incidents occurred during de Gaulle's tour of the city, which started from the Arc de Triomphe.

When he reached the Hotel de Ville shots began to pop from buildings all around it. Several thousand civilians were assembled there ,and they crouched behind every available vehicle.

Civilians Wounded

There was the wildest confusion, with the police and soldiers firing at each other mistakenly. A number of civilians, including women and children, were wounded and several were believed killed.

At one Red Cross first-aid post ten men and women were treated for wounds. One man was dead.

Police said Germans in the crowd fired shots from other quarters to cause even greater confusion. A young member of the French resistance movement waved the French flag and sang the "Marseillaise." This calmed the crowd.

De Gaulle, with Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, commander of the French Second Armored Division, rode from the Hotel de Ville to the cathedral.

Snipers In Cathedral

Snipers' bullets fired from the twin spires of the famous church whined about de Caulle. Priests stood in the street and never moved a step as machine-gun bullets dropped all around them.

UNKNOWN PATRIOT LED PARIS REVOLT

Aide Declares 250 Men Took Hotel de Ville in 5 Minutes, Lost It and Won It Again

PARIS, Aug. 27 (Delayed) (AP)—An unknown patriotic Frenchman started a second revolution, this time against the hated Nazis in Paris, and Commandant Roger Stephane helped carry it through to victory.

He told the story in a side room of the Hotel de Ville, the heart of Paris resistance.

Stephane is a fictitious name to protect his compatriots still in Nazi-held areas. In peace time he was a journalist and political aspirant who became a de Gaullist in war and led the resurrection of this city.

This was his story:

"The fight for freedom had been planned and I was on my way to attend a political meeting to determine when we would start fighting in Paris. I was walking by myself when compatriots in a bus told me an unknown Frenchman had raised the de Gaulle flag over German headquarters in the Hotel de Ville that morning, Aug. 19. I can tell you we had nearly 12,000 Nazis to contend with."

A German tank attacked the bus, so Stephane took it upon himself to order members of the French Republique, veterans of World War I, to fight. He told them to scatter the crowd so that they would not be shot in front of the Hotel de Ville, seat of the German Government in Paris and which the resistance groups had surrounded with machine-guns and armor.

Stephane fought all day and got in front of the Notre Dame Cathedral. He was wounded in one arm when the Germans attacked with a score of tanks and infantry, but they were held off until 7 A. M.

They went after the Hotel de Ville with only 250 men and light arms, and took it in five minutes. They arrested Pierre Taillinger, Mayor of Paris and a Nazi sympathizer.

On Aug. 21 the Patriots were attacked by strong tank forces and had to give way because they had no heavy weapons. However, in retreat they captured two trucks loaded with machine guns and lighter weapons, and killed a number of Germans.

These weapons enabled them to recapture the Hotel de Ville on Aug. 22. On that day there were only small skirmishes, but on Aug. 23 the Germans attacked the Hotel de Ville strongly again.

Stephane engineered the capture of a tank as sharpshooters killed its occupants when they showed themselves. Meanwhile, the French Forces of the Interior barricaded Paris at all main crossings, with bricks and trees.

The Germans tried to confuse the French Forces of the Interior by giving directions in Stephane's name. He countermanded all the orders. The Germans made their last attack at the Rue de Republique. The French broke this attack with the help of 100 men. The next day French forces with the United States Third Army thundered into Paris to make freedom complete.

"My greatest reward is that not a singe Partisan was killed," said Stephane. "But there were many civilian casualties," he added sadly.

"Our job now is to reorganize and set up a government of free French. That we can do."

'The Wildcat' Battles Nazis To Avenge Kin

By Don Whitehead

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP—Delayed)—Parisians paid for liberation of their beloved city in blood—and somewhere in this excited capital is a modern Joan of Arc who was the heroine of the Patriots' battle to drive out the Germans.

Hundreds of civilians were killed and many more wounded in the eight-day battle which raged through the streets and from building to building as resistance forces fought to push the Germans out of Paris.

560 Germans Killed

The Administration Generale Assistance Publique de Paris says more civilians than Germans lost their lives in the fight for Paris. Its chart shows 560 Germans dead and 969 wounded.

At times the Patriots fought tanks with nothing more than rifles, pistols and hand grenades, and the boldest of the leaders was a Frenchwoman known to the Germans as "The Wildcat."

Captain In FFL

This slender brown-haired woman of 40 is a captain in the French Forces of Liberation. Fighting under her was a group of 40 men.

An official at one of the large Paris hospitals told the story today of "The Wildcat," who swore vengeance on the Germans when they killed her brother after he had escaped from a concentration camp.

Swears Vengeance

"She swore she would kill as many Germans as she could," this official said. "So she joined the FFI and became one of them most trusted leaders."

The day before Paris Fell "The Wildcat" led her band of 40 against three Mark I Vtanks. Her comrades would not let her fight tanks herself, but she carried their ammunition and brought them grenades and directed the fighting. They destroyed the three tanks.

Difficult To Find

She is elusive and difficult to find. She moves about the city, staying friends and rarely in one place very long. Usually she wears a shabby short skirt, a man's shirt and a bandana tied around her hair.

"She has a fine face," the official said, "except that when I saw her yesterday, her face was drawn with exhaustion. She had gone many hours without sleep or rest. And she talked of her brother and cried."

CHIANG HAILS FREED PARIS

He Congratulates Roosevelt, Churchill and de Gaulle

CHUNGKING, Aug. 28 (AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek sent his heartiest congratulations today to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Charles de Gaulle on the recapture of Paris.

He told General de Gaulle that the deliverance of Paris "foreshadows" the complete liberation of your fatherland and is a well-deserved reward for your noble efforts."

To President Roosevelt he said: "This glorious achievement of gallant allied forces will not only accelerate the total collapse of the Axis bloc but will also lead to an early realization of our ideal of building a new world order based on true freedom and justice."

Patriots Accuse Nazis Of Beating U. S. Airmen

Say Foe Paraded Captives Through French Streets

ELBEUF, France, Aug. 28 (AP).—The French underground chief of Elbeuf declared today that crew members of an American Flying Fortress were publicly beaten, manacled and driven through the streets of this town by the Germans in a vain effort to impress the inhabitants.

Telling his story while the shells of a Canadian artillery barrage whistled overhead on a Seine River bend below Rouen, he declared. "The American flyers were magnicent. They laughed in the faces of the Germans while they were being paraded with their hands chained together.

"This particular Fortress crew made the mistake of opening their parachutes too soon after they jumped. The Germans had time to bring men to the landing area and round them up."

DOUGHBOYS DRIVE UP RHONE VALLEY

Nazis Battle Frantically to Prevent Closing of Yank Trap.

ROME, Aug. 28.—(AP) An American armored column has thrown a deadly wedge into the Rhone valley 100 miles north of Marseille, and tonight battered remnants of the German 19th Army in southern France fought frantically to escape a trap which was closing on their last avenue of escape to Germany.

An official announcement said heavy losses already had been inflicted on fleeing enemy troops on the east bank of the Rhone, but did not disclose whether Yank forces had yet throttled all highways and railways on both sides of the stream, effectively stoppering the wide Rhone valley.

Flee in Disorder

Speeding the Nazis' disorderly flight and driving them into the blazing guns of the cut-off force just above Montelimar was another American column pounding up the Rhone valley from Avignon, some 45 miles down the river. All bridges across the Rhone have been blown, and French patriot troops holding the countryside on the west side of the river were reported harassing the flank of the reeling army.

The last Germans who had been holding out on the Marseille waterfront and on islands in the harbor finally surrendered, six days after capture of France's greatest port was officially announced by the Allies. Allied engineers had been waiting impatiently to begin cleaning up the harbor, badly needed to supply the Seventh army.

More than 50,000 German front line troops—possibly half the enemy force which garrisoned southern France—were estimated to have been killed, wounded or captured in less than two weeks of lightning warfare, Allied brand. Fall of the naval base of Toulon over the week-end packed another 7,000 prisoners into Allied pens and brought the total of captives to more than 30,000, Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters announced.

Some units of the American column which lanced across southern France and struck the Rhone valley above Montelimar travelled an incredible 200 miles in two days, reported Associated Press War Correspondent Edward Kennedy.

"The long march was an experience no soldier who made it will ever forget," Kennedy said. "While panzer troops are yet far from crushed and can be counted on to fight fiercely now that the Americans have reached controlling positions, the Allied command is confident the Germans will be crushed."

Reached Rhone Friday

Kennedy disclosed that American forces actually reached the Rhone last Friday and said that Allied headquarters withheld the news in order that the retreating Nazis, who are without adequate aerial observation should remain unaware of the trap as long as possible.

The German 11th armored division, one of the enemy units cut off by the swift American drive, was reported making desperate lunges in an effort to break through to Valence, 28 miles north of Montelimar, but its chances of escaping were diminishing by the hour.

On the eastern flank of the Riviera beachhead American troops reached the Var river at several points in their drive eastward from Antibes. Doughboys were only seven miles from the resort town of Nice, 11 miles from the principality of Monaco and 17 miles from the Italian frontier.

Still operating in official silence was "Butler's task force"—a highly mobile American column commanded by Brig. Gen. Frederick Butler—which reached Grenoble, 70 miles from the Swiss border, the middle of last week.

Menaced By Task Force

The German 11th Division was being pressed from the south by other American units, dispatches said, and was being harassed by Maquis in the hills to the west and cut up by Allied artillery fire from the east.

The Germans were making a fierce effort to cut a way through to Valence, 25 miles north of Montelimar, it was said, but the Americans were confident of their ability to crush the breakout attempt.

The Germans were confronted by the adidtional menace of "Butler's Task Force"—the mobile column commanded by Brig. Gen. Frederick Butler, which several days ago reached Grenoble, 70 miles northeast of Montelimar, and whose activities have not been reported since.

Hundreds Killed

The Germans were attempting to withdraw northward through the Rhone Valley along the river's east bank when a column from Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's advancing army fell upon them and in a series of encounters killed untold hundreds, a headquarters announcement said.

It was estimated 15,000 of the battered German 19th Army have been eliminated. This defeated German force included elements of the German 11th Panzer and 198th Infantry divisions, which had been reinforced by scattered elements of three other enemy infantry divisions.

Airmen Hamper Flight

The loss of this force, which was announced simultaneously with the loss of the German 242nd and 244th divisions at Marseilles and Toulon means at least 50,000 German front-line soldiers have been eliminated.

Hampering the Nazis in their flight up the Rhone has been the work of the Allied air force, cutting bridges from underneath them and making withdrawals both hazardous and costly. The chances of the Nazis to pull east and north of Valence, 28 miles north of Mon-

Nazis Trapped In Flight Up Rhone Valley

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—More than half of all German soldiers garrisoning southern France prior to the Allied landings are believed to have been killed, wounded or captured in less than two weeks, and today the tattered remnants were fighting a frantic battle in the Rhone Valley to escape a trap.

American troops have reached the Rhone valley north of Montelimar, 100 airline miles north of Marseille, after a march of 200 miles in two days, and have cut off the line of retreat of the German 11th Armored Division and other troops to the south, field dispatches announced today.

At least 50,000 enemy front-line troops were estimated to have been knocked out of the war in the invasion of southern France to date.

telimar, were diminishing with each day's fighting.

The Germans were known to have been in the Montelimar area almost a week ago. The town itself is in the dead center of the Rhone Valley, but the terrain from there to the east rises gradually into rugged Alpine country.

One Escape Route

If the Germans have enough speed left to outstep Patch's forward columns and they can find a way to keep the Allied air force from slashing their communications too severely, their one chance of withdrawal appears to lie beyond Lyon through the flat country north of Geneva via Bescancon and Mulhouse. This Allied drive them out at the German border.

While strong forces of bombers assaulted the heavily manned enemy coastal batteries on the fortified island of Ratonneau, which lies west of Marseille, French infantry reported they had all but eliminated Nazi resistance in the great maritime port. All opposition was confined exclusively to he harbor area.

On the eastern flank of the bridgehead Allied forces have reached the Var river and have spread out along its banks. The Var's mouth is only four miles from the great Riviera playground resort of Nice.

For the 15th consecutive day Allied ground forces were favored by clear skies and warm weather.

Driven To Waterfront

An assault by French troops drove the Germans to the Marseille water front, from which they shelled the city at intervals. The line was held by a force estimated at 2,000 to 3,000 men, whose isolated position doomed them to eventual defeat.

Allied headquarters remained silent on the progress of doughboys driving up the Rhone river and advancing from Grenoble.

(Reports from Switzerland received in London said American columns were rolling along the Swiss border from Perly, three miles south of Geneva, and were within 170 miles of the American armies in northern France at Troyes.)

(An Algiers broadcast said French Forces of the Interior had liberated Vichy, French collaborationist capital, but gave no details.)

Unable To Use Base

Use of Toulon naval base was denied the Allies by enemy units retreating to a peninsula dominating the harbor.

An indication of weakening enemy resistance was seen in the surrender of 1,000 Germans north of Grenoble. Allied headquarters said the Nazis threw down their arms and marched over to the American side when their commander ordered them to attack.

The total of prisoners taken in southern France rose to 23,000.

American Mitchells made successful attacks on German gun positions on the islands of Pomegues and Ratonneau in Marseille harbor.

Post-War Ambition

Before the war the commander of Butler's Task Force" was identified with park planning at Washington, D. C.

During the initial phase of the invasion he took time off to remark:

"My big ambition after the war is to return to San Francisco, park my feet on a window sill and watch the ships sail out of the Golden Gate."

MARSEILLE FALLS AFTER 6-DAY FIGHT

Nazi Garrison Surrenders After Lingering Battle, 5,000 Prisoners Taken.

MARSEILLE, France, Aug. 28.—(AP) Six days after the army officially announced occupation of this second largest city in France the last German garrison laid down its arms today and surrendered.

The pocket of Germans had been holding out in fortifications along the sea front and kept much of the port a no-man's land for nearly a week even though the Allies claimed it.

French authorities announced a bag of some 5,000 prisoners, including a Gen. Schaeffer, commander of the 242 infantry division, had been rounded up today as the Nazis relinquished their last foothold in this vitally needed seaport.

The French said 17,000 prisoners were taken during the battle for possession of Marseille, among them three German generals.

Marseille became a city of hysterical happiness and of revenge on friends of the Nazis immediately after the surrender was finally negotiated today after two overnight conferences.

After the last one, which ended at 7 a. m., the Germans began pouring from Forts St. Jean and St. Nicolas, commanding the entrance to the Vieux port, and from other strong points in the defense line they had set up along the waterfront. Offficers of the surrendered garrison rode out in their own cars.

The terms were unconditional surrender and the French insisted the Germans turn over the plans of mine fields in the harbor. The harbor itself was considerably damaged with many ships sunk.

There still was some machinegun fire along the waterfront this evening but French troops said it was from civilians who roamed the streets carrying firearms. Waterfront streets also are heavily mined and traffic in that area has been banned.

POLES CROSS ARZILLA RIVER

Drive To Adriatic Port Of Fano, 5 Miles From Pesaro

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—Polish troops have punched a path through enemy strongholds behind the Metauro river and have fought on across the Arzilla, while the Nazi forces are withdrawing into their Gothic Line defenses for a last-ditch stand in northern Italy, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Poles of the Eighth Army encountered stubborn resistance in crossing the Arzilla, which empties into the Adriatic Sea a mile northwest of Fano, but the little Adriatic port was found clear of the enemy.

Only 20 Miles From Rimini

The important port of Pesaro is now within five miles of the Poles, and Rimini, at the southern edge of the broad Po Valley, is slightly more than 20 miles above their advanced positions.

Meanwhile, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, in welcoming elements of the 92d Infantry Division, a Negro combat unit, declared "the German is wobbling on his last legs, with Allied forces in France and Russia closing in on him, and we are ready again to bloody his nose here."

Fifth Army Bags 47,000 Prisoners

The commander asserted that the Fifth Army had captured more than 47,000 of the enemy, killed and wounded several times that number, and destroyed 10 to 15 German divisions in Italy.

The German withdrawal from the Metauro line in the Adriatic sector was accomplished only after heavy losses, a prisoner from the veteran Nazi Fourth Parachute Division reported. He said that orders from his unit's retreat at first could not be carried out because of the artillery barrage laid down by the Allies.

Other Eighth Army units farther inland crossed the Maggiore river in the mountains and captured Fossombrone, on the lateral road to Fano, while north and east of Florence the Nazi retreat into the Gothic Line continued.

Poles Smash Across Arzilla River In Italy

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—Attacking fiercely against German forces withdrawing slowly into their Gothic Line defenses for a last-ditch defense of northern Italy, Polish troops have punched a path through Nazi strongholds behind the Metauro river and have fought on across the Arzilla, Allied headquarters announced today.

The advances placed Eighth Army units in the Adriatic sector within five miles of the important port of Pesaro and only a little more than 20 miles from Rimini at the southern edge of the Po Valley.

Abandoned By Foe

The little Adriatic port of Fano was found clear of the enemy as the Germans scrambled to get out of the way of the Poles. The latter crossed the Arzilla river, which empties into the Adriatic a mile northwest of Fano, only after a stubborn fight, however.

A prisoner from the veteran Nazi Fourth Parachute Division—one of three German divisions recently reported in action on the Adriatic sector—said orders for his unit's retreat from the Metauro Line could not be carried out because of the terrific Allied artillery barrage.

The withdrawal finally was effected only after heavy losses, the captive added.

Maggiore Crossed

Substantial gains were made by Eighth Army troops further inland where Allied forces crossed the Maggiore river in the mountains and captured Fossombrone on the main lateral road to Fano.

Churchill Denies To Italy Full Ally Right In Peace

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill in a farewell message to the Italian people released today declared his hope that a "free and progressive" Italy will take her place among the leading nations of Europe, but indicated she cannot expect to sit as a full ally at the peace table at the end of the war, which he said "may not be so far off as was formerly expected."

He announced that he was directing British representatives on international bodies to "do their utmost" to correct Italian hardships, and that "large new Italian forces will soon join the Allied armies."

Backs UNRRA For Italy

His reference to international bodies was interpreted as meaning that he supports the application to Italy of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration. The UNRRA will make a report on the Italian situation at a Montreal conference in September.

Churchill, who left Rome last Wednesday, said "I am sure those efforts (at relief) will be warmly supported by our Allies."

The Prime Minister declared that "there is one gift which certainly will be given to Italy when normal conditions are restored—the priceless gift of freedom." But in emphasizing he felt that the Italian people were responsible for the Fascist regime he apparently indicated she could not be accepted as a full ally.

Can't Forget Mussolini's Attack

"Naturally we cannot forget the circumstances of Mussolini's attack on France and Great Britain when we were at our weakest and people thought that Great Britain would sink forever—which in fact she has not done," he said.

"When a nation has allowed itself to fall into a tyrannical regime it cannot be absolved from the faults due to the guilt of that regime. . . ."

Churchill, who during his visit conferred with Pope Pius XII, Premier Ivanoe Bonomi, Marshal Pietro Badoglio and Crown Prince Umberto, added that "in the main, speaking for the British—though the other victorious Allies would have to have a say in this—I believe that the British nation will be happy to see the day when Italy, once again free and progressive, takes a place among all peace-loving nations."

Must Remove "Foul German Taint"

Churchill said the first duty was "to purge the soil of Italy from the foul German taint," and added:

"After this has been done and the power of Hitlerism is broken forever, the responsibility will lie on Italy to make sure that no similar fate deprives her of the liberties she will gain at the end of this hard road of error and suffering."

Asserting that "true unity" will be needed if Italy is to resume her place among the leading nations of Europe, Churchill said: "Political excitement and the clash of many parties will not achieve these simple joys and rights which the mass of people so desire."

Tests For Freedom

"There are one or two quite simple practical tests by which it (freedom) can be known in the modern world in peace conditions."

These, he said, were as follows:

"Is there a right to free expression of opinion and of opposition and criticism of the government of the day?

"Have the people the right to turn out a government of which they disapprove and are Constitutional means provided by which they can make their will apparent?

"Are there courts of justice free from interference by the executive, free from all threats of mob violence and all associations with any particular political parties? Will all these courts administer open and well-established laws which are associated in the human mind with broad principles of decency and justice?

Fair Play For All Required

"Will there be fair play for the poor as well as the rich; the private person as well as the government official? Will the rights of the individual, subject to his duties to the state, be maintained and asserted and exalted?

"Is the ordinary peasant or workman earning his living by his daily toil and striving to bring up his family, free from fear that some grim police organization under the control of a single party, like the Gestapo, started by Nazi and Fascist parties, will tap him on the shoulder and pick him off without fair or open trial to bondage or ill treatment?

"These are some of the title deeds," the Prime Minister said, "on which a new Italy could be founded."

Nazis Reported Abandoning Italy

On the Italian Frontier, Aug. 28 (AP)—Frontier reports tonight said German troops were withdrawing from Piedmont, Liguria and Emilia provinces and falling back toward the Alps and the Brenner Pass, leaving behind Mussolini's Fascist forces to cope with Partisan onslaughts and advancing Allied forces.

Abandonment of Emilia would indicate a withdrawal from the Gothic line fortifications, since this province embraces part of the Apennine Mountains in which they are anchored.

[Coastal Liguria includes the port of Genoa, and the big manufacturing center of Turin is in Piedmont. Both are threatened by the invasion of southern France which has branched out eastward toward the western border of Italy.

[The British radio quoted a communique from Italian Partisan headquarters saying, "open civil war has broken out between the Partisans and Neo-Fascists all over northern Italy."]

'Germans On Last Legs'

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—"The German is wobbling on his last legs, with Allied forces in France and Russia closing in on him and we are ready again to bloody his nose here," Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark declared today in welcoming elements of the 92nd Infantry Division, a Negro combat unit, to his Fifth Army in Italy.

The commander asserted that the Fifth Army had captured more than 47,000 of the enemy, killed and wounded several times that number and destroyed 10 to 15 German divisions.

The first awards of the combat infantry badge to Negroes in the Italian theater were made by Clark to staff Sergeant Paul Wilson, of Youngstown, Ohio, and Sergt. Nolan Reed, of St. Louis.

Bloomfield Ace Downs 2 More Nazis

Rome, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Lieut. Michael Drezas of Bloomfeild, N. J., has jumped into fifth place among American aces in the Mediterranean area by shooting down his eleventh and twelfth planes. His latest bags were two Messerschmitt 109s which were downed over Czecho-Slovakia.

Polish Liberation Head Urges Mikolajczyk As New Premier

AUG 29 1944

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 28 (AP)—Edward Boleslaw Osubka-Morawski, president of the Polish National Committee of Liberation, urged today that Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Premier of the exiled Polish regime in London, become Premier of a provisional Polish government "to hasten unification of our nation."

He disclosed that the national committee (whose organization recently was announced from Moscow) had proposed Mikolajczyk for premier of a unified government during the London Poles' mission to Moscow early in August, and also had offered places in the government to three other members of the Polish exile government.

No Word As Yet

He said Mikolajczyk had delayed a decision until he could consult his colleagues in London but had sent no word as yet on when he might meet with the committee again.

Osubka-Morawski said Mikolajczyk had expressed reluctance to abandon the 1935 constitution and that it was retained by the Emigre leaders in France in 1939 at the insistence of American diplomats there.

"Although we appreciate the United States very much we wouldn't allow an Ambassador to dictate which constitution we should have," Osubka-Morawski said in addressing the first English and American correspondents to visit Free Poland.

He said the question of Lwow and others arising from the new Soviet-Polish frontier would be "settled in friendship" with voluntary population transfers probable.

Outlines Program

This, said Osubka-Morawski, is the Lubin Goverment's program:

1. Breakup of all large estates except those owned by the Catholic church.

2. Encourage reopening of private factories and businesses.

3. Seek relief supplies through the UNRRA, especially medicines, shoes and textiles, but not food, which is temporarily adequate.

4. Reorganize currency now based mainly on notes printed by the German-ruled general government.

5. Lay the groundwork for a renewed State control and management of such industries as armaments which existed prior to 1939.

"German labor and capital must be requisitioned to repair the devastation of Poland," he added.

SAYS NAZIS STRIVE TO WIPE OUT POLES

AUG 29 1944

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—Polish Ambassador Jan Ciechanowski formally advised the American Government today that the German Army apparently is trying to exterminate the entire civilian population of Warsaw.

Similar information, he said, has been given to the British Government and the Vatican and released in other capitals in an effort to arouse pressure so strong that the Germans will be swayed from their plans. Mr. Ciechanowski suggested that these other governments announce reprisals and immediately classify the German perpetrators of any such atrocity as war criminals.

Extermination of the Polish capital's civilian population, Ambassador Ciechanowski said, has been undertaken because the campaign of the Polish home Army inside Warsaw has been so successful that whole sections of the city are in Polish hands.

As an example of the extermination policy, the Ambassador said, reports from the Polish underground related that more than 150,000 civilians had been placed in a camp southwest of Warsaw and deprived of food and water.

A London dispatch received here today by Polish Telegraph Agency said that the Germans have executed more than 3,000 Poles captured in the uprising in Warsaw, which has been continuing with unabated violence since August 1. The news was broadcast by the Polish underground radio in Warsaw, which placed all executions within the past ten days, immediately following the Germans "surrender or die" ultimatum.

Sumatra Bombed.

Colombo, Ceylon, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Another blow against Japanese installations on the island of Sumatra—the fourth since its occupation by the enemy—has been made by Allied carrier-borne aircraft with heavy support of the far-ranging Eastern fleet, it was announced yesterday.

The prime target of the latest raid, made last Thursday, was the great cement manufacturing plant at Indaroeng, near Padang, on the island's west coast. Flames and smoke rose 1,000 feet from the plant after large numbers of heavy bombs were dropped.

The planes also plastered Padang's port of Emmahaven and the airfields of Padang. Two merchant vessels at Emmahaven were hit and left burning. Warehouses, a coaling jetty and a rail yard were heavily damaged.

British Units 100 Miles Below Jap Burma Line

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 28 (AP) — British and Indian jungle raiders are now operating 100 miles behind the Japanese lines in Burma below Tiddim, toward which enemy forces retreating from India now are withdrawing, Allied headquarters announced today.

The raiders have been setting ambushes, destroying Japanese motor convoys and generally chopping up the enemy's communications, the announcement said.

Ambushes were reported near Falam and Haka, well south of Tiddim, and near Tongzang, just north of Tiddim, where 36 Japanese were slain while fording the Manipur river.

CHINESE MENACE JAP SUPPLY LINE

Occupy Siang River Town North Of Hengyang

Chungking, Aug. 28 (AP)—Chinese forces have posed a new threat to the Siang river supply line of the Japanese in Hunan province in successes which might frustrate the Japanese aim of conquering the whole Canton-Hankow rail route across China, the high command said tonight.

The Chinese yesterday occupied Chuting on the Siang and the railway, 45 miles north of the enemy-held junction of Hengyang, and the day before reached Changtien, a rail and river town a few miles north. They also surrounded a small enemy-held village still farther north, the high command asserted.

It was believed the Chinese might be putting extra effort into smashing the Japanese plan of conquest of the 1,000 miles of railway from north to south, in anticipation of an early large-scale American move.

Battle East Of Yungfeng

Severe fighting has developed east of Yungfeng, 45 miles northwest of Hengyang, where an enemy column was attempting to drive south and envelop the Chinese who are menacing their hold on Hengyang.

Planes of the United States 14th Air Force bombed and strafed Japanese supply lines along the river throughout the province, and also reached out again to the Shanghai area for the battering storage areas at Woosung, at the mouth of the Whangpoo river, 13 miles from Shanghai.

The Japanese are threatening Lishui, in Chekiang province, regarded as a potential base for the bombing of Japan, the high command disclosed. The town is 30 miles south of Wuyi, from which the enemy based his Chekiang drive, and Japanese forces are only six miles from Lishui.

Shanghai Area Hit Again By Yanks

AUG 29 1944

Chungking, Aug. 28 (AP) — Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters confirmed today a fresh attack by American Liberators on the vicinity of Shanghai, and said storage areas at the mouth of the Whangpoo were blasted.

Woosung, important Japanese storage area, is at the mouth of the river, 13 miles from Shanghai.

This was the second attack on the Shanghai region by planes of the United States 14th Air Force under Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault. Several weeks ago Liberators blasted the former Italian luxury liner Conte Verde. The ship had been scuttled by its crew the day Italy surrendered, but was repaired and refloated by the Japanese.

Stilwell's headquarters also reported a raid on Amoy harbor off Fukien province on the China east coast, and extensive attacks on Japanese positions in Hunan province, scene of current bitter fighting.

Four Jap Freighters Bombed Off Celebes

AUG 29 1944

General Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Tuesday, Aug. 29 (AP). Four Japanese freighters were destroyed or damaged in another Allied air raid on Celebes, headquarters announced today.

The four merchantmen, which were hit by navy patrol bombers off Manado, Celebes, Sunday, averaged 1,000 tons.

In another aerial assault four parked Japanese planes were destroyed at Liang airdrome, Amboina.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur Saturday announced a heavy mastheight assault on shipping off Manado, during which seven freighter-transport and a light cruiser were destroyed or severly damaged. This port is part of the Philippines-Celebes-Cerm arc which the general has announced is the maximum point in this area to where heavy Japanese shipping now ventures.

The rhythm of the aerial pounding which is softening some bases and keeping bypassed positions neutralized was at higher pitch. This was due partly to use of a new airfield 200 miles closer to the Philippines.

Location of the new field, on Middleburg island off Sansapor at the northwest tip of Dutch New Guinea, was disclosed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Monday communique. The island, captured by his ground forces July 30, is within 600 miles of Mindanao.

MacArthur reported air actions against Davao in the Philippines, Halmahera, Celebes, Amboina, Timor and other enemy-held islands north of Australia.

on Middelburg Island, off Sansapor, at the northwest tip of Dutch New Guinea.

Disclosure of the new airstrip came today in Gen. Douglas MacArthur's announcement of a night raid on Middelburg by an enemy plane. Damage was slight.

Middleburg, taken July 30, is within 600 miles of Mindanao.

Ground action flared east and southwest of Sansapor. American patrols, interceding units of Japan's trapped Second Army attempting to escape westward from Manokwari, killed 320 enemy troops and captured 199.

A summary of the principal aerial strikes:

IWO JIMA—Intense anti-aircraft fire, strong fighter interception; five Japanese planes shot down, two damaged.

PALAU—Docks set afire, three planes destroyed; 35-minute battle with Zeros, one Liberator shot down.

TRUK—Sixty-four tons of bombs; one plane damaged.

6,000-Ton Ship Hit

MOLUCCAS—Ceram and Amboina, 151 tons of bombs; small freighter left in flames off Halmahera; small freighter sunk off Kai Islands; 6,000-ton ship destroyed or severely damaged near Boeroe.

CELEBES—Two sailing vessels and lugger damaged.

Rota, Pagan and Agiguan in the Marianas, Yap, Woleai and Ponape in the Carolines also were attacked.

Yanks Intensify Air Blows On Jap Bases

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 28 (AP)—Hitching its bases ever closer to Tokyo, Allied air power in the Pacific is heightening the tempo of its assault.

Reported over the week end were some of the heaviest sustained bombing raids yet conducted simultaneously on a wide range of targets in the Nimitz-MacArthur theaters—89 tons of bombs on Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands, 750 miles south of Tokyo; 142 tons on Palau and more than 150 tons on the Moluccas.

In these attacks eight small Japanese craft were sunk or damaged and 11 enemy planes destroyed or damaged.

New Airfield Finished

Supplementing airdromes in the Marianas is a newly completed field place which were weren't." He cited the Aitape campaign where the Japanese, forced to attack frontally, lost at least 8,064 killed, 10,000 estimated wounded. American losses were 285 killed, 998 wounded, 23 missing.

Two other points in the strategy are using the jungle as an ally and confusing the enemy as to the next objective. The observer said air attacks and landing parties convinced the Japanese that Yank forces would land at Wewak and Madang, on New Guinea's north coast. The Nipponese rushed forces to that sector from Hollandia. Then the Americans invaded Hollandia last April at virtually no cost in manpower.

AUG 29 1944

Some 60,000 Japanese were cut off in the Wewak area.

The observer asserted, as he reviewed the Aitape campaign, "direct assault is expensive. Selection of where to fight may be all important. In our land operations we selected the place for battle and forced the Japs to attack us. As a result the enemy paid a bitter price that goes with frontal assault. War is nothing more than cookkeeping in flesh and blood."

Liberation Of Philippines At Small Cost Predicted

Reconquest of Philippines Seen With Comparatively Few Losses

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 28 — (AP) A military observer at Allied Southwest Pacific headquarters expressed the opinion today that the Philippines can be retaken with comparatively small casualties if Gen. Douglas MacArthur's New Guinea strategy is followed.

The observer pictured as a new concept in warfare the General's military genius in "hitting the Jap where he wasn't, luring him some Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 28 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur can liberate the Philippines at a comparatively small cost in American dead and wounded by following the strategy he employed in New Guinea and hitting the Japanese at their weakest points, a military observer said here today.

"Selection of these points is where MacArthur exhibits the masterly generalship of his military genius," this officer said.

He asserted that the strategy used in the New Guinea campaign not only had been successful but had introduced a new concept into the art of war. Above all else, it proved least costly in blood and effort. It relied upon brains rather than brawn.

The observer commented that the MacArthur strategy, as demonstrated in the Hollandia-Aitape campaigns, consists simply of "hitting the Jap where he wasn't, luring him some place which we weren't," and using the jungle as an ally instead of fighting it.

The selection of where to fight may be all important, he commented. In the Aitape campaign, he noted, "we forced the Japs to attack us and as a result they paid the bitter price that goes with a frontal assault." Two Japanese divisions attacked a single American division at Aitape, he continued. Japanese losses were at least 8,064 dead and an estimated 10,000 wounded, against 285 Americans killed, 23 missing and 998 wounded.

KURILE ISLAND RAIDED TWICE

Navy Venturas, Army Liberators Pound Onnekotan

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 28 (AP)—A two-ply raid by American warplanes Saturday against Onnekotan Island, in the northern Kuriles and attacks on Japanese bases in the Marianas and in the Central Pacific were announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimtiz.

Onnekotan, near the far end of the Kurile chain, was hit first by navay Venturas. They dropped their bombs on buildings and small craft off shore.

Liberators of the 11th Army Air Force, based in the Aleutians, made the second attack. They pounded warehouse facilities and piers, starting fires. All planes returned from the two attacks.

Sank Patrol Vessel

On the previous day, two 11th AAF medium bombers sank an enemy patrol vessel near Paramushiro, the island north of Onnekota.

Pagan and Alamagan islands, about 1,250 miles south of Tokyo in the Marianas, also were hit Saturday.

Raids into the western Carolines, fell on Yap and near-by Woleai. Fires were started on Woleai.

Runways and gun emplacements on Nauru, were bombed Friday and Saturday. On the same days navy and marine planes smacked isolated Japanese in the Marshall Islands.

Pacific Carrier Group Sets Record Jap Toll

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 28 (AP)—Commander David McCampbell, of West Palm Beach, Fla., downed seven Japanese planes on June 18 as his carrier group mowed out 63 for an official one-day record, the navy announced today.

McCampbell, flying a Hellcat, knocked down his Japanese planes as the group downed 4 3out of the 80 which streaked in to attack the American task force. McCampbell got two more in further hunting that afternoon.

Charges Japs Executed Native Group On Guam

Guam, Aug. 13 (AP—Delayed). Japanese militarists have added another to their list of atrocities—the mass execution of natives on this island.

In one isolated spot, 43 decapitated bodies were found. Evidently they were killed so they could not betray their temporary masters to the Americans.

Commander Roger E. Perry, of San Francisco, senior civil affairs officer here, said today most of the victims were Chamorro natives. All but one of the victims were from the Yona concentration camp.

CORTESI RESUMES JOB IN ARGENTINA

Buenos Aires, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Arnaldo Cortesi resumed his duties as New York Times correspondent today after spending yesterday at police headquarters because the authorities had questioned the accuracy of his report of an address made by Vice-President Juan Peron before a private session of the Stock Exchange.

Two policemen, acting under orders of the Minister of the Interior, called at Mr. Cortesi's apartment at 7:30 A. M. yesterday while he still was in bed. One waited while he bathed, dressed and breakfasted, then took him to the police station in a taxi for which Mr. Cortesi paid.

Once there, Mr. Cortesi was booked and notified that he was being held incommunicado at the disposition of the executive authorities. The American Consul was not permitted to see him, but was allowed to send a message to him and he was permitted to send a reply.

The correspondent spent the day in a private office at the police station. In the evening he was visited by Lieut. Jorge Grassi, an official of the Department of Press and Propaganda, who discussed the offending dispatch. Soon afterward Mr. Cortesi was released. He said he had been treated courteously at all times.

Officials said they specifically objected to a statemtn on Mr. Cortesi's story that Mr. Peron had expressed the Government's intention of "ruthlessly" eliminating opposition to its social program. Correspondents were not given access to the full record of the meeting.

Argentina Fills Justice Post

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 28 (AP)—Foreign Minister Gen. Orlando L. Peluffo was appointed Acting Minister of Justice and Public Instruction for Argentina today, succeeding Alberto Baldrich, resigned.

Fritz Mandl Denies Argentine Connectoin

Buenos Aires, Aug. 28 (AP)—Fritz Mandl, former Austrian munitions magnate, declared today he had no connectio with the Argentine Government and said his inclusion this week in the United Nations blacklist came as "a fantastic surprise."

The former husband of actress Hedy Lamar asserted that statements made in unofficial quarters that he was one of the mainsprings of Argentina's armaments program were untrue.

"No ne," he said "is more interested in an Allied victory than I—even if only for my property in Austria, which is greater than my investment in Argantina."

Lord Keyes Sees War's End By Early Winter

Montreal, Aug. 28 (AP)—Lord Keyes, admiral of the fleet, said today he believed the European war would be ended by early winter and that the Japanese campaign would end "much sooner than some people think."

The British admiral, hero of the blocking of Zeebrugge in the first World War, addressed the Canadian Club.

Goering's Paper Calls Appetite "Bad Taste"

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's newspaper, the Essener National Zeitung, said in an article reported today to the Office of War Information:

"It must be pronounced bad taste to publicly eat a meal which whose origin is generally suspicious even if nothing illegal can be proved.

"And now, when cigarettes and cigars have scarcity value, it cannot be considered an expression of the people's community feeling when men are seen strutting along with fat cigars."

The eating of fresh fruit in public, now that fruit is "also very scarce," also was cited as bad taste.

Goering And Wife Reported Held

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Stockholm correspondent of Time magazine reported today that Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and his wife were under house arrest in Germany.

In a broadcast over the Blue network the correspondent, John Scott, said Goering had argued in favor of hushing up the attempt on Hitler's life last month in order to avoid an army scandal, but that Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief, had overruled him. Hitler, enraged, was said then to have ordered Goering's arrest.

DR. CARREL OUT OF VICHY POST

His Work Held "Notorious For Detrimental Action"

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—Dr. Alexis Carrel, internationally renowned surgeon and biologist, who collaborated with Charles A. Lindbergh in the invention of a mechanical heart, has been dismissed from his post as director of the Vichy Government's Foundation for the Study of Human Relations, the Paris radio said tonight.

The broadcast asserted the foundation had been "notorious for its actions detrimental to the French nation."

Dr. Carrel, 71 years old, is a native Frenchman who retained his citizenship despite many years spent in the United States.

Came To U. S. In 1905

He began his experimental research work soon after receiving his medical degree at the University of Lyon in 1900. In 1905 he brought his research activities to the University of Chicago and the following year joined the staff of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in New York, becoming a member in 1912.

Except for the first World War, when he returned to his native land to serve as a surgeon in the French army, he continued actively with the Rockefeller Institute until 1939, when he was appointed a member emeritus.

He developed a new method for suturing blood vessels which made it possible to perform transfusions safely and to transplant arteries, veins and organs.

Received Nobel Prize In 1912

For this work he reached the Nobel prize for physiology and medicine in 1912 and in later years received many other honors from various countries.

These studies led him into an investigation of the condition of tissues living actively outside the organism, but this was interrupted by his entry into the French army. However, during that war he developed the Carrel-Dakin treatment of wounds by intermittent irrigation, by means of which many lives were saved and amputations avoided.

Worked With Lindbergh

His work with Lindbergh on construction of a perfusion pump for keeping organs alive outside the body began in 1937 and together they wrote a book, "The Culture of Organs," in 1938.

Much of this research was done in France and at Lindbergh's estate on St. Gilda's Island, in the English Channel.

When war came to France in 1939, his country called upon him again for service and he undertook various tasks. In 1941 he undertook to direct the struggle against malnutrition in unoccupied France and later that year the Vichy Government established the Carrel Foundation for the Study of Human Problems.

CARREL SUSPENDED

The Paris radio said today that Dr. Alexis Carrel, the biologist, has been "suspended from all his functions."

The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said that Dr. Carrel's "anti-national activity has been notorious."

ARMY CASUALTIES

Washington, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—The War Department announced today the names of 1,728 casualties in the Asiatic, Central Pacific, European, Mediterranean and Southwest Pacific war areas.

NAVY CASUALTIES

The Navy Department announced today the names of 372 casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard, which makes a total of 57,318 casualties reported by the Navy since December 7, 1941. Of this total, 23,326 are reported dead, 19,920 wounded, 9,606 missing, and 4,466 prisoners of war.

PHILLIPS' RESIGNATION IS CHARGED TO BRITISH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP) Senator Chandler (D-Ky.) asserted in the Senate today that British objections to a report on India by William Phillips led to the diplomat's recent resignation as political adviser to General Eisenhower. Chandler called upon President Roosevelt to submit to the Senate "a full report on conditions in India."

A state department spokesman earlier had denied that the British government had asked for Phillips' recall from London, and reiterated that Phillips was coming home for personal reasons.

"The statement is being made in some British quarters that what happens in India is none of our business, but I repudiate that statement," said Chandler, adding that conditions there have a bearing on the war with Japan.

Chandler said the British had declared Phillips "persona non grata" in London and in India because he submitted to President Roosevelt a report critical of British policy in India. Phillips was in India as personal representative of the President with the rank of ambassador.

"If the British are going to be able to force the recall of our diplomats merely because they submit truthful reports, I think we ought to know about it," Chandler said.

KRUG PROMISES TO END CONFLICT WITHIN THE WPB

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP) J. A. Krug, the War Production board's new boss, assured Senate investigators today that he will put an end to conflict within that agency if he has to fire all those responsible.

While he was before the committee Sidney J. Weinberg resigned as a vice chairman of WPB with the assertion that the explosion which has blown apart the agency's high command was the work of "demagogic intriguers." He predicted that Krug will "rout the intriguers" and unite WPB into one team.

Krug, before the Senate War Investigating committee, promised just that.

"They are all going to be in one group or they are not going to work here," he said.

Krug's remarks were prompted by questioning from Senator Ferguson (R-Mich.) about "the conflict in the WPB between the Wilson group and the Nelson group."

Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman, recently resigned because of what he called unjust attacks by aides of Chairman Donald M. Nelson. The chairman has gone to China on a presidential mission with his future in WPB a question. Krug, called back from an overseas assignment as a Navy lieutenant commander, was appointed by President Roosevelt to run WPB in Nelson's absence.

Krug said he is in complete accord with Nelson's plan for a gradual resumption of civilian output in non-critical labor areas.

Weinberg, telling reporters about his resignation, would not say whom he had in mind as "intriguers" but said they were on the "white collar ivory tower" level. He wouldn't call them the "underground" of the WPB, he said, for fear of dignifying them, but offered to settle for "termites."

He called Wilson "one of the great production men of this country," and said Nelson deserved great credit for the country's war production record. He said there is no real issue of big business vs. little business.

Weinberg, a New York investment banker, returned to the WPB last June as vice chairman in charge of "special problems." These problems, it developed, consisted chiefly of attempting to restore harmony in the agency. He said his resignation had no connection with recent internal strife, and that it had been written August 14. Nelson asked him to withhold it for awhile and he presented it to Krug today.

30. 24 — 18337

Weinberg explained that he returned to the agency with the understanding that he would remain only for a "limited time."

World-Security Talks Center On 2 Ideas

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—Soviet, American and British delegates to the Dumbarton Oaks security conference worked today toward agreement—possibly a three-way compromise—on the most effective way to organize force for suppressing future aggressor nations.

As the historic preliminary talks went into their second week, it was learned that two principal ideas have been developed thus far. One is a Russian proposal for an international air corps. The Russian delegation is understood not to be irrevocably committed to creation of such a corps, but is backing it strongly with the argument that it would provide a ready means of striking in any part of the world where trouble threatened.

Americans Suggest Plan

The American delegation has suggested a plan by which each nation would commit at least a part of its national forces, including air and naval, to be used in accordance with the orders of the international security organization, but at the direction of the national governments.

This American plan is understood to be tied in with a general principle that development of the international organization can best be effected along lines of regional responsibility for keeping the peace. By this plan each country agreeing to use force when called upon would expect to do so primarily in that part of the world in which its major national interests lie.

Regional Bodies Suggested

There has also been some talk of organizing regional international bodies, subordinate to the world security agency, which would function somewhat in the manner of the Pan-American Union in this hemisphere.

So far these is understood to have been agreement of views among the three delegations on the need for forces to be available for international police work in such strength that no threatening aggressor would be able to match them.

There is also general agreement. It is reported on the necessity of setting up a military organization under the world agency which would serve about the same purpose as that of the British-American combined chiefs of staff board, now directing the war under general authorizations given by the British and American governments.

Verbal Clashes Break Out During House PAC Hearing

AUG 29 1944

Hillman Defends C.I.O. Committee's Political Expenditures.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP) A hot exchange broke out today between Rep. Church (R-Ill.) and Sidney Hillman during a House committee hearing at which Hillman reported his C.I.O. Political Action committee had spent $371,086, including $67,320 in primaries and state elections.

Church set off the clash by declaring that the C.I.O.'s political plan, directed by Hillman, is "Communistic-engineered from the top down" with local unions having no say in it.

Hillman Fights Back

"Would you say duPont's contribution of $186,000 to the Republicans and Pew's of $108,000 came from the bottom up?" Hillman retorted, adding:

"You're trying to prejudice the public against us. It's a below the belt campaign. I'll put my record of fighting Communism against yours any time. I'm opposed to Communism because I'm opposed to all totalitarianism—even in industry."

As Hillman appeared before the House group investigating campaign expenditures, Senator Bridges (R-N.H.) told the Senate that a magazine article by Hillman entitled "The Truth About the PAC" only covered up the "real truth" that the PAC is an "enormous danger" to labor interests.

Bridges said the New Republic, which published the article, has refused to give Senator Butler (R-Neb.) the same space for a reply. Butler's proposed reply, Hillman's article and an exchange of letters between Butler and Bruce Bliven, New Republic editor, were placed in the Congressional record by Bridges.

The exchange of correspondence showed that the magazine had declined to print an article of the same length as Hillman's but had offered to publish a communication of about 1,200 words. Bliven said in New York today that the magazine had advised Butler it could not print any article which it could not support editorially.

Supported Dewey

Hillman told the House investigators that while the C.I.O. backed the Roosevelt-Truman slate, it might support a Republican in any given campaign. In fact, he said, the C.I.O. contributed $5,000 in 1937 to the campaign of Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate, when he was running for district attorney in New York.

Asked by Rep. Brown (R-O.) why the PAC had changed its mind about Dewey, the PAC Chairman replied he was "satisfied" that Dewey is not equipped to act as president.

"There is no question of his character," Hillman added. "He might do even as governor when everybody's employed."

In testifying that the PAC spent $35,000 in Congressional primary races, Hillman told the committee that the organization had not spent anything on the contests in which Reps. Starnes of Alabama, Costello of California and Kleberg, all Democrats, were defeated.

Local C.I.O. labor groups, he conceded, may have lent financial aid in the campaigns. Taking note of reports that the C.I.O. had a hand in unseating the three, Hillman said his organization had been "credited" with the defeat of a number of reactionary candidates" but:

"We have no purge list, public or secret."

"We are not an appendage of either major political party . . . nor have we any desire to 'capture' either party," Hillman testified in an explanation of the C.I.O.-P.A.C. aims.

"We seek to influence thinking, the program and the choice of candidates."

Primary object, he said, is to "get out the vote" because "we know that when enough Americans vote, they will vote right; that their collective judgment will prove to be a sound judgment."

Says P.A.C. Non-Partisan

The PAC is non-partisan—there is nothing to prevent it from endorsing a Republican—Hillman insisted.

"We have a definite program and we are for any candidate who gets reasonably close to it," he said. The PAC is for the Roosevelt-Truman ticket, he added, and will not lend financial aid to the Democratic National committee.

Asked by Rep. Brown (R-Ohio) if the PAC will contribute to the G.O.P. committee, he said, "of course not." He asserted in the exchange that election of Thomas E. Dewey would be "a national catastrophe."

"You're not convincing me by that kind of talk that your organization is non-partisan," Brown retorted.

DENIES PROMPTING FROM WHITE HOUSE

McCloy Explains His Decision On Broadcasts To Troops

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—The army decision to let the Socialists broadcast to troops was canceled without any prompting from the White House, John J. McCloy, acting Secretary of War, said today.

The Socialist party claimed radio time equal to that given President Roosevelt's Bremerton (Wash.) speech, on the ground that the President's address was "political."

At first the request was granted, but later canceled. Still later it was announced that the armed forces radio service will establish a weekly schedule giving equal rebroadcast time to five political parties, including the Socialists.

Trying To "Lean Over Backwards"

The original decision was made by officers trying "to lean over backwards" in handling the touchy question of political broadcasts to soldiers, said McCloy. He added that while he approved that general attitude, he decided it would be better to seek a new and equitable formula for such broadcasts without reference to the President's address from Bremerton at the conclusion of his Pacific trip.

Col. Robert Cutler, coordinator of soldier voting, and Maj. Gen. F. H. Osborn, director of morale services, both assumed responsibility for the original decision, the Acting Secretary said in an interview.

He Reversed The Decision

That decision was not referred to the Secretary or other civilian officials, McCloy said. It was called to his attention by officials of the Secretary's and Under Secretary's office only after public announcement, he reported.

McCloy reversed the decision, holding the Bremerton address was not political. After he had made this decision, he said, but before it had been made public, a White House official called him for information, but made no effort to influence the action of the War Department.

House Advocates Rigid Economy In Postwar Federal Expenditures

AUG 29 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP) Strong bi-partisan support developed in the House today for demobilization and reconversion legislation shorn of liberal unemployment benefits and emphasizing rigid economy in postwar federal expenditures.

Following a Republican caucus, Rep. Knutson (R-Minn.), ranking minority member of the Ways and Means committee, reported there was "ample strength" to put over the committee's bill which leaves unemployment benefits entirely in the hands of the states. Floor debate begins tomorrow.

Rep. Mills (D-Ark.), a committee member, likewise predicted adoption of the bill, saying he had found "widespread support" among Democrats for the "committee's stand against large federal postwar commitments at this time."

"The issue," Knutson said, "is whether we are going to encourage individual initiative after the war or put a premium on idleness."

Advocates of expanded jobless benefits—with administration and labor backing—let it be known they would make a last ditch fight against the measure, as it stands now.

The way was cleared for a wide-open battle when the rules committee decided to allow unlimited presentation of amendments.

Rep. Celler (D-N.Y.) was ready with a substitute proposing unemployment compensation for 52 weeks at a maximum of $25 weekly, a boost in veterans benefits from $20 to $35 weekly, and many other liberal features.

The bill which goes before the House is the so-called "conservative" Senate-approved measure, from which the Ways and Means group ripped sections providing for retraining and reemployment for war workers, transportation back home or to new jobs, and an extension of jobless insurance to 3,500,000 federal employes at government expense.

The measure provides for a war mobilization and reconversion office, to coordinate contract terminations and surplus property disposal. It also provides for federal loans to state unemployment funds, and loans to states and political subdivisions to aid in planning for postwar public works.

CHINESE PEACE ENVOY ARRIVES IN WASHINGTON

AUG 29 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28—(AP) Dr. Wellington Koo, chief Chinese delegate to the Dumbarton Oaks security conference, arrived in Washington today stressing his country's determination to do its share for world peace.

Coming in by plane from New York, Dr. Koo was met at the National airport by a large crowd of British, Chinese and American officials.

Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., chairman of the American delegation, and Sir Alexander Cadogan, chairman of the British delegation, were among the raincoat-garbed crowd who greeted the visiting Chinese official. As he stepped off the plane an Army air forces band played the Chinese National anthem followed by the Star Spangled banner.

Herald Tribune Building In Paris Undamaged

New York, Aug. 28 (AP)—The New York Herald-Tribune said tonight its building and machinery in Paris were undamaged by the Germans during their occupation.

The last edition of the Paris edition of the paper was published on June 12, 1940, two days before the German invasion.

The building and plant has been offered to United States Army authorities in charge of publishing the service publications Yank and Stars and Stripes.

THRICE DECORATED

Washington, Aug. 28 (A. P.).—Award of three more high naval honors to Commander Charles O. Triefel, whose submarinew was credited with sinking thousands of tons of enemy shipping, was announced today by the Navy Department. Commander Triebel, a native of Peoria, Ill., received a Gold Star in lieu of a third Navy Cross, the Silver Star and a Gold Star in lieu of a second Silver Star. He is on duty with the Navy Department in Washington and lives at Falls Church, Va.

Other awards announced by the Navy included: Commodore Howard Adams Flanigan, born in New York city and whose wife lives there at 31 East 65th street, Legion of Merit for services as deputy chief of staff of commander, Twelfth Fleet, before and during the invasion of France in June.

Sergeant's Valor Brings Medal

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—Complete disregard of his personal safety to rescue three wounded comrades and then direct a tank against a troublesome Jap pillbox won the Congressional Medal of Honor for Staff Sergeant Jessie R. Drowley, of Luzerne, Mich.

The War Department announced today that the award was based on heroic actions during a battle on Bougainville last January.

Sergeant Drowley left a place of comparative safety to drag two wounded infantrymen of his company to cover and help in rescuing a third. Then, having located an enemy pillbox which was holding down the attacking echelon, he leaped atop a light tank and gave directions to its crew.

Continues Though Wounded

He was handed a submachine gun and magazines of tracer bullets, which he fired to direct the tank driver toward the enemy. A Jap bullet struck Drowley in the chest, knocking him off the tank, but he continued to fire. Just as the tank was able to pour its shots directly into the pillbox, another Jap bullet struck Drowley in the left eye, but he maintained his fire until the enemy position and one beyond it were destroyed by the tank.

Major Tex G. Baudouine, of Oak Park, Ill., executive officer of Drowley's battalion, said pillboxes had been delaying the unit's advance for some time. He said

Drowley was credited three Japanese during the ment.

Voluntary Action

Col. Joseph K. Bush, of Washington, D. C., regimental commander, recommending the nation's highest award for Drowley, said the sergeant's "brave action was entirely voluntary and he refused to be evacuated for treatment of his wounds until his mission was completed."

Drowley, 24, was a timber contractor before being inducted at Detroit April 1, 1941. Drowley was treated at Baxter General Hospital in Spokane and then at Gardiner General Hospital in Chicago.

Anzio Machine Gunner Gets Nation's Top Military Award

AUG 29 1944

Washington, Aug. 28 (AP)—A Connecticut machine gunner who beat off two German counterattacks and stuck by his gun to cover the withdrawal of his company even though his comrades thought he was dying has been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the War Department announced today.

He is 26-year-old Pfc. William J. Johnston, one-time apprentice plumber of Middletown, Conn., who is now recovering from wounds in Cushing General Hospital, Framingham, Mass. His wife and their year-old son live in Colchester, Connecticut.

It Happened At Anzio

The action in which Johnston won the nation's highest military decoration began before dawn last February 17 near Padiglione on the Anzio beachhead.

Before it was over two days later, Johnston had killed or wounded more than 30 Nazis. He had been captured and had escaped with valuable information on the disposition of enemy troops.

The Germans opened up on the morning of February 17 with a 30-minute artillery barrage against Johnston's company, part of the 45th Infantry Division. Then a wave of about 80 Germans swept toward the American lines.

But His Gun Halted Them

The riflemen in Johnston's company couldn't hit the Germans because of the darkness. But the deadly spray of his light machine gun halted them, dropped at least 25 German soldiers and forced the remainder to retreat.

Later in the day, two Germans worked their way so close to the American lines that Johnston couldn't bring his machine gun to bear on them. He killed one with his pistol, got a rifle from another soldier and killed the other.

That night the company dropped back. Johnston was the last man to leave. He kept an all-night vigil in a new position and the next day beat off the Germans again, killing or wounding seven.

Again Covers Withdrawal

The company, outflanked, was ordered still farther back during the afternoon of the 18th. Again Johnston elected to cover the withdrawal.

As the enemy began closing in, Johnston was seriously wounded by a shell fragment that struck him above the heart. Technical Sergeant Robert O. Alexander, Idabel, Okla., crawled to him, but decided that Johnston couldn't make it back to his company.

"So I grabbed him under the arms and helped him into a position behind the gun," Alexander related. "He said he was O. K., so I left."

He Didn't Stay Captured

A short time later, his comrades heard his machine gun chattering away again.

Johnston kept firing for about ten minutes and then tried to crawl to his platoon's new line. He ran into three German machine gunners who took him prisoner and placed him in a house previously occupied by Johnston's company.

The following morning Johnston discovered the Germans had departed, and made his way to American troops near by.

LONDON, TUESDAY, AUG. 29-(AP)-THE RAF CONTINUED ITS NIGHTLY ASSAULTS UPON GERMANY BY SENDING A FORCE OF MOSQUITO BOMBERS OVER ESSEN LAST NIGHT AFTER U.S.EIGHTH AIR FORCE FIGHTERS HAD SWARMED OVER FRANCE, BELGIUM AND HOLLAND YESTERDAY IN THEIR HEAVIEST ATTACKS UPON NAZI TROOPS AND COMMUNICATIONS SINCE D-DAY.

ESSEN, IN THE RUHR VALLEY, IS THE SITE OF THE FAMED KRUPP WORKS, WHICH EARLIER IN THE WAR WERE THE TARGET OF REPEATED RAIDS BY THE RAF'S HEAVY BOMBERS. A PRELIMINARY BRITISH ANNOUNCEMENT GAVE NO DETAILS ON LAST NIGHT'S ASSAULT.

SANDWICHED IN BETWEEN THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE'S DAYLIGHT FORAYS AND THE RAF'S OVERNIGHT OPERATIONS WERE A SERIES OF SHARP DUSK ATTACKS UPON ENEMY FUEL DUMPS AT AMIENS AND AMMUNITION STORES AT L'AIGLE. RAF HEAVY BOMBERS ALSO MADE AN EARLY EVENING ASSAULT UPON GERMAN ROCKET BOMB INSTALLATIONS ON THE FRENCH COAST.

AT LEAST 50,000 FRONT LINE GERMAN TROOPS WERE ESTIMATED TO HAVE BEEN KNOCKED OUT TO DATE IN THE SOUTHERN INVASION, AND NOW THE GERMAN 11TH DIVISION WAS BEING PRESSED FROM THE NORTH AND SOUTH BY AMERICANS AND HARASSED BY MAQUI FORCES IN THE HILLS TO THE WEST. ALLIED ARTILLERY RAKED THEM FROM THE EAST.

IT WAS ESTIMATED THAT 15,000 OF THE BATTERED GERMAN 19TH ARMY HAD BEEN ELIMINATED, AND AT MARSEILLE AND TOULON THE GERMAN 242ND AND 244TH DIVISIONS HAVE BEEN KNOCKED OUT OF THE WAR.

AMERICAN TROOPS REACHED THE RHONE VALLEY NORTH OF MONTELIMAR, 100 AIR MILES NORTH OF MARSEILLE, AFTER A TWO-DAY 200-MILE DRIVE, CUTTING OFF THE 11TH DIVISION'S RETREAT ROUTE AND THOSE OF OTHER NAZIS TO THE SOUTH.

NORTHWEST OF PARIS, IN THE AREA FORMING THE LEFT SIDE OF THE ALLIED LINE, BRITISH SECOND ARMY AND CANADIAN FIRST ARMY TROOPS POURED INTO FOUR BRIDGEHEADS OVER THE SEINE RIVER AND STRUCK OUT IN A MIGHTY PURSUIT AIMED AT THE ROCKET BOMB COAST IN THE PAS DE CALAIS.

ROUEN AND HAVRE WERE THREATENED WITH ENVELOPMENT BY THIS DRIVE.

THE GERMANS ALREADY WERE REPORTED EVACUATING LE HAVRE, EXCEPT FOR A FEW REARGUARDS AND DEMOLITION TROOPS AND WERE SAID TO BE STREAKING EAST TOWARD GERMANY UNDER PULVERIZING AERIAL ATTACKS. CAPTURE OF LE HAVRE WOULD GIVE THE ALLIES AN EXCELLENT PORT.

THESE THREE ACTIVITIES WERE BEING CONDUCTED BY THE ALLIES BETWEEN PARIS AND THE SEA:

1--THE BRITISH WERE BUILDING UP A BRIDGEHEAD AT VERNON, 55 AIRLINE MILES FROM THE MOUTH OF THE SEINE, TO STRIKE OUT PROBABLY IN THE DIRECTION OF BEAUVAIS, WHICH IS ON ONE OF THE MAIN GERMAN RETREAT LINES FROM ROUEN. BEAUVAIS IS 35 MILES NORTHEAST OF VERNON.

2--CANADIAN, BELGIAN AND DUTCH TROOPS WERE ENGAGED IN WHAT ONE OBSERVER CALLED A "FAIR SIZED SLAUGHTER" OF THE ENEMY SEVENTH ARMY. CANADIAN TROOPS WERE LOCKED WITH GERMAN REAR GUARDS AT THE SOUTHWESTERN APPROACHES TO ROUEN. N.J.G.

LT. COL. MOB WELKER OF ORANGE, N.J., AN ENGINEER OFFICER WHO WAS TAKEN DURING A RECONNAISSANCE INTO NO-MAN'S LAND ALONG THE WESTERN EDGE OF THE HARBOR, TALKED ALL NIGHT WITH A GERMAN MEDICAL OFFICER AND THEN WITH THE GARRISON COMMANDER, A LIEUTENANT. JUST A FEW HOURS BEFORE COLONIAL INFANTRY WAS SCHEDULED TO CLOSE IN FOR THE ASSAULT, THE LIEUTENANT AGREED WITH THE MEDICO THAT FURTHER RESISTANCE WAS [illegible] USELESS.

AUG 29 1944

PARIS, AUG 27-(DELAYED)-(AP)-FIRST CORRESPONDENT TO FLY TO PARIS, I LANDED AT ONE OF THE BOMBED-OUT FIELDS ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CITY

TODAY IN THE FIRST SMALL PLANE ARRIVING WITH A PASSANGER.

ONE OF THE GREATEST THRILLS OF MY LIFE WAS SEEING THE EIFFEL TOWER FOR THE FIRST TIME FROM THE AIR.

IT LOOKED JUST AS IT WAS SUPPOSED TO LOOK, GIVING ONE THE SAME WARM FEELING INSIDE THAT THE STATUE OF LIBERTY GIVES A VISITOR TO NEW YORK.

AUG 29 1944

IT WAS ALL THAT THE PILOT, LT.REID PORTER OF DENVER, COULD DO TO RESTRAIN HIMSELF FROM FLYING CIRCLES AROUND THE TOWER "JUST FOR THE HELL OF IT." PORTER IS A FORMER MARAUDER PILOT WHO HAS MADE MANY LESS PLEASANT TRIPS OVER FRANCE UNCER CONSTANT THREAT OF ENEMY FIGHTERS.

TODAY WE FLEW WITHOUT ESCORT AND ENCOUNTERED NO DIFFICULTY EXCEPT LOCATING A FIELD. ALL FIELDS AROUND PARIS ARE SO BEATEN UP BY ALLIED BOMBERS IT IS DIFFICULT TO SPOT ONE FROM ANOTHER QUICKLY.

WE CIRCLED WHAT WE THOUGHT WAS THE RIGHT SPOT FOUR OR FIVE TIMES. FINALLY AN AMERICAN SOLDIER CAME RUNNING OUT OF A WRECKED HANGAR, WAVING A FLAG.

AFTER TOUCHING GROUND, PORTER HAD TO TAXI THE PLANE PRECARIOUSLY AROUND BOMB CRATERS TO KEEP FROM UPSETTING.

AUG 29 1944

BEFORE LANDING WE CIRCLED A NUMBER OF OTHER AIR FIELDS, INCLUDING LE BOURGET AND VILLA COUBLART. FLYING AT AN ALTITUDE OF A FEW HUNDRED FEET IT WAS POSSIBLE TO GET AN EXCELLENT VIEW OF THE DAMAGE CAUSED BY THE AMERICAN BOMBERS.

SOME FIELDS ARE FULL OF CRATERS. NOTHING BUT THE SKELETONS REMAIN OF DOZENS OF HANGARS, CONTROL TOWERS AND SHOP BUILDINGS. I COUNTED THE WRECKAGE OF 12 NAZI FIGHTERS LYING AROUND ONE FIELD AND SEVERAL BURNED OUT BOMBERS AT ANOTHER.

ALL ALONG THE ROUTE THERE WAS CONSTANT VISIBLE TESTIMONY OF THE TERRIFIC WEIGHT OF THE ALLIED AIR POWER IN THE BOMBED AIRDROMES, RAILWAY YARDS AND BRIDGES.

THE HUGE AIRDROME AT CHARTRES IS A PICTURE OF DEVASTATION.

NIGHT LEAD PETAIN (600)
BY DON WHITEHEAD
PARIS, AUG 28-(AP)-THE FOLLOWING STORY OF PIERRE LAVAL'S LAST DAY IN PARIS WAS GIVEN ME BY A MAN WHO WAS WITH LAVAL MOST OF THE DAY. (PRESUMABLY THIS MAN WAS FRIENDLY TO LAVAL.)

THE EVENTS TOOK PLACE IN LAVAL'S OFFICE ON AUG.17 IN THE HOTEL MATIGNON WHICH WAS THE SEAT OF THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT IN PARIS.

LAVAL'S LAST OFFICIAL ACT IN THE CITY WAS TO SIGN TWO LETTERS TRANSFERRING THE GOVERNING AUTHORITY IN PARIS TO AMEDEE BUSSIERE, PREFECT OF POLICE, AND TO M.BOUFFET, PREFECT OF THE SEINE, WHILE A GERMAN GESTAPO AGENT WAITED OUTSIDE OF THE DOOR.

AUG 29 1944

THIS IS THE STORY:

AT 12:30 P.M., ON AUG. 17 FORMER PREMIER EDOUARD HERRIOT AND MRS.HERRIOT, WHO HAD BEEN BROUGHT TO PARIS BY LAVAL, CAME TO THE HOTEL MATIGNON WITH GERMAN AMBASSADOR OTTO ABETZ. ON THE PREVIOUS DAY HERRIOT HAD BEEN INFORMED BY THE GESTAPO THAT HE WAS TO BE TAKEN UNDER ARREST TO EITHER NANCY OR GERMANY.

THE HERRIOTS WENT INTO AN ANTEROOM WHILE ABETZ AND LAVAL DISCUSSED THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S ORDERS THAT THE SEAT OF THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT BE MOVED, BY FORCE IF NECESSARY, FROM VICHY TO BELFORT, NEAR THE SWISS-GERMAN BORDERS, BECAUSE OF THE ADVANCE OF ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE.

30. 24— 18345

AFTER ABETZ AND THE HERRIOTS DEPARTED LAVAL WAS LEFT IN A BIG OFFICE WITH A FIREPLACE. HE SAT AT A DESK BEHIND WHICH WAS A GOBELIN TAPESTRY OF A 17TH CENTURY PEASANT SCENE. HIS DESK WAS RELATIVELY UNCLUTTERED BUT THE ASHTRAY WAS PILED WITH CIGARETTE STUBS. HE WAS SMOKING CONTINUOUSLY AND HIS FACE SHOWED GREAT EMOTIONAL STRESS.

DURING THE AFTERNOON THERE WAS AN EXCHANGE OF NOTES BETWEEN LAVAL AND ABETZ REGARDING THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT'S MOVE TO BELFORT.

IN THE NOTES LAVAL PROTESTED THE TRANSFER BUT ABETZ SAID THE ACTION WAS AN ORDER OF THE REICH GOVERNMENT AND LAVAL WOULD BE TAKEN FORCIBLY IF HE REFUSED. THE ACTION, ABETZ SAID, WAS TAKEN TO PREVENT CONFUSION IN THE REAR OF THE GERMAN ARMIES AND ALSO TO PROTECT THE LEADERS OF THE VICHY GOVERNMENT.

LAVAL STAYED AT HIS DESK WORKING FURIOUSLY TO FINISH SOME PAPERS THAT LAY BEFORE HIM.

AUG 29 1944

AT 8 P.M., LAVAL'S LAST VISITORS ASSEMBLED IN THE BIG ROOM. THEY INCLUDED JUENIER, CHIEF OF LAVAL'S PRIVATE SECRETARIES; BONNEFOY, GENERAL SECRETARY FOR INFORMATION; CHRISTOPHE, DIRECTOR OF THE PRESS; GUERARD, LAVAL'S GENERAL SECRETARY, AND MY INFORMANT.

LAVAL WAS IN HIS SHIRT SLEEVES. HIS WHITE SHIRT WAS WILTED AND OPEN AT THE NECK. HIS WHITE TIE WAS WRINKLED AND SOILED. HIS HAIR DISHEVELLED AND PERSPIRATION STOOD ON HIS FOREHEAD.

THE LITTLE COLLABORATIONIST PACED BACK AND FORTH NERVOUSLY WITH A CIGARETTE DANGLING LOOSELY FROM HIS LIPS.

"HE LOOKED LIKE A MAN IN MENTAL TOTURE," SAID MONSIEUR M., MY INFORMANT.

LAVAL ASKED GUERARD TO READ ALOUD HIS LAST LETTER TO ABETZ IN WHICH HE SAID HE WAS FORCED TO ACCEPT THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT'S DEMANDS TO MOVE THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT TO BELFORT ALTHOUGH "I WANTED TO ACCOMPLISH TO THE VERY END, REGARDLESS OF THE RISKS, MY DUTIES AS HEAD OF THE GOVERNMENT."

THEN GUERARD READ A LETTER WRITTEN BY LAVAL TO M.TAITTINGER, PRESIDENT OF THE PARIS CITY COUNCIL, REGARDING THE TRANSFER OF POWERS.

LAVAL ASKED THE GROUP WHAT THEY THOUGHT OF HIS LETTER TO ABETZ.

GUERARD WAS FEARFUL THAT LAVAL, BY SAYING HE WAS BEING "FORCED TO ACCEPT" THE GERMANS DEMANDS, MIGHT CREATE AN INCIDENT WITH THE NAZIS. HE WANTED TO CHANGE THE WORD "FORCED" TO "COMPELLED."

"LAVAL WOULD NOT AGREE TO THE CHANGE," SAID MONSIEUR M.

BY THIS TIME DUSK OF THE LATE EVENING BROUGHT GLOOM TO THE BIG ROOM. THE ONLY LIGHT IN THE PLACE WAS FROM THE FIREPLACE IN WHICH LAVAL WAS BURNING HIS PERSONNAL PAPERS.

LAVAL WROTE A FEW MORE LETTERS AND TALKED TO THE GROUP. THEN A GESTAPO OFFICER ENTERED THE ROOM.

"I HAVE COME TO CONDUCT YOU TO BELFORT," HE SAID TO LAVAL.

LAVAL SAID HE WOULD BE READY WHEN HE HAD SIGNED THE LETTERS HE HAD WRITTEN. THE GESTAPO OFFICER WENT OUTSIDE TO WAIT FOR HIM.

LAVAL THEN BEGAN SAYING FAREWELLS TO THOSE WITH HIM. HE SHOOK HANDS WITH CHRISTOPHE AND SAID "CARRY ON---I WILL BE BACK WITH YOU SOME DAY."

THEN THE GROUP LEFT LAVAL ALONE WITH THE GESTAPO OFFICER.

PETAIN (350)
BY DON WHITEHEAD
PARIS, AUG 28-(AP)-BEFORE MARSHAL PETAIN WAS SEIZED BY THE GESTAPO AND REPORTEDLY TAKEN TO GERMANY, HE SENT A CLANDESTINE MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF FRANCE URGING THEM TO UNITE AND STATING THAT ALL

HE HAD DONE HAD BEEN FOR THEIR WELFARE.

THE 88-YEAR-OLD VICHY CHIEF OF STATE, HIS CHIEF OF GOVERNMENT, PIERRE LAVAL, AND FORMER PREMIER EDOUARD HERRIOT WERE ARRESTED BY THE GESTAPO A FEW DAYS BEFORE AMERICAN AND FRENCH FORCES ENTERED PARIS.

(DISPATCHES FROM BERN AND FROM DELLE, FRANCE, DATED THURSDAY, SAID PETAIN AND LAVAL STILL WERE AT MARVILLARS, NEAR BELFORT, FRANCE, DESPITE REPORTS THEY HAD BEEN TAKEN TO GERMANY. THE CONFUSION OF REPORTS, IT WAS EXPLAINED, AROSE FROM THE FACT THAT BOTH HAD MADE ONE-DAY TRIPS TO THE BORDER CITY OF MULHOUSE.)

IT IS BEING WHISPERED AROUND PARIS THAT LAVAL ARRANGED THE ARRESTS OF PETAIN AND HERRIOT AND THEN HIS OWN ARREST. THESE RUMORS SAID HE MADE A DEAL WITH HIS GERMAN MASTERS TO PREVENT THE ALLIES FROM GETTING CUSTODY OF PETAIN AND HERRIOT AND HAD HIMSELF ARRESTED TO TRY TO MAKE IT APPEAR TO HIS COUNTRYMEN THAT HE DID NOT LEAVE PARIS VOLUNTARILY AS THE ALLIED TROOPS DREW NEAR.

WHETHER THESE RUMORS HAVE ANY BASIS CANNOT BE DETERMINED AT THIS TIME. COPIES OF LETTERS RELIABLY REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN EXCHANGED BETWEEN LAVAL AND GERMAN AMBASSADOR OTTO ABETZ MAKE IT APPEAR AS THOUGH LAVAL OPPOSED THE GERMAN DETERMINATION TO MOVE THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT TO BELFORT NEAR THE SWISS FRONTIER AND WAS ARRESTED BECAUSE HE WANTED TO STAY IN PARIS.

TAKEN INTO CUSTODY BY AN OFFICIAL OF THE GERMAN EMBASSY, PETAIN WAS TRANSPORTED TO BELFORT ON AUG.20. BEFORE LEAVING HE SENT A MESSAGE TO THE FRENCH PEOPLE SAYING HE KNEW HE WOULD BE ARRESTED AND DECLARING, IN PART:

"IN THE EXTREME CONDITION THAT I NOW FIND MYSELF I HAVE NOTHING TO REVEAL TO YOU EXCEPT THE SIMPLE CONFIRMATION OF WHAT HAS MOTIVATED MY CONDUCT FOR THE PAST FOUR YEARS.

AUG 29 1944

A80

"HAVING DECIDED TO REMAIN AMONGST YOU I HAVE TRIED DAY BY DAY TO FIND THE BEST WAY TO SERVE THE PERMANENT INTERESTS OF FRANCE LOYALLY AND WITHOUT COMPROMISE.

"I HAD BUT ONE OBJECT--TO PROTECT YOU FROM THE WORST.

"ALL THAT I HAVE DONE AND ALL THAT I HAVE ACCEPTED, CONSENTED TO OR SUBMITTED TO, WHETHER WILLINGLY OR BY FORCE, HAS BEEN SOLELY FOR YOUR WELFARE; BECAUSE IF I COULD NOT BE YOUR SWORD I WANTED TO BE YOUR SHIELD."

LAVAL BROUGHT HERRIOT TO PARIS FROM NANCY FOR THE EXPRESS PURPOSE OF DISCUSSING PROBLEMS ARISING FROM THE ALLIED ADVANCE ON PARIS AND THE POSSIBILITY OF MOVING THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT FROM VICHY TO BELFORT. THE MEETING NEVER WAS HELD.

(EDITORS: THE TEXTS OF LETTERS BY PETAIN, LAVAL, HERRIOT AND ABETZ WERE CARRIED IN ON SOME CIRCUITS IN THE NIGHT REPORT).

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, AUG. 28-(AP)-THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY ESTABLISHED A NEW BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE SEINE EAST OF LOUVIERS TODAY AND ENLARGED THEIR FOOTHOLD AT VERNON TO AN AREA FIVE MILES LONG BY THREE MILES DEEP.

CANADIAN FORCES ON THE LEFT, MEANWHILE, MET FIERCE RESISTANCE IN CLEANING OUT THREE SEINE RIVER LOOPS NEAR ROUEN.

REPORTS REACHING THIS HEADQUARTERS GAVE ADDED GROUND FOR BELIEF THAT THE MAIN GERMAN FORCES WERE WITHDRAWING EASTWARD AGAINST THE THREAT OF AMERICANS SWINGING AROUND SOUTHEAST OF PARIS, ALTHOUGH THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL CONFIRMATION THE ROBOT BOMB AREA MAY SOON BE EVACUATED.

THE VERNON BRIDGEHEAD NOW IS STRETCHED TO THE OUTSKIRTS OF TILLY, WITH THE FOREST OF VERNON ALMOST CLEARED.

HEADQUARTERS BELIEVES THE GERMANS DO NOT HAVE ENOUGH TROOPS LEFT NORTH OF THE SEINE TO FORM ANY REAL CONNECTED LINE OF DEFENSE AGAINST THESE FORCES. THE SECOND ARMY ALONE HAS CAPTURED 10,212 GERMANS BETWEEN AUG. 20 AND AUG. 25.

ELEMENTS OF FIVE GERMAN DIVISIONS NUMBERING PERHAPS 20,000 MEN WERE POUNDED FROM GROUND AND AIR AS THEY TRIED MADLY TO ESCAPE ACROSS THE STREAM AND JOIN THE RETREAT TO THE EAST.

"ROUEN IS ANOTHER CHAMBOIS SHAMBLES," A SENIOR STAFF OFFICER SAID. HE REFERRED TO THE AREA WHERE FOR MILES THE GROUND WAS LITTERED WITH BODIES AND SKELETONS OF THOUSANDS OF VEHICLES DESTROYED WHEN THE GERMANS TRIED TO BREAK FROM THE ARGENTAN-FALAISE TRAP.

THE OFFICER SAID THE RIVER LOOP TRAPS WERE EAST, WEST AND SOUTH OF ROUEN AND THAT ALL WERE INFERNOS FOR THE GERMANS. ELEMENTS OF THREE INFANTRY AND TWO TANK DIVISIONS WERE ENCLOSED. THE OFFICER SAID THESE GERMANS HAD ABANDONED ALL THEIR EQUIPMENT IN AN EFFORT TO MOVE SWIFTLY FROM THE LASTH OF ARTILLERY AND AIR BOMBARDMENT.

EIGHT TROOP-LADEN BARGES WERE SUNK IN THE ROUEN AREA BY FIGHTER BOMBERS, WHILE THE GERMANS WERE TRYING EVERY CONCEIVABLE MEANS OF CROSSING THE MEANDERING RIVER. MANY WERE TRYING TO SWIM.

BRITISH TROOPS AND ARMOR POURED ACROSS THE RIVER AT THE VERNON BRIDGEHEAD AND THE CANADIANS WERE ESTABLISHED IN THE ELBEUF AREA.

"THERE HAS BEEN NO ATTEMPT AS FAR AS WE CAN LEARN TO HELP OR REINFORCE TROOPS CAUGHT IN THE SEINE AREA," THE STAFF OFFICER SAID. "ALL REINFORCEMENTS APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN SWITCHED TO THE TERRITORY SOUTHEAST OF PARIS IN AN EFFORT TO MEET THE AMERICAN DRIVE WHICH THREATENS TO OUTFLANK THE WHOLE LE HAVRE PENINSULA AND THE PAS DE CALAIS COAST. THE GERMANS ARE IN A VERY POOR WAY. THEY ARE FRIGHTFULLY FRIGHTENED BY THE AMERICAN DRIVE."

"I HOPE THE RED ARMY WILL REMOVE TO THE SOVIET UNION ALL THE GERMANS
IT FINDS IN EAST PRUSSIA SO THEY WON'T BE THERE WHEN WE ENTER. OUR POSTWAR FRONTIER WITH GERMANY WILL BE SHORTENED BUT IT WILL BE LENGTHENED WITH CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND WILL BE STRATEGICALLY STRONG."

CONFIDENT OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE'S AUTHORITY AS OPPOSED TO THE LONDON GOVERNMENT, OZUBKA-MORAWSKI SAID "TIME IS WORKING FOR US. WE KNOW WE CAN BUILD NATIONAL UNITY BUT IF MIKOLAJCZYK JOINED US IT WOULD HASTEN AND MAKE THE PROCESS EASIER."

AUG 29 1944

OSUBKA-MORAWSKI SAID MIKOLAJCZYK TOLD HIM SIR JOHN CLARK KERR, BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO RUSSIA, HAD INTIMATED THAT THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT WOULD AGREE TO A REVIVAL OF THE 1921 CONSTITUTION.
WHETHER THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ALSO WOULD AGREE, OSUBKA-MORAWSKI

THE COMMITTEE PRESIDENT ASSERTED TADEUSZ ROMER, FOREIGN MINISTER OF THE LONDON GOVERNMENT, WAS UNACCEPTABLE IN ANY UNIFIED CABINET BUT THAT HE MIGHT BE USEFUL AGAIN AS AN AMBASSADOR.

HE DENIED THE LONDON GOVERNMENT WAS SUPPORTED WHOLEHEARTEDLY BY THE FOUR MAJOR PARTIES OF POLAND AND SAID "IF MIKOLAJCZYK DOESN'T ACCEPT OUR GENEROUS OFFER WE BELIEVE THE LONDON REGIME WILL BREAK UP IN A CRISIS."

AUG 29 1944

OSUBKA-MORAWSKI SAID THE POLISH WORKERS PARTY EQUIVALENT TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY HAD THREE MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE AND ANOTHER, BOLESLAW BIERUT, WAS PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL WHICH NOW IS THE SUPREME LEGISLATIVE BODY IN THE COUNTRY.

FALL OF REIMS NEAR Germans Report Fighting in Streets of Chalons, Drive Toward Sedan.

Bonn

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 29.—(AP) The American Third army in a swift 25-mile smash across hallowed battlefields of the First World War captured Belleau Wood, Chateau Thierry and Soissons today, rolling northward along the historic Ardennes invasion route within 55 miles of the Belgian border.

Covering miles for each bloody yard their fathers won in 1918, the Americans under Lt. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., encountered only minor resistance, and Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball reported from the front that the Germans were "in headlong flight," toward Belgium and their homeland.

Turning northward from their positions east of Paris and advancing at a rate of better than a mile an hour, the Third army threatened to flank the Nazis' rocket bomb installations to the northwest.

Northeast of Paris they drove to the approaches of the World War siege city of Reims.

Fight in Chalons

East of the capital they were, by German account, fighting in the streets of Chalons, only 96 miles from the German frontier and a bare 50 miles from the battlefield east of Verdu on which the Germans and the Allies were fighting when the First World war armistice was announced November 11, 1918.

Supreme Headquarters made no confirmation at midnight of report that either Chalons or Vitry to the south had been completely occupied, but General Patton's men were disclosed to have made further gains across the Marne just below Chalons.

Four Miles From Chalons

Latest reports reaching the supreme command said the easternmost of Patton's operations had carried units of his Third Army four miles and six miles southeast of Chalons to Lepine and Marson, respectively.

Well to the south still another column made a farther eastern advance from Troyes about 5 miles to Piney, on the route to the River Aube.

In taking Soissons, the Americans reached the south bank of the Aisne river and promised momentarily to break across the Aisne-Somme line, important water barrier guarding German positions in Belgium and the homeland.

Belgians Told To Rise

As the Allies neared Belgium, patriots in that occupied country got a preliminary call to arms. All able-bodied men were ordered to join the resistance army, to steal arms from the Germans and to prepare for battle.

The Americans also were on the south bank of the Aisne at Fismes, 16 miles east of Soissons.

Latest reports reaching the Supreme Command said the eastern most of Patton's operations had carried units of his Third army four miles and six miles southeast of Chalons to Lepine and Marson, respectively.

This spectacular thrust northwestward toward the Ardennes forest and Sedan was putting in reverse invasion marches which the Germans made southward in 1870, in 1914, and finally in the present war when the blitzkrieg triumphed over the crumbling French in the spring of 1940.

Drive 25 Miles

The 25-mile drive which Patton's men made northward from Chateau-Thierry to Soissons in one day seemed almost miraculous compared with the French drive which captured the town in the great second battle of the Marne in 1918. Then the French required from July 18 to August 2—16 days— to move into Soissons from their nearest positions just three miles to the west.

The American First division was fighting beside the French a few miles south and west of Soissons.

Indicating the speed of the American drive, Supreme Headquarters announced in its communique this morning that the Americans were six miles from Chateau-Thierry. Then late today the fall of that historic town, Belleau Wood five miles to the northwest, and Soissons 25 miles north were announced simultaneously.

Belleau Wood is a permanent memorial to American Marines and infantrymen who died there in June of 1918.

Below Chalons, where American entry was announced by the German communique today, the Americans struck the central Marne at two points between Chalons and Vitry.

For the present at least the lightning advance of the Third army over the rolling green battlefields of the earlier war overshadowed the operations of other Allied forces between Paris and the channel coast.

There were signs, however, that here, too, American, Canadians and British troops were now ready to strike out, possibly with Gen. Patton's men holding the east wall of a huge pocket, in an effort to conquer the defenders of the flying bomb sites along the channel.

Two British armored columns broke out of the Seine bridgehead at Vernon soon after daybreak, one driving forward 12 miles to Etre Pagny and Hacqueville and the other punching five miles forward to Bray-et-Lu on the Epte river.

4 Bridges Across Seine

Simultaneously two British bridgeheads across the Seine east of Louviers and at Vernon were so enlarged that they were virtually joined together and in effect became a single bridgehead. At least four bridges have been thrown across the Seine in these areas, with men, armor, artillery and supplies moving across in a constant stream, front dispatches said.

The bridgehead east of Louviers was almost doubled in size during the day with the capture of Orgeville and Acouis, and forward elements struck to the southeast and entered the river town of Les Andeleys tonight.

The American and British bridgeheads below Paris have been consolidated into one huge reservoir of men and material extending some 30 miles along the north bank of the Seine and already thrusting forward 11 miles to a point just north of the Paris-Rouen highway.

Canadians advancing from their Pont de L'Arche-Elbeuf holdings sent advance elements within 8,000 yards of Rouen.

West from Elbeuf, the Canadians Dutch and Belgians penned the Germans remaining below the Seine finally and conclusively into three deep loops of the river. Although the Berlin radio claimed that all Nazi troops now had been evacuated to the north bank, the latest reports at Supreme headquarters said that there still was very hard fighting at each loop.

Meet Light Resistance

Resistance to Gen. Patton's columns was described as "light and scattered," although one Berlin commentator spoke of "bitter advanced fighting" as the new front "threatened" German positions along the Aisne.

It was known that when the Third army first hit the Seine and Yonne rivers that the Germans had two divisions between there and the Marne to the north and east. Elements of those divisions subsequently were identified as the Americans drove forward, but they never were linked in any sort of cohesive stand, and the majority probably fell victims to infantry cleaning up behind the armored elements.

In Paris, where life was assuming at least a semblance of normality, American and French troops carried the clean-up of isolated Nazis to the northern suburbs, cleared Montmorency and took the great Le Bourget airdrome after a severe fight.

Far to the west in Brittany American troops with the aid of Maquis continuel slow progress against the stubborn Nazi garrison at Brest. The other large Breton ports of St. Nazaire and Lorient were described as closely invested but not for the present under direct attack.

Wreck Nazi Communications

North of a line from Dieppe to Sedan—where the Germans made their first massive breakthrough in 1940 and for which Gen. Patton may now be striking—U. S. Eighth air force fighters and fighter bombers continued to wreck enemy communications.

Supreme headquarters announced tonight that 92,000 prisoners had been taken by the Allies in northwestern France between Aug. 10 and 25, of which from 42,000 to 45,000 were taken in the Falaise pocket area itself.

This brought the total German casualties in the western French campaign to more than 275,000 to date. In addition to the 42,000 prisoners taken in the Falaise pocket, 30,000 Nazis died there. The American Third army announced yesterday that 81,000 had been killed or captured since the beginning of the operations in Brittany, and in addition there were roughly 123,000 Germans accounted for in Allied operations exclusive of the Falaise gap and before the Third army was activated.

At Soissons, where the old First and Second divisions helped their Allies win one of the closing battles of the last war, the Americans were fifty-five miles northeast of Paris. Parallel columns driving north reached the Fismes area sixteen miles east of Soissons and reached the upper Marne at two places between Chalons and Vitry.

Troops were less than fifty miles from Verdun where a younger Marshal Petain near the start of the last war turned the Germans back with resistance dramatized in the slogan: "They shall not pass."

The Americans and British bridgeheads on the Seine northwest of Paris were welded into a solid front of twenty-five to thirty miles when the troops which crossed at Mantes and Vernon joined hands. The assault front pushed eleven miles north of the Seine almost to the Rouen-Paris highway.

Canadians advanced within sight of Rouen, where Joan or Arc was tried and burned. The nearest Canucks were four and a half miles away.

The American triumphs at Chateau-Thierry and Soissons cracked the German-Aisne-Somme line and moved the Allies within fifteen miles of the Cathedral of Reims, fifteenth largest city in France.

SEIZE BELLEAU WOOD AND RACE FOR REIMS

Enemy in Headlong Flight for Germany—Americans Within 100 Miles of Reich and 55 Miles From Belgium.

SupremeHeadquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—With the Germans in headlong retreat, the Third United States Army captured Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood and Soissons, and advanced on cathedral-spired Reims today. The Yanks thrust to within 100 miles of Germany and fifty-five miles of Belgium.

Rolling over the 1918 battlefields where their fathers had fought before them, the American infantry and armor met only minor resistance from the Nazis. The main German forces were in "headlong flight toward the homeland and Belgium," a front-line dispatch declared. Armored spearheads and battle planes took a high toll of the enemy retreating over clogged roads.

Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's men seized Chateau-Thierry on the Marne and famous Belleau Wood, five miles west, then sprinted the additional twenty-five miles north into Soissons. Tonight they were before Reims, storied for its cathedral and its champagne.

Threaten Robot Coast.

The knife blades carving up northern France were rapidly flanking the whole Pas de Calais department whence the Germans launch their robot bombs. A new and more deadly trap might be forming around the remnants of the German Seventh Army, broken in Normandy, and the Fifteenth Army, in Pas de Calais.

Gain 15 to 20 Miles.

The swift drive north was one of the most brilliant gains of a single day in the whole incredible battle record of Lieut.-Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army.

All along the front east of Paris, the Americans made advances during the day of fifteen to twenty-five miles. They were within sixty-five miles of Sedan on the famous Ardennes road of invasion, the same route the Germans used to enter France in 1940. The Aisne-Somme line is the last great water barrier before Germany itself, save for the Albert Canal in Belgium.

The British advanced eight miles north of the Seine near Louviers, the newest bridgehead. The Canadians moved closest to Rouen at their river crossing at Pont de L'Arche.

The capture of Soissons put the Americans in a tightening semicircle around the forest of Compiegne where the fate of France was signed away in the 1940 armistice and where the Germans capitulated in 1918. In the Fismes area, the Americans were but a little more than fifty miles from Lorraine, which the Nazies incorporated into the Reich after France fell.

Paris Cleared of Last Germans.

Paris was cleared of its last German resistance. Major-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow's American Fifth Corps seized the great Le bourget Airfield where Lindbergh ended his trans-Atlantic solo flight. The Americans also cleaned out the Montmorency suburb. He drove the surviving Germans far beyond the French capital.

The Seine bridgeheads which point into robot bomb row were swelling to bursting points.

[A German broadcast said the American advance had carried into the streets of Chalons.]

Slow progress was made by Americans and Maquis against the stubborn German garrison at Brest in western Brittany. The other Brittany ports of St. Nazaire and Lorient were described as closely circled, but not for the present under direct attack.

One front line report said that at least fourteen robot bomb sites had been found in the mopped up area just south of the Seine, with increasing numbers ahead every mile of the thrust north.

American fighter planes flew 800 sorties in attacks on German communications all the way ahead of the assault through northern France, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg and into Germany. These planes found a noticeable drop off in enemy road and rail traffic in the whole belt between the Seine and the Somme.

The cleanup of the last three German pockets south of the lower Seine seemed likely in a matter of hours as the Canadians closed in tighter and Allied planes maintained day and night patrols pouring bomb, machine-gun and rocket fire destruction over the attempts of the enemy to ferry or swim to safety.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's cautious left flank gave no indication of bursting on in a swift follow-up of the German flight in disorder across the Seine and apparent pull back to the Somme.

Some military observers said a steady power buildup north of the Seine seemingly was following Gen. Montgomery's pattern of massing an overwhelming force before a breakout attack—a strategy which succeeded at El Alamein and failed at Caen.

In contrast to the Marne front east of Paris where the Germans still were unable to get any real force into action, enemy troops were making a bitter rearguard fight north of the lower Seine, suggesting that the Nazis determined to guard their robot bombing sites to the last minute.

SOLDIERS VIEW OLD MEMORIAL

Aisne-Marne Monument Found Unmolested, Well Kept Up

Chateau-Thierry, France, Aug. 29 (AP)—Here on the Marne where American army troops and marines fought sodden but successful battles in 1918 against heavy German forces, a new generation of United States soldiers swept today aginst only minor resistance.

Units of Lieut Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army seized Chateau-Thierry and Belleau Wood, five miles to the east, both scenes of decisive fighting in the final summer of World War I.

The Americans found the cemetery at Belleau Wood and the 24-column Aisne-Marne memorial unmolested and beautifully cared for, although the twin column monument to the United States Third Division in the town of Chateau-Thierry had been wrecked in the German-French fighting of 1940.

Visible For Miles

The Aisne-Marne memorial, with its double row of columns and 20-foot high figures representing the United States and France, was visible to Americans for miles before they reached this town. Upon their arrival many stood and read the names of the divisions inscribed upon the memorial.

A bent old Frenchman who has been the caretaker at the memorial for 11 years still was on the job. He explained that two bullet scars on it were from the 1940 fighting. He said Germans frequently visited the memorial during their four-year occupation.

The five-mile drive along a winding, elm-lined road to Belleau Wood was through a litter of abandoned German vehicles, gear and blood-soaked bandages from the wounded who had been removed since yesterday's fighting.

On Job 25 Years

The cemetery grounds there also have been kept in perfect condition by a crew of five caretakers headed by Amedy Savoy, who has been on the job 25 years.

At one end of the curving rows of thousands of marble closses, he pointed to nine fresh graves with wooden crosses. They were for American prisoners of war killed during the strafing of a train on which they were being taken to Germany. A number of wounded from the same train now are in Chateau-Thierry hospital.

One of the nine new wooden crosses bore no name. He was a soldier like thousands buried in 1918 and whose crosses bear the inscription "here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God."

On the hill above the cemetery there still are grass-grown trenches with machine guns and field pieces rusting from 26 years of exposure. Shell holes are there, too, and rotting stumps of trees splintered by artillery. But a thick groth of birch saplings now largely obscures this scene.

crossfire of French and German anti-tank guns. The pyramid-shaped column nearest the river had been toppled and great chunks blasted from the other column.

"Even after it was wrecked we placed flowers there on your Day of Independence and every Nov. 11," a French women said. "The Germans took them away as fast as we placed them there and we kept putting them back."

Patton's Rushing Men Give Salute At Chateau-Thierry, Belleau Wood

Marne Town Sees Only a Little Fighting This Time—New War Left U. S. Memorial and Cemetery of 1918 Unharmed

CHATEAU-THIERRY, France, Aug. 29 (AP)—American troops, fighting over the rolling green battlefields where doughboys and marines immortalized themselves in 1918, occupied Chateau-Thierry and went past Belleau Wood in a smash that swept across the Valley of the Marne to the approaches of Reims today.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's forces encountered only minor resistance from the Germans, whose main body was in headlong flight toward Belgium and the Reich.

Belleau Wood, scene of heavy fighting in the decisive battles in the summer of 1918, is five miles west of Chateau-Thierry.

The magnificent twenty-four-column American Aisne-Marne Memorial, overlooking Chateau-Thierry and the American Cemetery at Belleau Wood, had not been molested by the Germans. Their grounds have been beautifully kept up throughout the war by French caretakers.

But in the town of Chateau-Thierry the twin-columned monument to the United States Third Division had been wrecked in fighting between the Germans and French in 1940.

Memorial Church Hit in New Fight

The stone memorial church in Chateau-Thierry, built with American funds, had been hit, but damage was slight. A shell struck the tower just above the front entrance during fighting in the town square yesterday.

Residents said the Third Division gladioli and purple peonies at the monument today, and our troops streaming toward Reims saluted smartly as they passed.

In Belleau Wood at one end of the curving rows of marble crosses are nine fresh graves with wooden crosses. They are for American prisoners of war killed a few months ago when an Allied plane attacked the train on which they were being taken to Germany. Wounded from the same train now re in Château-Thierry Hospital.

Nazis Regrouping Before Reds

By Joseph Morton

Headquarters United States 15th Air Force, Italy, Aug. 29 (AP)—Pilots scouting the Balkans reported evidence today that the Germans had succeeded in regrouping a sizable force in the path of the Russian advance through the Galati Gap upon the Romanian capital of Bucharest.

They saw no sign of large-scale German evacuation from the surrendered kingdom into Hungary or Yugoslavia.

Trains Romania-Bound

Train traffic over railroads linking Romania with central Europe still was predominantly toward Romania rather than away from the kingdom. There was evidence of increased air-transport operations into Romania and stepped-up barge traffic on the Danube, which was mined again last night.

Allied bombers struck in eastern Hungary yesterday, primarily to interrupt supply movements instead of to hamper withdrawals. They hit the Kiskolcz rail yards and a bridge at Szolnok.

In the absence of reports that the Romanian army has interfered with the four main supply arteries from Hungary, it appeared likely that the enemy was organizing to fight a delaying action on the plains between Bucharest and the Iron Gate, a bottleneck on the Danube, rather than in the Transylvanian Alps and Carpathians where the chances of being trapped are greater.

Three Railroads Serve Nazis

In the lowland region, the Germans have the use of three railroads crossing the mountains at their western end, as well as the Danube. All four are eventual estape routes and lines of supply.

Pilots said industrial activity apparently had ceased at Ploesti, which Russian troops are approaching. One flyer described the great oil center as "dead as a doornail." The scouts saw no signs of fires from the refining or oil-producing areas. This refuted earlier reports that the Germans were attempting to demolish the few installations which Allied bombers have left intact.

6 Men Directed Paris' Revolt

By Edward D. Ball

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP—Delayed)—Six men, members of the all-powerful central committee of the Paris liberation movement, directed hundreds of thousands of Parisians in the revolt against the Nazis. They gathered in a candle-lit cellar August 19 and gave the order from which flared the final, vengeful revolt of a city four years under the German yoke.

These men were known to each other only by fictitious names, but their organization kept German nerves on edge for four years.

By word of mouth and by posters put up by daring Partisans, the word spread. Trusted members of the committee had rendezvous in the streets, and they would saunter past each other and drop innocent-sounding phrases, such as "the French beans are cooking," or "the goat has been milked." They didn't know themselves just what was meant.

But hundreds of thousands of partisians in the underground delivered these important messages.

Jewish Lawyer Called Leader

This story was unfolded by a Paris lawyer, a slightly built, fortyish Jewish Parisian who looked more like a professor than the leader of a revolt. With him was Mlle. Suzanne, his secretary and one of the chief women members of the resistance movement, an attractive blonde under 30 who weighs less than 100 pounds.

These two joined 400 other patriots in occupying the two-block-square Hotel de Ville, remaining to take pot-shots at the Germans with Colt automatics until the Allies arrived.

The le[illegible] told of the occupation [illegible] police [illegible] efecture by the Paris [illegible] the strike of railroad workers, both parts of the general plan.

Pistols 'Chuted To Them

Relating the story of the Hotel de Ville siege, he said:

"Most of our pistols were Colts which had been parachuted to us. By the end of the first day we had 50 German prisoners, and many more than that were killed."

"We had ammunition sufficient for only five minutes' full-scale fighting," Mlle. Suzanne said, "but by conserving our supply and limiting our shots we were able to hold out."

All the time they were under siege they kept sending out couriers, directing placement of barricades in the streets. The sandbagging was done by heroic Frenchmen under German fire, while others threw guards around the Seine.

Many Different Groups

There are many different groups of resisters under different names, but the high policy came down from the central committee in Paris. Its members never met twice in the same place; never telephoned, and never put anything in writing.

"Our organizations included everybody," the leader said. "There were Socialists, Catholics, Rightists, Leftists, trade unionists, Communists and Popular Democrats and Jews. As a Jew myself I must say the French people cannot be held responsible for the atrocities the Jews have had to suffer. That was the doing of the Germans."

Germany Four Days Late On News of Paris' Fall

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 29—Germany announced officially today the fall of Paris, four days after the fact, asserting in a communiqué that strongpoints in the French capital "succumbed to enemy superiority."

The communiqué said the bulk of German troops had withdrawn to the north bank of the lower Seine.

Allied Use Of Famous Paris Airfield Seen

Le Bourget Field, Paris, Aug. 29 (AP)—This valued military prize wrested from the Germans by fighting French soon may undergo a major face-lifting operation to permit it to handle a great volume of air traffic, but its future role in Allied hands is veiled in military secrecy.

Le Bourget, where Charles A. Lindbergh landed the Spirit of St. Louis in 1927, is the biggest airdrome in France, and its acquisition will give the Allies a great air base less than ten miles north of Paris when and if it is repaired.

Advance patrols of aviation engineers already are assessing the damage to the field, smashed many times by Allied bombs when the Germans used it as a bomber base.

Paris Cabinet Due Soon

Algiers, Aug. 29 (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle is expected to form a new cabinet in Paris soon, retaining some members of the French Committee of National Liberation and adding leaders of the resistance movement in France.

All but one or two members of the committee are expected to reach Paris shortly. Leaders of the assembly also expect to go to the capital where that consultative body will be nearly doubled in size by addition of resistance and party representatives.

No date has been set for elections. De Gaulle frequently has expressed a desire for elections as soons as possible, but many leaders of the resistance have insisted they be delayed until some 2,500,000 war prisoners and impressed laborers have been returned from Germany.

Yanks In Paris To Parade

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—American troops will parade down the Champs Elysees this afternoon before high French and Allied military officials, the Paris radio said today.

As a token of French homage to the American army, Gen. Charles de Gaulle will review the march, which will begin at 2 P. M., the broadcast said.

A Paris dispatch, meanwhile, announced that Lieut. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, military commander of the city, would organize into a new army the French Forces of the Interior, thousands of whose members now are wandering around the French capital in civilian clothes carrying guns. The commander of the American forces, which helped liberate Paris, officially delivered the city to Koenig yesterday.

Happy Parisians Cheer Yanks In Victory Parade Through City

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

PARIS, Aug. 29.—(AP) Past the Arc de Triomphe and down through the avenues where their fathers had walked a generation ago, the men of a great American infantry division marched today.

This was Paris' first real commemoration of her new freedom. There was cheers and laughter, but it was a solemn [illegible] when Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig laid a wreath on the tomb of France's unknown soldier of World War I.

Hundreds of thousands of persons stood along the line of march along the Champs Elysees, the Place Vendome, at the Obelisk, Place de La Concord, in the Rue de Rivoli and all through these beloved avenues.

At the Obelisk Bradley, Gen. Charles DeGaulle, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, and Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc reviewed the great parade.

First came armored cars, four abreast and then long files of foot soldiers slogging along with the beat of the drums, just as other soldiers did here at an hour of victory 26 years ago.

It has been a grey day with rain and just enough breeze to faintly ruffle the American, French and British flags which hang in massed thousands in Paris.

There has been some reflective feeling about this grand march; some renewed awareness that while war is mud and mademoiselles, it is also destiny and death.

Along the line of march were mingled and mixed cries and shouts —everything from "God bless you" to "any gum Yank?"

But Paris is not in such a riotous mood as yesterday.

For this was not a march along Fifth Avenue — as one day there will be one—by soldiers finished with battle. This division marched in battle array. It marched through Paris toward another rendezvous with action — out of this city and back into the line of attack.

It was a strange panorama. Here a girl, with a curse, threw a picture of Hitler underneath our armored cars, and there a bearded priest stood solemnly with uplifted hands, not bothering to brush away tears that moved down his cheeks.

The music itself was a medley of all that is familiar in the Allied world — the Marsellaise, Star Spangled Banner, God Save The King, Dixie—and Marching Through Georgia.

Units began marching just at 2 p. m, but half an hour before that there was a silent medieval-like military ritual under the Arc de Triomphe by the French republican guard around the tomb of France's unknown soldier.

These soldiers wore brass hats with red cockades and long black artificial hair plumes. Their tunics were black and their trousers, white.

With precise dignity they saluted their unknown comrade of another war as the notes of taps rose under the arc and the eternal light burning in the tomb sent up its barely visible wisps of smoke.

4th of July Part at Maxim's Fooled Paris Foe

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE.

Paris, Aug. 28 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Maxim's is closed now and, with it, nearly all the other great Parisian restaurants so fondly remembered by many Americans. Most are unable to operate for the simple reason that they have no electric power and very little food. But the case of Maxim's is different.

That famous restaurant has been closed since July 9 because of a great Fourth of July party which had been held there by French patriots five days earlier. They had assembled in Maxim's quietly on the Fourth and—as a pro-Nazi newspaper scornfully put it—had drunk champagne and danced until 6 o'clock in the morning.

I have just talked to the present manager of Maxim's, sitting down in its old and musty wine cellars, and he has shown me clippings of the stories about that event. According to these accounts, about 100 French people met at Maxim's to toast American independence. They did it with thoroughness, and at the very tables where Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels had often sat during their visits to Paris.

There were no Germans on hand that night, but the Germans heard about it, and five days later solemnly sent soldiers to close the restaurant.

The place is dark now and full of the smells of any unused building, but the manager is trying to find fixtures to restore its former glory. He hopes to be able to open up by October 1, he said—meaning that he thought everybody would be back in a Paris of victory and peace by then.

Of all the internationally famous tourist rendezvous in Paris, the only one really operating is the Ritz. But most of the others are scenes of activity. Workmen are cleaning and sweeping and head waiters are brushing up their old frock coats. They are all thinking already of the great night to come when the European war is over—and of all the other nights that will follow.

946 Germans Surrender To GI Captive

By Edward Kennedy

Grenoble, Aug. 25 (AP—Delayed). A German formation of 946 troops surrendered today to a 24-year-old American lieutenant, Clarence E. Coggins, of Poteau, Okla., whom they had captured a short time before.

The Nazis were members of a division which the French said had been using ruthless methods in attempting to combat Patriot activities, and apparently surrendered to the American for fear of what might happen if they fell into French hands.

When the captives were brought into Grenoble a crowd gathered menacingly about them and had to be restrained by American military police.

The French accused the Nazis of countless atrocities and during a 200-mile trip through the region where the division operated in the Drome and Isere departments, I saw mute evidence of their tactics in many devasted farms and burned and plundered villages.

Called For Conference

Coggins was captured Wednesday night while on reconnaissance northeast of Grenoble with Capt. Hurd L. Reeves, of Miami, Fla., and Capt. Herbert Johnson, of Syracuse, N. Y. He was listed as missing.

"They put me with 11 of my men who were captured, but when they learned I was an officer they called me over for a conference with their officers," he said.

"They called me back several times for additional talks. It seemed strange at first, but then I got the idea—they were discussing surrendering to us."

Coggin Gets Terms

Eventually their commanding officer, a major, asked Coggins to take the surrender offer over the lines. Coggins made the trip accompanied by a German officer.

Later he returned to the Germans with the terms from his battalion commander, Lieut. Col. Philip M. Johnson, of Portland, Maine—that they lay down all arms and come in their own vehicles.

The Germans did so early today.

The formation had the Americans facing it, French Patriots harassing it on both sides.

Patriots In Control

That the Patriots have control of virtually the whole area between Genoble and the Swiss frontier was indicated by the fact that a Swiss correspondent and several other persons arrived in Grenoble from Switzerland today without seeing a German.

Some miles farther east 200 other Germans surrendered to Lieut. Peter Odo (home town unavailable) and the French captured almost 200 in another locality, bringing the day's bag in the Grenoble area to almost 1,200.

starvation.

Hayes said he had been advised by Marquis leaders that given more arms French Patriots could force the surrender of 4,000 German troops in the Landes Department.

Hayes declared Spanish authorities were cooperating in the transfer of 10,000 tons of American Red Cross foodstuffs from Spain to hungry regions in Southern France.

Hayes crossed the frontier accompanied by the first secretary of the embassy, Fayette Flexer. The British Ambassador and the French representative to Spain, Jacques Truelle, followed in another car with Col. Julio Orteza, Spanish commander of the Pyrenees frontier.

The diplomats were greeted along the way by cheering French and were showered with flowers. At Biarritz they were received by the former Mayor and regional commissioner, Fernand Hirigoyen, and a number of Marquis leaders.

Nazis Lost 122,000 in Trap

Falaise Pincers Took Heavy Toll—Thousands More of Foe Caught at Seine.

British Headquarters Near the Seine, Aug. 29 (A. P.)—Allied troops killed or captured 122,000 Germans in the Falaise trap, British Second Army Headquarters disclosed today, and still more thousands of Germans will be added to the toll from the disorganized enemy retreat across the Seine.

The 122,000—including 30,000 killed and 92,000 captured, a third of the latter wounded—represented the bag of American, British and Canadian armies through successive entrapments in the Falaise area up to August 25.

The armies since that time have swept on, pinning the remnants of Field Marshal von Kluge's Seventh Army against the lower Seine, and taking a new heavy toll. The figure was announced after five days of counting prisoners.

Even this huge bag has been swelled during the last three days and will grow again today as troops complete mopping up the last three remaining pockets in Seine River loops south and west of Rouen. The trapped Germans have been fighting back with the desperation of trapped animals.

Nazis From Norway Found.

British troops fighting across the Seine east of Vernon have encountered a German armored division from Norway, and there was speculation about the weakening of the Norway garrison.

Enemy rearguards have been fighting stubbornly against British troops pouring across the Seine east of Louviers and at Vernon, but prisoners asserted theirs had been a last gasp assignment. Men captured yesterday said they had been without food for two days, that they were short of ammunition and almost entirely without artillery support except for their own mortars.

It was conceded generally by British staff officers that the Nazis were emptying northwest France as rapidly as humanly possible in order to escape an even larger and more deadly trap which is being sprung by the American drive northeast of Paris.

Among the Nazis still trapped in small pockets along the Seine, intelligence men have found some from a German air force division—troops who normally would be working around airfields, but who now have been given rifles and ordered to fight.

Toulouse Found Starving By U. S. Envoy To Spain

San Sebastian, Spain, Aug. 28 (AP—Delayed)—Carlton J. Hayes, United States Ambassador to Spain, declared today, following a brief visit to Biarritz, that conditions in southwestern France are quiet and apparently approaching normal, but said he was informed that Toulouse is threatened with

German Losses Put At Over 275,000 Men

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—The campaign in northern and western France already has cost the Germans more than 275,000 men, official tabulations disclosed tonight.

In addition to the 42,000 prisoners taken in the Falaise pocket, 30,000 Nazis died there, it was announced.

The American Third Army announced yesterday that 81,000 German had been killed or captured since the beginning of operations in Brittany.

Besides these there were roughly 123,000 Germans accounted for in Allied operations, exclusive of the Falaise gap and before the Third Army was activated.

A Rome dispatch yesterday estimated German losses in southern France at more than 50,000.

BIG NIGHT RAID POUNDS REICH

RAF Reported Over Danzig, Berlin And Other Cities

London, Wednesday, Aug. 30 (AP). A force of RAF heavy bombers crossed the Channel toward Germany during the night and a few hours later the Nazi radio reported attacking planes over Berlin, Danzig, East and West Prussia and other parts of the Reich.

Trails of the armada winging away from England and the German reports of the territory under attack indicated one of the biggest Allied night air assaults in weeks was under way.

Maintain Transport Attack

The night actions developed after the fourth day of sustained attacks on German transport in France and the low countries by United States Eighth Air Force fighters.

It was 1940 all over again above the French battle zones and beyond, except that this time the planes were American instead of German. There was virtually no opposition.

Count 3-Day Achievements

A recapitulation tonight showed that in three days of the attacks the flyers had destroyed 1,507 railroad cars and damaged 1,874, hit 1,223 motor vehicles, two oil trains, 42 oil tanks, 411 locomotives, 46 barges, three ammunition trains and 82 ammunition carriers.

Today they reported destruction of 90 locomotives and 310 railway cars on lines ranging from Brussels to Lyon in southeastern France. The Thunderbolts and Lightnings also hit more than 310 motor vehicles, shot up two railroad roundhouses and a number of warehouses and bombed two tunnels.

Three Allied fighters were missing from the entire day's operations.

Group Gets 20 Nazi Planes

A Thunderbolt group, led by Lieut. Col. Ben Rimmerman, of Omaha, destroyed 20 enemy planes parked on a field northeast of Brussels. Lieut. Swift Benjamin, of Philadelphia, got six of them; Capt. William J. Price, of Pittsburgh, five, and Lieut. Marvin V. Bledsoe, of Los Angeles, four.

The same group shot up 24 locomotives in the Brussels area.

A group commanded by Col. Frederick Gray, of Abilene, Texas, shot up freight yards at Mariemburg, Belgium, and set afire near by oil tanks.

Bagged By Other Groups

Still another Thunderbolt group, led by Major Lucian Bade, Jr., of Hopkinsville, Ky., shot up 10 locomotives, 2 trains, 144 trucks and 54 horse-drawn vehicles northeast of Lyon. Another, led by Lieut. Col. Philip E. Tukey, of Cape Elizabeth, Maine, fiddled 12 locomotives and six oil cars and blasted a trainload of heavy guns northeast of Brussels.

In contrast, almost complete cloud conditions over the fields of Allied Normandy-based fighters restricted their operations, although they managed to get in some licks at the Germans trying to escape from the Seine loops northwest of Paris.

U. S. FIGHTERS HARASS REICH

Heavy Bombers From Italy Pound Foe in South.

London, Aug. 29 (A. P.)—American fighters raced at treetop level over France and the Low Countries and into Germany today for the third straight day, bombing and strafing transport targets and air fields in a ceaseless effort to bring to a dead halt all enemy movements between the western front and the German frontier.

Knifing through a low ceiling, American and British fighter bombers based in France swept German strongpoints ahead of the advancing American and British troops. The scope of their operations were not announced immediately.

In the past two days fighter bombers of the Ninth United States Air Force alone knocked out 726 enemy motor vehicles, 258 railroad cars, twenty-three tanks, fifty-three ammunition carriers and twenty-one locomotives.

Mosquito squadrons of the Royal Air Force bombed rail and road transport from the mouth of the Seine to the German border all through the night, in continuation of the round-the-clock Allied air assault.

At the same time Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the Italian-based Fifteenth United States Air Force attacked objectives in Czecho-Slovakia, German Silesia, Hungary, Yugoslavia and the north of Italy. The targets in Silesia and Czecho-Slovakia were not named, but synthetic oil plants have been attacked before in those areas. The targets were overcast and bombing was by instrument.

A railway bridge over the Po at Ferrara, in the north of Italy, and bridges at Salcano and Borovnica, in Yugoslavia—on the only line left open into northeastern Italy—were bombed. Railway yards and a bridge were struck at Szeged in Hungary, midway between Budapest and Belgrade. Other yards were pounded at Szolnok, 100 miles east of Budapest, in operations supporting the Russian armies plunging through Romania and South Poland.

In their first high-level bombing in the Mediterranean theater, Lightning fighter-bombers attacked the Latisana Bridge over the Tagliamento River on the Venice-Trieste line.

Other squadrons of these hard-hitting speedsters, armed with everything from bullets to two-ton bombs, heaped new destruction on one of the last Seine crossing points available to Nazi remnants upstream from Rouen. Still others blasted the German city of Essen, home of the Krupp armament works.

It was disclosed, meanwhile, that the Allies have made full preparations for the air defense of Paris, which was attacked Sunday night by 25 to 30 German JU-88s but has not been raided since.

The twin-engined raiders dropped only small-caliber bombs, mostly incendiaries, it was revealed, and the death toll and damage would have been considerably smaller if the celebrating populace had not been caught unawares.

Up to noon there were no reports of heavy bombers operating over Germany, but the German radio said Italy-based planes, which yesterday attacked oil and rail installations in Austria, Hungary and northern Italy, again were smashing as far north as Upper Silesia.

30. 24 — 18357

Two Rail Yards Hit

Mosquitos penetrating as far as Metz and Strasbourg last night strafed several railway yards, more than 400 freight cars and 45 motor vehicles. Large fires were started in the yards at both Strasbourg and Metz.

Duclair ferry, where pontoon and barge escape bridges established by the Germans are squeezed into three horseshoe bends in the Seine between Rouen and Le Harve, were hit by Mosquitos only a few hours after its approaches had been bombed in daylight by RAF Mitchells and Bostons.

2d Robot-Free British Night

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—For the second night in succession southern England was free of flying bombs last night, but there was a brief flurry of activity shortly after daybreak, similar to the midafternoon alarms yesterday which broke a 30-hour lull.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower congratulated United States crews equipped with the most modern American anti-aircraft guns who were credited with knocking down about 35 per cent. of the robots which have been destroyed during the past month before reaching their targets.

It was disclosed that the famous Shoreditch Church in crowded eastern London was damaged in a recent flying-bomb attack. The Westham football grounds, scene of some of the biggest British matches, also was hit.

Shoreditch is one of those in the nursery rhyme on London church bells—"Now you'll get rich, says the bells of Shoreditch."

NAZI ROBOT BOMBS HAMMER ENGLAND

Goldberg

LONDON, Aug. 29. — (AP) The roar of flying bombs filled southern England's countryside again today, causing new deaths and destruction after two successive nights of respite.

The attacks were brief, but they upheld the government's warning that the end of the robot menace was not in sight despite the reported capture of 14 launching platforms in the Lisuex and Bernay area between Caen and the Seine and the incessant aerial pounding of others.

Sir Ernest Gowers, senior civil defense commissioner for London, told a Rotary Club luncheon that "we have not yet finished with the battle of this long drawnout attempt to break the spirit of London although we may confidently hope it now is in its final phase and this final phase is nearing its end."

Antiaircraft barrages met missiles sent over the channel today and fighter craft continued pursuit. A fair proportion of the robots were reported destroyed over the sea and over one area in Southern England. Some of the winged explosives still appeared to be coming from a point west of Boulogne.

It was revealed that flying bombs which recently damaged the old Shoreditch church in a crowded eastern London borough also hit industrial premises, killing several persons, setting a factory afire and damaging nearby shops and standing buses.

Also damaged were the British headquarters of the American foster parents plan at Woodberry down in North London and the Westham football ground, scene of some of England's biggest matches.

During the last month, American crews equipped with the latest AA guns, have been credited with about 35 per cent of the total kills scored against robot bombs directed toward southern England.

ROBOT COAST ATTACK BEGUN

British General Says Each Yard Gained Helps At Home

Greene

With British Troops East of the Seine, Aug. 29 (AP)—A British general issued a special order of the day today saying that the drive to wipe out the German flying bomb bases in northern France was about to start and that "for the first time in this war we are fighting directly to free our homes, our wives and our children from German attacks."

"Every yard we advance reduces the area from which he can launch his secret weapons," the general said in the message to his troops. "I realize that with this goal in front of us there is no need to urge you men onward."

"We are now in the van of the Allied armies, British, American and French, and we are about to start a deep drive into enemy-occupied France north of the Seine," the general announced.

Flying Bomb Country

"This is the country from which the Germans launch their flying bombs against England.

"Let us drive forward relentlessly—taking as our motto 'one more kilometer and one less bomb.'

"If [illegible] gives of his utmost, of the best [illegible] within a very short time our families will once more be able to sleep peacefully in their beds at night and our casualties since landing in Normandy will not have been suffered in vain."

The drive eastward across the Seine to destroy the springboard for the robots got off to a whirlwind start. Hundreds of British tanks, driving through a pelting rainstorm, crashed through flimsy German defenses for many miles.

Called "A Picnic"

By midday, within four hours after they set out, tank spearheads flashed back the word: "It's a picnic."

Other columns fanning out from the Seine bridgehead in the Vernon sector reported equally rapid progress despite muddy roads. At forward headquarters, however, I heard British commanders call for more and more speed.

"Where is everybody?" he asked. "There? They were there a half hour ago. Tell them to get on!"

From every direction came reports that the Germans were in retreat. The Seine line has proven less formidable than Field Marshal General Guenther von Kluge's series of river defenses to the west as the Allied armies head toward the plains of Picardy.

Pulled Out At 3.30

"The Germans pulled out in a hurry at 3.30 this morning," said a villager. "There were about 400 troops and quite a few 88-mm. guns. They didn't fire a shot."

At another village a Maquis leader pointed to a stream in which the Germans had thrown dozens of cases of 88 shells.

A British headquarters officer said hundreds of tanks were already across the Seine in a single sector "and we know the Germans only have a few."

At the height of the movement Shermans and Churchills were crossing the river at the rate of one a minute.

Folkestone Area Shaken, New Nazi Weapon Hinted

Shock May Have Come From French Demolition

FOLKESTONE, England, Aug. 30 (Wednesday) (AP).—This southeast coast town shook and the earth rumbled for several seconds just before midnight, and speculation immediately ranged from a prosaic demolition of a munitions dump in France to the possibility that the Germans were testing their long-threatened "vengeance weapon No. 2."

Various reports said the shock, whatever it was, shook the whole southeast coast and was the heaviest felt during the war.

People of Folkestone, who are used to such noises as air bombings, shelling and mine explosions at sea, said the sound in this case seemed different and appeared to originate a long distance away.

There was no blast effect and no one reported seeing any flash of light. Visibility over the Channel was not especially good.

BLAST SHAKES ENGLAND

LONDON, Aug. 29—(AP) A mysterious explosion—the heaviest felt in Britain since the war started—shook the whole southeastern coast of England just before midnight.

For several seconds the earth seemed to tremble as in an earthquake.

The shock appeared to come om a seaward direction and possibly was the result of the Germans blowing up a large munitions dump in northern France.

NAZI UNITS FLEE UP RHONE VALLEY

Uncounted Thousands Taken Prisoner by Swift-Moving Yanks.

Norgaard

ROME, Aug. 29.—(AP) The battle for southern France and destruction of the German 19th army neared completion tonight as uncounted thousands of Nazis trudged back to Allied prison camps and disorganized enemy remnants fled up the Rhone valley, scattering their equipment behind them.

The greater part of the army to which Adolf Hitler entrusted the defense of southern France against Allied invasion has been wiped out in a fortnight's whirlwind campaign by Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American and French 7th army.

Retreat to North

Whatever battered remnants managed to slip through the Allied noose and escaped to the north will have to be re-equipped and reorganized completely before they will again be of any real use to Hitler's hard-pressed forces.

American troops slashed relentlessly at the fleeing enemy above Montelimar in the Rhone valley, 100 miles north of Marseille, where a flying Yank column reached the eastern bank of the Rhone river in a surprise thrust last week. Montelimar itself was in American hands.

Valley roads were littered with abandoned German vehicles, guns and supplies. The few vehicles still in use by the shattered Nazi columns were able to use the roads only under almost constant attacks by Allied warplanes, still favored by perfect flying weather.

Allied headquarters said American tanks and infantry were locked in a particularly bitter fight with enemy elements in the area of Sauzet, four miles up the Rhone valley from Montelimar. From Montelimar to the sea west of Marseille the great valley was declared free of Nazis except for a scattered few who were left behind in the enemy's mad scramble to escape [illegible].

(A German news broadcast told of "fierce fighting" in the Rhone valley between Montelimar and Valence, 27 miles to the north, but declared that Nazi forces were withdrawing "in accordance with plan."

(The enemy radio also confirmed that American troops commanded by Brig. Gen. Frederic Butler had driven north from Grenoble and reached the Swiss border near Annemasse, five miles east of Geneva. Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, leading enemy military commentator, declared, however, that this represented only a "prestige victory" for the Americans as the "roads selected for the retreat of the army of Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz are not running in the direction of the Swiss frontier but considerably farther to the west.")

French Occupy Nimes

French troops, fanning out across the lower Rhone in drives toward the French-Spanish border, occupied Nimes, a city of 93,758 population, and reached the area of Uzes, west of Avignon.

Enthusiastic civilian volunteers joined American and French engineers in the big job of getting Toulon and Marseille harbors into shape to supply the Seventh army and to handle emergency food, medical and other supplies urgently needed by the population. Until the docks are in working order the bulk of shipping must still be unloaded on the Riviera beaches.

The great naval base at Toulon was found to have been virtually destroyed by Allied bombing and subsequent Nazi demolitions. Both arsenals were shattered, as was the main power plant, while the wreckage of tracks, crane, fuel tanks, warehouses, locomotives and rail cars littered the docks. Scores of sunken warships and other vessels dotted the harbor.

At least 10 Nazi submarines were found [illegible] and Toulon authorities reported the Germans were forced to abandon efforts to construct bomb-proof pens for the underwater craft because of repeated Allied air attacks.

It was disclosed that final German resistance in Marseille was wiped out yesterday after a powerful American, British and French naval force slammed more than 2,700 rounds into a constricted target area, fairly enveloping the holdout Nazis in fires and explosions. Two battleships and numerous heavy and light cruisers participated in the terrific pounding. Some 7,000 dirty and beaten enemy troops surrendered and were sent streaming back to Allied stockades.

There was almost a total lack of bread in Marseille, and flour had the No. 1 priority among emergency supplies being rushed into France's second city.

Advance Eastward

The Allied command announced that American forces pushing eastward along the Riviera toward the Italian frontier had occupied the towns of Cagnes, ten miles northeast of Cannes, and Vence, five miles inland from Cagnes. Nice was expected to fall shortly.

Farther north, along the French-Italian frontier in the Alps, the situation was somewhat obscure.

French In Nimes, Uzes In Rhone Advance

Tregler

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP) — French troops of the Seventh Army, in sweeps well west of the Rhone in southern France, reached Uzes and drove through Nimes today, forming a solid southern buffer to help wipe out the battered German 19th Army, already cut off by an American surprise thrust to river far to the north.

From Nimes, a city of 93,758 population 14 miles beyond the Rhone, one French column turned southwest along the coast in a drive toward the French-Spanish border.

Other French columns extending west and northwest of Avignon for at least 24 miles to the Uzes area won control of a triangular region north of which the fleeing Germans are being pressed against the Americans just above Montelimar, some 45 miles from Avignon.

20 Miles From Italy

The flying column under the command of Brig. Gen. Frederic Butler which reached the Montelimar area Friday, after inflicting wholesale punishment on at least one force of 15,000 German troops, killing many and possibly knocking out the remainder, continued to spread out through the entire region.

Reports from there said roads were strewn with destroyed German transport and other vehicles.

A further retreat northward along the Rhone Valley was announced in the German communique. The Germans said their Marseille garrison still was resisting.

American forces on the eastern coastal flank late yesterday drove into Cagnes, ten miles northeast of Cannes, and Vence, five miles inland due north of Cagnes—advances which placed them five miles from Nice and only 20 miles from the Italian frontier.

Fort Surrenders

Thousands of German troops fell into Allied hands with the surrender of the final holdout enemy resistance in Marseille. The full liberation of Marseille and Toulon gives the Allies adequate port facilities for any operations necessary, not only for the military campaign but for rehabilitation of the liberated areas.

Surrender of forts on the St. Mandrier peninsula in the Toulon area brought an end to fighting in the coastal area.

The surrender was arranged through Lieut. Gen. Gotthold Schaefer, commanding the German 244th Division and Supreme Nazi commander in the Marseille region.

Fleet Bombardment

The surrender of the St. Mandrier garrison came after the enemy coastal batteries were heavily bombarded by French, British and American naval vessels—including the French battleship Lorraine and the British battleship Ramillies.

Other elements of the fleet penetrated into the Gulf of Genoa, sinking one enemy vessel and possibly sinking another.

Even while the last sporadic bursts of fire were sweeping the streets of the ports, Allied-supplied food, drugs and medicinal supplies were being hur ed into the area and distributed among the French natives.

The first ents contained flour. Meat a ar followed.

ALLIED FORCES DRIVE ON PESARA

ROME, Aug. 29.—(AP) Polish forces driving up the Adriatic coast of Italy have captured the village of Fano, six miles from Pesaro, and are pushing forward within three miles of the Germans' Gothic Line outposts in that sector, Allied headquarters announced today.

The Nazis appeared to have withdrawn almost the last of their troops into the Gothic Line, a powerful barrier of steel and concrete, and to be awaiting an assault by the Allied Fifth and Eighth armies.

(A dispatch from the Swiss-Italian border on Monday reported the Germans were evacuating three provinces of northern Italy and pulling back toward the Brenner Pass, suggesting that Hitler might have decided to give up the long-prepared Gothic defenses without a fight. There was nothing to support this from Allied sources.)

Apparently fearful that Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth army was about ready to strike across the Arno river west of Florence, the enemy called upon his small remaining air force yesterday which bombed and machine-gunned Allied positions at several points along the stream.

An Allied communique said Eighth army units near the Adriatic had driven the Germans north of the Azzilla river and occupied high ground above Monte Ciccardo. Farther inland the Poles were reported enveloping the town of Urbino. Rufina, 10 miles east and slightly north of Florence, was evacuated by the Nazis.

Forward defenses of the Gothic Line were believed to be anchored at Pesaro, 19 miles down the Adriatic coast from the important port of Rimi. Thence they apparently follow a lateral road inland to the 1,000-foot peak of Monte Calvo, six miles due north of Urbino and 17 miles south of Rimini.

Allies Push Near Outposts Of Gothic Line

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—French Forces of the Interior and Italian Patriots have occupied the St. Bernard Pass between France and Italy (apparently the Little Bernard Pass), the British radio said today, quoting Swiss reports.

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP)—Forward elements of the Eighth Army, advancing along the entire eastern half of the Italian front, have pushed at one point to within three miles of the formidable fortifications of the Nazis' Gothic Line, Allied headquarters disclosed today.

A communique announced infantry and tanks had surged forward throughout the sector, with Polish forces on the coast occupying the town of Fang and establishing a line on the southern bank of the Arzilla river. Further inland other units punched across that stream.

Germans Dig In

It appeared, however, the enemy's voluntary withdrawal has ended as the Nazis settled themselves into the prepared defenses.

(The United Nations radio in Algiers said Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark had announced his Fifth Army has taken a total of 47,000 Nazi prisoners thus far in the campaign.)

The forward defenses of the Gothic Line are anchored at Pesaro on the Adriatic coast. Thence they follow the lateral road inland to the 1,000-foot peak of Monte Calvo six miles due north of Urbino and 17 miles due south of Rimini.

Bridgehead Held Strongly

East of Florence Allied units have established a firm bridgehead over the Arno river within striking distance of the Gothic Line outposts.

Apparently fearful the Allied command was preparing to strike across the Arno at a number of points, the Germans called upon their carefully hoarded air force to bomb and strafe several points in the Fifth Army sector west of Florence.

The Poles found Fano heavily booby trapped. Headquarters said 25 mines were removed from one house alone.

CASSINO PLANS APPROVED

125 One-Family Homes Will Be Built at Devastated Town

ROME, Aug. 29 (AP)—Plans for reconstruction of Cassino—theatre of some of the war's most bitter fighting—have been approved and 125 one-family houses will be erected soon at the devastated town, the Allied Control Commission for Italy announced today.

Italian suggestions that the houses be equipped with modern plumbing and lighting were discarded, the commission pointing out that former houses did not have them.

The wreckage of Cassino itself will not be disturbed for the present.

Col. William V. O'Dwyer, ranking American official on the Control Commission's economic section, told a press conference that about one-third of the Pontine Marsh area, flooded by the Germans, had been drained, and that probably one-half of it would be available for next year's planting.

An ACC food expert said "poor people in Rome are suffering terribly, no doubt," but he declared that dietary conditions in the capital were expected to improve greatly after Sept. 1 with increased transportation of supplies.

CHURCHILL WARNS PEOPLE OF ITALY

Rome, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill has indicated that Italy cannot expect to sit as a full ally of the United Nations at the peace table at the war's end.

"Naturally, we cannot forget the circumstances of Mussolini's attack on France and Great Britain when we were at our weakest," he declared in a farewell message to the Italian people, released last night.

[Mr. Churchill arrived in London tonight by air from Italy.]

A nation which has allowed itself to fall into a tyrannical regime must work its own way out, he observed.

Mr. Churchill, who left Rome last Wednesday, said that Italy's first duty was to purge her soil of "the foul German taint," and added:

"After this has been done, and the power of Hitlerism has been broken forever, the responsibility will lie on Italy to make sure that no similar fate deprives her of the liberties she will gain at the end of this hard road of error and suffering."

Expressing the belief that a free and progressive Italy would eventually take her place among the world's leading nations, he declared that true unity would be needed, however, to reach that goal.

Pro-Nazi Hungarian Regime Falls, German Troops Pour In

Ankara, Aug. 29 (AP)—It was believed in Ankara tonight that Stoicho Moshanov, Bulgarian peace emissary, had informed the Allies of Bulgaria's acceptance of armistice terms.

Although there was no confirmation, informed sources said an armistice with Bulgaria was imminent. Owing to military considerations, it was said, the document might be signed at Cairo.

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Hungarian Government of pro-Nazi Doeme Sztojay fell today amid Allied and Axis reports that Nazi troops were withdrawing from Bulgaria to bolster the Hungarian frontier defenses against the approaching Red army.

The Hungarian regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, accepted the resignation of Sztojay's government and appointed Col. Gen. Vitez Geza Lakatos as new Premier, according to the German news agency, Transocean.

At the same time the Germans occupied Slovakia, pouring troops into that puppet country because of recent parachutist and guerrilla activity there.

Gen. Catlos Tells Of Occupation

The occupation of Nazi-created Slovakia was disclosed in a broadcast of Gen. Ferdinand Catlos, commander in chief of Slovakia's armed forces, over the Bratislava radio. The nation had been under martial law since August 12.

Catlos appealed to the people to receive the Germans as friends and obey "only Government orders."

The Hungarian development followed a visit to Budapest by Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, supreme commander of German forces. Keitel flew back to Berlin after conferences with Horthy and War Minister Lajos Csatay, who retained his place in the reshuffled Cabinet.

Hitler Shores Up Defense

Thus Hitler appeared to be trying to shore up the greater Reich's last defenses against the Russians, who already have been reported crossing the Carpathian Mountains into Hungarian territory.

Occupied Hungary—frightened by the Red army and its promises to help Romanians recover Transylvania—has been quailing politically under German demands for a "total war" effort.

In addition to Csatay the new cabinet retained Finance Minister Lajos Remenyi-Scheller, agriculture minister Bela Yurczek and interior minister Nikolaus Bonczos.

Henyey Named Minister

Lt. Gen. Gustav Henyey was named new foreign minister. Other new ministers, Transocean said, were Minister of Justice Gabriel Vladar, Minister for Culture Ivan Rakovszky, President of Board of Trade Oliver Markos and Minister for Industry Tibor Gyulay.

Qualified observers in London saw the Hungarian reshuffle—executed within 24 hours of the Russian crossing into Transylvania—as producing a Hungarian "Mannerheim" cabinet, studded with generals and strong men.

Both the new premier and foreign minister are military figures. Henyey is former corps commander at Stuhlweissenburg.

(The German controlled Hungarian News Agency, Mti, reported Sztojay resigned because of "his state of health.")

The Sztojay cabinet was formed last March after the Germans formally occupied Hungary. Sztojay had previously been Hungarian minister to Berlin. Immediately after his government was formed to succeed that of Nicholas Kallay, the Germans poured in additional troops.

Before the March occupation Hungary had been a favored and sometimes recalcitrant satellite, bribed with a slice of Ruthenia, some Yugoslav territory and the province of Transylvania taken from Hungary by the Vienna award.

Hitler Honored Lakatos

Lakatos was commander of Hungarian toops on the Eastern front. He was awarded the Knights Cross of the Iron Cross by Hitler in May of this year for action there.

Officially denying "foreign press statements" that it had accepted Bulgaria's declaration of neutrality, Moscow served notice that Sofia must surrender to, and take terms from the United States and Great Britain—with whom she is at war.

"Soviet leading circles consider the neutrality proclaimed by the Bulgarian government entirely insufficient under the circumstances of the present situation," a Moscow foreign office statement said.

"This is Moscow getting into line with us and notifying Bulgaria to make terms with us," said a British foreign office spokesman.

It was Moscow which Saturday announced Bulgaria's neutrality stand.

Meanwhile the Bulgarian radio broadcast that Bulgar troops were being withdrawn from seized occupied territories. This withdrawal is widely believed to be one of the demands under the British-American terms.

Both German and Russian reports said Nazi soldiers were being evacuated from Bulgaria and massed against the Red army.

Moscow radio, quoting the Bulgarian news agency, said the Germans had begun withdrawing their troops and would have them all out of the country within a few days. Diplomatic sources in Ankara also said evacuation of the Nazi forces was speeding up.

Sabotage On In Romania

Reconnaissance pilots of the 15th Air Force, based in Italy, reported that missions over Romania had not yet shown any signs of large-scale evacuation of German troops from Romania into Hungary and Yugoslavia.

There was some indication instead, the reconnaissance showed, that the Germans had succeeded in regrouping a sizable force in the path of the Soviet spearhead pushing southwestward through the Galati Gap.

Reds Deny Approval Of Bulgar Neutrality

London, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—The Moscow radio tonight denied what it described as "foreign press statements" that Russia had accepted a Bulgarian declaration of neutrality.

Moscow called Bulgaria's declaration of neutrality "totally insufficient" to meet the situation which had arisen, indicating that Bulgaria must do more in order to get out of the war.

The conclusion also was drawn from the broadcast that Bulgaria must comply with armistice demands to be presented by the United States and Britain. Bulgaria is not at war with Russia.

Bulgaria Reports Nazis Leaving

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—Reports that the Germans have started withdrawing troops from peace-seeking Bulgaria coincided today with Istanbul dispatches suggesting that American-British armistice terms already have been received by Allied diplomats there for relay to Sofia.

The Moscow radio, quoting the Bulgarian News Agency, said the Germans were beginning to move out of Bulgaria and asserted the withdrawal would be completed within a few days.

"Disarming of German troops crossing the Bulgaria-Romania frontier is going on," the broadcast added.

Envoys' Parley Reported

Istanbul advices, meanwhile, told of a flurry of diplomatic activity including an hour-long conference yesterday between the United States and British Ambassadors Lawrence A. Steinhardt and Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen.

It was believed in Istanbul, these dispatches said, that the Ambassadors might have received from Washington and London the terms which will be offered Bulgaria. Only yesterday it was disclosed that terms drawn up in consultation with the European Advisory Commission would be presented to Bulgaria within a few days.

Russian Arrives

Also apparently linked with the Bulgarian situation was the news that the charge d'affaires of the Soviet Embassy in Sofia, P. N. Kirsanov, had arrived in Ankara yesterday. Soviet circles in Ankara were quoted as saying Kirsanov was returning to Moscow, presumably to report.

Russia is not at war with Bulgaria, but has been kept informed by London and Washington of pending negotiations.

(A Bulgarian domestic broadcast reported in New York today by the Federal Communications Commission said the Bulgarian Government had rescinded all anti-Jewish measures. The British radio also quoted Sofia as saying the Bulgarian Commissariat for Jewish Affairs would be dissolved.)

POLISH CABINET HOLDS SESSION

London Group Expected to Vote to Dissolve.

London, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—In an atmosphere of mixed hope and suspicion the cabinet of the London Polish Government in Exile will meet tonight and probably commit itself to political suicide as a sacrifice to its homeland's unity. The cabinet is expected to approve and dispatch to the Soviet Union the memoranda of Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk on Polish-Russian relations and methods for reaching an accord with the Moscow-sponsored Polish Liberation Committee.

If the proposals are acceptable to Russia it will mean reconstitution of the cabinet and transfer of its activities to Poland.

The Cabinet session was called as informants close to the exiled government declared bitterly that the Russians had ignored urgent American-British requests and failed to aid the resistance movement within Warsaw. Neither diplomats nor Allied Air Force spokesmen would discuss a report that the Russians had refused requests to make bases available for a shuttle air supply service to Warsaw, but it gained widespread circulation in London and had strained relations between Joseph Stalin and the London Poles, which had been preserved during the recent weeks of delicate negotiations, chiefly through British persuasion.

Envoys on Way to Meet Allies

CAIRO, Aug. 29 (AP).—The arrival of Bulgarian envoys at a Mediterranean rendezvous to receive British-American peace terms is imminent.

[A Reuters dispatch from Cairo said talks would begin Wednesday.]

Wounds Fatal to War Correspondent

London, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—William Makin, war correspondent for the Kemsley newspapers of Great Britain, died today of wounds suffered while reporting United States Army attacks in the Cherbourg peninsula. His widow and three children survive.

Germany Willing to Quit, Says Nazi Commentator

LONDON, Aug. 29. — (AP) In a gloomy review of the Nazi war picture, Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar implied tonight that Germany would be willing to cease fighting if the Allies would relax their war aims and substitute "an attitude of reason and better understanding." He addressed the German people by radio.

The high command propagandist acknowledged German reverses in France and deplored developments in Romania, but said that nevertheless Germany "has to continue as long as our enemies stick to their war aims," and "as long as reason and better understanding have replaced this determination "to destroy Germany."

"If this determination did not exist," he said, "if the world we face had been ready honestly to recognize the living rights of a great, capable and hardworking nation, no reason could have been seen why this misery had to fill the world once more for half a decade, and will continue to fill it."

Dittmar said that the development of the war situation "may certainly have raised the hopes among our enemies that his objective, the military defeat of Germany, is no longer as far away as only three months ago."

"The outward development of events even appears to justify this view to a large extent," he said.

Drawing a parallel between Allies successes in 1944 and the German victories of 1940, Dittmar said that "equipment led to success — and the numerical superiority is to the other side."

He added, however, that "it is high praise of the individual German fighter and of the German leadership, if we note that—and this distinguishes it from the much shorter period of fighting in 1940—the British and Americans are still on a bloody and tiresome road, whose end cannot be gauged yet."

Dittmar said it is now a "question of self preservation or annihilation," adding, "in two months we have lost a considerable proportion of the fruits we harvested earlier and thought we could hold for good as a foundation for our economic and military position."

The German retreats in southern France "gave time in helping the prospect of establishing somewhere a new, firm front, following the arrival of new forces," he said.

Regarding the Eastern front Dittmar said "it would be madness to deny that developments in Romania in every respect are unwelcome to us. The Romanian army contained much good fighting material."

Jap War Now Nazi Concern

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—Declaring that Germans are showing increasing interest in the war in the Pacific, the Nazi Transocean propaganda agency said today in a Berlin broadcast that the Deutsche Algemeine Zeitung has started a daily review of military events in the Far East.

"Today's issue describes President Roosevelt's trip to the Pacific as a preliminary to an Allied assault upon the coast of China and the Philippines," the broadcast said. "One may also deduct from Roosevelt's report the Russians will be asked to become more active in the Pacific."

Japan Lifts Price Ceilings

LONDON, Aug. 29 (AP).—Prices of fresh vegetables and fish throughout Japan will be raised from 20 to 60 per cent effective tomorrow with relaxation of price ceilings, a Berlin broadcast said tonight. The fixed prices are being abandoned to insure a better supply of these foodstuffs to big cities, the annauncement explained.

TITO TAKES STRONGHOLD

Bulgarian Force Is Crushed in Advance in Serbia

LONDON, Aug. 29 (AP)—Marshal Tito announced today that his Yugoslav Partisans had captured the fortified enemy stronghold of Palisad Zlaticor in Serbia, killing 850 Bulgarians and capturing 120 out of a force of 1,400.

His broadcast communiqué also said that a Polish battalion formed in Yugoslavia had particularly distinguished itself in Bosnia.

Belgians Seek Repartriation

LONDON, Aug. 29 (AP).—The 12,000 Belgians in England are looking forward to repatriation. Hundreds of them are applying to the Belgian Commissariat of Repatriation for passage on the first boat home.

Russians Cut Oil Pipe Line From Ploesti

70-Mile Drive Puts Them Within 29 Miles of the Bulgarian Border

Romanians Hem In Nazis From South

Bitter Fighting Reported in Bucharest; Soviets Are Gaining in Estonia

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 30 (Wednesday).—Russian forces in a daring combined land and sea operation yesterday captured Constanta, Romania's great Black Sea port and for three years the main German naval base in those waters.

Seizure of the city of 60,000 represented an 85-mile advance by sea from the port of Sulina, taken Monday, and of 70 miles by land from Tulcea on the Danube, and it put Russian troops only 29 miles from the Bulgarian border.

Has 37 Storage Tanks

Constanta, terminus of the oil pipeline from Ploesti, has at least 37 huge petroleum storage tanks and a special tanker basin.

In announcing its fall, Premier Stalin credited fast-moving motorized and tank formations of Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army and naval forces under Admiral E. S. Oktyabrsky.

Twenty-nine miles farther south lies the border established in September, 1940, when Romania ceded the Southern Dobruja territory of 2,883 square miles below the Danube to Bulgaria under pressure from Bulgaria, Germany and Italy.

Bulgaria is not at war with Russia and has been seeking to get out of her war against Britain and the United States.

The Germans already had acknowledged during the day that Soviet troops had reached the Ploesti-Constanta pipeline.

They also admitted withdrawing from Buzau, oil and railway town 40 miles northeast of Ploesti.

The Soviet midnight communique, confirming capture of Buzau, said more than 150 other towns were taken in the extending drive in that region less than 60 miles northeast of Bucharest. The communique also listed 50 towns taken in the southward sweep across the Danube to Constanta.

Gains of as much as twenty-five miles were registered in a single day in the area south of the Danube and north and northwest of Constanta, an early morning supplement to the communique said, while gains of nineteen miles were made in the drive that was declared to have forced the Germans out of Buzau in "disorderly flight."

The Russians were silent on the progress of the thrust into Hungarian territory, but devoted a portion of the communique supplement to a prediction that "the time is not far off when all the Hungarian lackeys of Hitler will fall head over heels."

Invade Transylvania

With Russian mountain troops invading Hungarian-held Transylvania at two points to the northwest, the shadow of a potential death trap fell over the Germans still standing to defend the vital Ploesti oil region.

At least one division of elite anti-aircraft troops is believed to be in the Ploesti district, plus the Nazi forces driven out of Bucharest by the Romanian army and those falling back before the Soviet drive down through Focsani and Buzau.

Romanian troops already were hemming in the Ploesti garrison from the south, and the German radio declared tonight "very bitter fighting is taking place between Romanian and German troops in Bucharest and Ploesti."

The Ploesti wells which once furnished Germany at least one-third of her natural oil needs, stretch for about 60 miles from Sinaia eastward in the direction of Soviet-captured Ramincul-Sarat. In places the field is as much as 25 miles wide.

Both Buzau and Constanta are of high tactical value to the Russians. The former, a city of 36,000, is a junction for the railroads from Ploesti, Ramnicul-Sarat and Braila and is an important market center for petroleum, timber and grain. The Germans said they left it in flames after hard fighting.

The Germans also said the Russians pushing into Hungarian territory in the Carpathians were using parachute troopers.

The Moscow radio disclosed that in Monday's amphibious operations that took Tulcea and Sulina not a single vessel was lost. A garrison of 1,400 was captured at Sulina, Moscow said, while twelve river warships were seized at Tulcea and other naval vessels were captured farther up the Danube.

Moscow was silent concerning developments on the East Prussian border, but said that southeast of Warsaw the Russians had hurled back several German attacks and occupied more favorable positions and had made continuing advances northeast and southeast of Valga, Estonian communications center, despite German counter-attacks.

Reds Nearer Ploesti And Bucharest

Gilmore

Moscow, Aug. 29 (AP)—Swift Russian drives through Romania approached the great oil center of Ploesti and Bucharest today as one army poured across a 75-mile stretch on the Danube and another knifed 15 miles inside Hungarian-held Transylvania.

Hungarian and German troops were reported massing in Transylvania, the 16,642 square-mile section of Romania which Hitler gave to Hungary in 1940. The sudden Russian push through passes in the Carpathians gave the Red army the good base town of Bretscu on a railroad and highway.

Buzau Reported Captured

(The German communique said the Russians, rushing in from all sides, had captured Buzau, 40 miles northeast of Ploesti and 60 miles from Bucharest. Buzau is a rail and road junction 60 miles west of Braila, the large Danube port which the Russians captured last night.)

The entire Danube delta was in Russian hands and troops which crossed the Danube on a wide front were racing for the Black Sea port of Constanta and the roads leading to Bucharest from the east and northeast.

Nazi Flotilla Captured

The Russians captured a large flotilla on the Danube, and each hour new ships were arriving on the Danube and Black Sea coast behind Russian lines, flying the Red flag.

Already the Ploesti oil field derricks, north of the city, were in sight of Russian troops. Cossacks, tanks and motorized infantry on the plains before the Romanian capital ranged close to the city of 650,000, feeling out German resistance.

45 Miles From Brasov

Other Russians deep in capitulated Romania edged within 45 miles of Brasov, 12th city of the kingdom with 62,000 inhabitants, and seriously menaced any chance the Germans might have for a stand.

The Red army was moving forward on a 200-mile front from positions inside Transylvania west of the main Carpathian ridge to the Black Sea between captured Sulina and Constanta. Red Star reported the surrender of monocled Gen. Makhai Boiko, commander of the 14th Romanian Division, and said: "Of course, Boiko's division is not yet in a state for fighting, but the general expressed his wish to reform the division and fight against the Germans." The commander was quoted as saying he deserted General Count von Chulsen when the German demanded gasoline, ammunition and food for his hard-pressed corps.

BOR REPORTS NAZI SHIFT

Poles' Warsaw Chief Says Foe Is Moving From Praga

LONDON, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Polish Press Bureau said today that the Germans were removing troops, tanks and guns from Praga, eastern suburb of besieged Warsaw, to the west bank of the Vistula River which flows through the capital.

"Yesterday the Germans moved 200 tanks and the previous day they moved almost 100 tanks, thirty big guns and 100 armored cars across the Kierbedzia Bridge," General Bor, commander of the Polish patriot army fighting inside Warsaw, was reported as radioing.

General Bor said the Holy Cross Church had changed hands many times and that in a fire there, "the urn containing the hand of Chopin

[the composer] was burned and lost." The commander said Polish peasants were supplying his fighters with food and homemade arms, shells and hand grenades.

"For two weeks, we have not seen a single Allied plane over Warsaw," General Bor was quoted as saying.

Trap In Grave Of Pushkin

Moscow, Aug. 29 (AP)—The state investigating committee of German atrocities, headed by the Leningrad journalist Nikolai Tikhanov, reported the Nazis put a booby trap in the grave of the beloved Russian poet, Alexander Pushkin.

The committee listed the names of numerous Russians who lost their lives visiting Pushkin's grave.

The Nazis were also accused of burning the church in Trigorie, Pushkin's home, where the Russian poet held funeral services for Lord Byron. The Cathedral of the Assumption at Trigorie, built by Ivan the Terrible, was blown up and the 200-year-old bell was smashed. More than 300,000 cubic meters was cut from the beautiful woods of Pushkin Park and burned by the Germans for firewood.

MURDER CAMP DETAILS TOLD

SS Officers Testify Thousands Died In Lublin Slaughter

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Lubin, Poland, Aug 27 (AP—Delayed)—Four German prisoners of war stood with a bored mien in front of a Russian-Polish atrocities commission here tonight and told their stories of Majdanek, perhaps the greatest horror in Nazi Europe.

In curt phrases they asserted that men, women and children of 22 nationalities had been gassed, hanged, shot, burned, drugged or starved to death in the three years of the operation of the Majdanek barbed-wire-enclosed encampment in a rolling meadowland at the edge of Lublin. Russians and Poles have estimated that it received more than half a million persons doomed to extermination.

Murder On Vast Scale

Majdanek is a ghastly fantasy. It was established for murder on a vast but methodical scale.

Until a group of American and British correspondents visited it today—with its six concrete vaults for execution by cyanide or carbon monoxide gas, its open-air crematorium surrounded with skeletons, its mounds of human ashes mixed with manure for fertilizing cabbage patches and its overflow burial ground in a pine woods carpeted with decaying bodies—most of these newspapermen could not even begin to imagine the proportions of its frightfulness.

Tonight with our clothes still reeking of the dead, we sat in a stuffy Lublin courtroom while three German SS (Elite Guard) officers and one German civilian renegade spoke indifferently of Majdanek's scenes of slaughter and blamed all on "orders from above."

Black Marketeer On Detail

N. A. Stalb, a blond six-foot German butcher arrested in 1939 for selling meat in the black market, told in a clear, strong voice of his incarceration in Majdanek, during which he once became a member of the barracks police detail.

"I have seen a tractor haul as many as 400 corpses at one time from the 'bath and disinfection house' to the ovens on the hill," he said.

"One day I saw the bodies of 157 Polish children who had been gassed. Another time I saw a group of Polish women marched up a hill to be shot to save the trouble of gassing them. They were ordered to disrobe. One refused, a girl about 28 to 29. Two men tied her hands and legs, put her on a steel stretcher and thrust her alive into the white-hot oven."

Shipped Clothes To Germany

Herman Vogel, 42, an SS group leader from Mulheim, stared ahead with a set face as he told of shipping 18 carloads of clothing in two months to Germany from the Majdanek warehouse he supervised.

"Yes, all this clothing, even babies' garments, belonged to those executed," he said. "I have seen groups of 120 to 150 persons taken to the gashouse in the evening and their bodies stacked outside the next morning. Yes, I knew children were murdered, but what could we small people in the SS do? We couldn't protest."

SS Komandofuehrer Theodore Schoelen, 40, in charge of clothing collection at the shower room adjoining the gas chambers, claimed he never saw an execution—only corpses afterward.

18,400 In Single Day

He admitted remembering November 3, 1943, when, according to the camp records, 18,400 prisoners received "special treatment" which reduced the number of camp inmates by that number.

"It was an order from above, perhaps direct from Berlin," he said. "The wireless played Strauss waltzes through the camp loudspeakers all that day."

Coalition Urged.

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—The Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation has asked Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, premier of the exiled Polish regime in London, to head a unified provisional Polish government, Committee President Edward Bolesław Osubka-Morawski has announced.

Mr. Osubka-Morawski disclosed that the national committee also offered places in a unified government to three other members of the Polish regime in London. The committee's plan for the new government was presented to Mr. Mikolajczyk during his mission to Moscow early in August.

Mr. Osubka-Morawski denied that the London Government was supported wholeheartedly by the four major parties of Poland and said: "If Mikolajczyk doesn't accept our generous offer we believe the London regime will break up in a crisis. Much depends upon Mikolajczyk."

Tadeusz Romer, Foreign Minister of the London Government is unacceptable in any unified cabinet but he might be useful again as an ambassador, the committee president asserted.

Boundaries of Poland after the war, he asserted, would embrace East Prussia and in the west would follow the Nissa River to the Oder and thence to the sea, with Stettin becoming a Polish city.

He declared the Poles "won't allow any Germans to remain in Poland, not even women and children."

Nazis Warned Warsaw Army Is Allied Force

U. S. and Britain Insist on Combat Status; 200,000 Poles Are Reported Slain

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 (AP).—The United States government recognizes the Polish Home Army as a combat force and has warned Germany that she will be held responsible for reprisals against it, the State Department announced tonight.

The statement followed a report by Polish Ambassador Jan Ciechanowski to the American and British governments that the Germans were trying to exterminate the population of Warsaw as revenge for the military activity of Polish patriot forces inside the city.

New Finnish Peace Approach To Russia Believed In Air

Stockholm, Aug. 29 (AP)—The impression grew in Stockholm today that Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, President of Finland, was about ready to take up direct contact with Russia for an armistice. It was learned that his Government sent a message yesterday to Moscow through diplomatic channels.

The contents of the message were not disclosed but Finland's peace envoy to Russia, Juho Kosti Paasikivi, was called back to Helsinki late yesterday from Nadendal, where he had been resting.

Minister Consulted

It was recalled that Finnish Minister George Grippenberg returned here from Helsinki Sunday after consulting the Mannerheim Government.

Paasikivi told the Associated Press he thought it "premature" to comment on the political situation.

There were reliable reports, however, that he was asked to return to the capital for an appointment as a Cabinet member without portfolio, which would give him a better status on a peace mission.

Foreign Minister Likely

Another likely selection for the peace mission would be C. J. A. Enckell, who as Foreign Minister logically would head it. Both went to Moscow in March.

It was understood here that Moscow was willing to receive a peace delegation only if it was empowered to reach and sign an agreement.

Mandel Reported Slain In Reprisal

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP)—A French informant declared today that Georges Mandel, anti-collaborationist who sought to form a government to carry on the war against Germany from North Africa after the French collapse of 1940, was taken from prison in Paris early this month by the Germans and slain in reprisal for the Maquis killing of Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Propaganda.

The French informant said there was no truth to Axis radio reports of July 14 that Mandel was killed by French patriots who attacked his guards, "while he was being transferred from one prison to another."

Henriot, the "Goebbels of France," was killed June 28 by Maquis executioners who entered his bedroom, Axis reports said.

Irun, Spain, Wednesday, Aug. 30 (AP)—French authorities in Hendaye, just across the border from here, have lost all contact with the French Forces of the Interior in Bordeaux, it was learned today.

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP)—Thousands of tons of desperately needed food were pouring into Paris today by air and truck convoys for immediate distribution to retail stores. Four hundred American transport planes were in the cargo fleet.

Texas Veteran Pilots Gen. Koenig To Paris

London, Aug. 29 (AP)—Capt. Ira Sullivan, of Waco, Texas, piloted an Eighth Air Force plane which took the French Lieutenant General Joseph Pierre Koenig to Paris.

Sullivan, who soloed at 12, was a general in the Mexican air force at 21, and piloted a Loyalist plane in the Spanish civil war, had to find his own landing field in the French capital.

First he landed at Chartres, drove on to Paris, and inspected the airfields. One was pock-marked with large craters, but Sullivan marked off a landing strip, returned to Chartres, and took Koenig to Paris, landing without incident.

Later he learned the strip had two imbedded bombs.

3 Prominent Frenchmen Are Arrested By FFI

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP)—Sacha Guitry, French author and actor; Pierre Fresnay, actor, and Bernard Fay, the historian, have been arrested by the French Forces of the Interior and are believed held for interrogation on their activities during the Nazi occupation of Paris.

Meanwhile, there are persistent rumors, unconfirmed by the FFI, or any other French authority, that Maurice Chevalier, screen star, was arrested and shot by that organization.

Chevalier's whereabouts since the fight for Paris has been a secret. Guitry, Fresnay and Fay were arrested on August 27.

Pinbaw Is Taken In Burma Drive

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Aug. 29 (AP)—The northern Burma strong point of Pinbaw, on the Mogaung-Mandalay railway, has been captured by British troops who are pursuing retreating Japanese on down the line, Allied headquarters announced today.

Wiping out a strong rear guard at the entrance of Pinbaw, the British found the town unoccupied when they entered.

Starvation and disease were reported spreading among Japanese troops in Kabaw Valley farther east after Allied flanking moves and air blows had severed their communication lines. Nearly 1,000 men, including all officers, were said to have been lost from one Japanese battalion in this area.

The new Moulmein-Bangkok railway, which the Japanese are rushing to completion for troop movements to offset loss of sea routes to Burmese ports, was attacked by United States Liberator bombers, headquarters said.

British Take Town On Mandalay Railway

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Aug. 29 (AP)—British troops have captured the town of Pinbaw on the Mogaung-Mandalay railway in northern Burma and now are pushing on down the line in pursuit of withdrawing Japanese forces, Allied headquarters announced today.

The announcement said the enemy had left a strong rear guard at the entrance to Pinbaw, but that it had been wiped out by British forces which found the town itself unoccupied.

Unit Starved Out

In the Kabaw Valley farther east, hundreds of Japanese were reported starving to death as the result of Allied flanking moves and air smashes which have severed their communication lines.

One battalion in this sector was said to have lost nearly 1,000 men, including all its officers.

New Rail Line Hit

United States Liberator bombers, meanwhile, successfully attacked the new Moulmein-Bankok railway, which the Japanese are rushing to completion for the movement of troops to central Burma to offset the loss of sea routes to Burmese ports, headquarters said.

Fighter-bombers continued their offensive against river transport on the Chindwin, while Beaufighters shot up railway trains near Moulmein and scored direct hits on a steamer south of Rangoon.

Chungking, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Counter-attacking Japanese have retaken the northwest gate of Tengchung, but the Chinese troops in the southern part of that Yunnan city have captured four pillboxes around the temple which the enemy has converted into a strongpoint, the Chinese High Command said today. Tengchung, one of the main Japanese bases in Yunnan province, has been under siege by Chinese troops driving west of the Salween River in an attempt to join the Allied forces in north Burma.

CHINESE CAPTURE RAILWAY TOWN IN HUNAN PROVINCE

CHUNGKING, Aug. 29 — (AP) Supported by far-ranging American warplanes, Chinese forces today captured Suchowtang on the Canton-Hankow railway 55 miles north of the enemy-held bastion of Hengyang and increased their threat of Japanese communications along the vital Siang river, main supply line for Hunan province, the Chinese command announced.

Enemy columns trying to envelop or smash Chinese troops menacing Hengyang met stiff resistance east of Yungfeng, 45 miles northwest of the city, and there was severe fighting with considerable casualties on both sides, a communique said.

Chinese General Removed

On the home front, the Chinese government announced the removal of Gen. Shen Shih Tsai from the governorship of Sinkiang, in far northwest China. Gen. Wu Chung Hsin, current chairman of the Mongolian and Tibetan affairs commission, was named as his successor.

The chance—taken as a friendly gesture to Russia—was one of the most important governorship switches in China since 1927 when President Chiang Kai-shek's nationalists set up a government in Nanking.

In southern Honan province, Japanese forces struck westward from the Peiping-Hankow railway to reach points 30 miles northeast and 25 miles east of the important highway river junction of Miyang.

30-24— 18361

In the maritime province of Chekiang, fighting continued north of Lishui, the base from which the Japanese at first thought Lieut. Gen. Doolittle's raiders attacked Japan in April, 1942. The Japanese subsequently occupied Lishui but withdrew later after destroying its huge airdrome.

Attacks Ichang Port

Chinese forces in Hupeh were assailing the outer defenses of the Yangtze port of Ichang after throwing back several enemy counter-attacks. To the northeast, near Tangyang, severe fighting was reported between Chinese troops and reinforced Japanese.

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's 14th air force supported Chinese battling the latest Japanese drive in Chekiang.

Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters disclosed that American planes raided airfields and rail yards at Kinhwa on the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway, and strafed Wuyi.

In the course of extensive operations, Chennault's planes sank two 1,200-ton steamers and damaged a smaller one on the Yangtze and blasted five airdromes and fields, including Tien Ho and White Cloud airdromes at Canton, the main Japanese base in South China.

U. S. Planes Hurled Into Chekiang Battle

Chungking, Aug. 29 (AP)—United States 14th Air Force planes have been hurled into the battle in the maritime province of Chekiang, where the Japanese have launched a fierce drive against Lishui, regarded as a potential base for bombing operations against Japan.

Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's flyers bombed airfield and railroad yards of Kinhwa, on the Chekiang-Kiangsi railway. Fighters strafed Wuyi, base of the Japanese drive against Lishui, south of Kinhwa.

Steamers Sunk

Other extensive operations of the 14th Air Force yesterday included a sweep of the Yangtze river area near the Hupeh province fighting. Two steamers were sunk and a smaller one damaged.

In Kwangtung province, near the main Japanese base of Canton, the Tien Ho and White Cloud airdromes were bombed.

Rail Point Seized

In Hunan province, Chinese forces threatening the Japanese Siang river supply line captured another point on the Canton-Hankow railway about 55 miles north of Hengyang.

About 45 miles northwest of Hengyang, at Yungfeng, severe fighting raged, with casualties heavy on both sides, as the Chinese battled an enemy column trying to smash units menacing the Japanese hold on Hengyang, the high command said.

Sinkiang Head Is Removed To Please Reds

Chungking, Aug. 29 (AP)—As a friendly gesture to Russia, the Chinese Government has removed Gen. Sheng Shih Tsai from the Governorship of Sinkiang, in far northwest China. Gen. Wu Chung Hsin, at present chairman of the Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission, succeeds him, an official announcement said today.

The change represented one of the most important Governorship switches in China since President Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists established a Government in Nanking in 1927.

Government Strength Seen

Sheng occupied a semi-independent position for many years and his forced exit indicated the central Chinese Government here has steadily built up and consolidated a strong position in Sinkiang.

Sheng's actions, especially with respect to the Soviet nationals, threatened seriously to mar relations between China and Russia.

The Soviet-dominated Government of Outer Mongolia some time ago accused Sheng's troops of invading Outer Mongolia and threatened strong military action in the event of any recurrence.

Position Made Clear

The new Governor, Wu Chung Hsin, 57, formerly was Governor of Anhwei province and then Kweichow. He headed the Chinese delegation to the enthronement of the present Dalai Lama. His position in Sinkiang will be that of a loyal Kuomintang (Nationalist party) official taking orders from Chungking rather than acting independently.

The announcement said the executive Yuan appointed Sheng Minister of Agriculture and Forestry, one of the least important jobs in the present Government.

It also was disclosed that all troops stationed in Sinkiang—they virtually were Sheng Shih Tsai's private army—would come under direct control of the National Military Council at Chungking.

U. S. PLANES BLAST MOLUCCA ISLANDS

Amboina Barracks, Harbor Mass of Flames After 188-Ton Attack.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Wednesday, Aug. 30—(AP) A record heavy raid in the Moluccas of 188 tons which hit Ambon Monday was reported today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Ambon is on Amboina just west of Dutch New Guinea.

Liberators, escorted by Lightnings, left the Ambon barracks and harbor works a mas of flames.

Offshore, a 3,000 ton ship was set ablaze. The raiders met no interception and suffered no losses.

To the northeast of Amboina, other Liberators on the same day dropped 48 tons on Palau harbor and airdromes.

The Palau raiders hit Koror town and the Peleliu airstrip and seaplane base. They encountered considerable anti-aircraft fire.

The Ambon raiders set great fires which sent up clouds of smoke for 10,000 feet. The freighter fell victim to the Lightnings which centered their attention on the Halong seaplane base.

The heavy punch at Ambon fitted into a methodical air campaign against the entire Molucca chain. Elsewhere in that chain, today's communique reported that patrol planes hit oil installations at Boela, Ceram, and attacked Kaoe village, on Halmahera.

Night air patrols also started fires at Davao capital of Mindanao in the Southern Philippines.

Other fires were set at the Lili airdrome in an attack on Timor.

For the second time, the communique reported a raid by Japanese planes on the newly completed Allied airfield on Middleburg Island, off Dutch New Guinea. One of the three medium bombers was shot down by anti-aircraft fire. The communique acknowledged "minor damage."

AMERICAN PLANES HAMMER KURILES

U. S. PACIFIC HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 29—(AP) Japanese positions in the widely separated island groups were pounded by American warplanes in weekend raids of the aerial offensive that has Tokyo's war lords jittery.

These stabs into the enemy's shaky island empire, announced today by headquarters, were opposed only by meager to moderate anti-aircraft fire.

The raids by island groups:

Kuriles, north of Japan — 11th army air force Liberators bombed Paramushiro Saturday, starting fires.

Volcanos, 750 miles south of Tokyo—7th AAF Liberators smacked the airfield on Iwo island Sunday, folllowing a night foray by a single Liberator. Ground fire was moderate.

Marianas, next in the island chain below Japan—Pagan island was raided twice Sunday and Alamagan once. Buildings and gun emplacements were the principal targets.

Carolines, farther south—a single 7th AAF Liberator peppered Yap, important as a weather station.

Marshalls, Central Pacific—Marine dive bombers and fighters carried out neutralizing raids against by-passed Japanese positions.

U. S. Will Fortify Guam As Base Against Japan

New Commander Sees Isle as Miniature Pearl Harbor

GUAM, Aug. 31 (AP) (Delayed).—Guam is destined to become a miniature Pearl Harbor from which the winning blow against Japan can be struck, Major General Henry L. Larson, U. S. M. C., said today at his first press conference since taking command of the island's defenses and development.

Guam will be everything that "an important base" implies, said the fifty-three-year-old commander of the American possession recently re-won from the Japanese. He emphasized the project would be one of the major engineering developments of the Pacific war.

"This base," said Larson, "is important offensively to launch the action which is going to win the war; defensively because here rest the installations promoting the security even of the United States. With these islands in our hands we will be in position to insure peace afterward."

Yanks Fly Record

Bomb Route

Seventh AAF Headquarters, Central Pacific, Aug. 24 (Delayed—(AP))—The longest shuttle-bombing route of any war theater—a 3,500-mile triangle reaching from Central to Southwest Pacific bases—was pioneered successfully by American army and navy land-based heavy bombers and reconnaissance planes.

Brig. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, Jr., commander of the 7th AAF, disclosed today that this shuttle over-ocean run made possible the first aerial attacks and reconnaissance flights in the then Japanese-held Marianas Islands region 1,075 miles southeast of Tokyo.

Route Of Bombers

The shuttle route operated this way: Yank planes took off from bases in the Marshall Islands, bombed Saipan, Guam and other Japanese strongholds in the Marianas, flew to bases in the Admiralty Islands, and again blasted the enemy in the Carolines on the return trip to the starting point.

Two full days, involving close to 24 hours continuous flying over Japanese areas, were required for a single mission along the shuttle triangle. The longest non-stop hop was 2,100 miles. Dates of this initial hop were not disclosed.

"Our forward operating bases are now only 1,000 miles apart, a distance easily flown by our land-based Liberator bombers," General Douglass said.

"Heavy bombers of the Seventh AAF in the central Pacific and the Fifth AAF in the Southwest Pacific are now able to support each other and can strike intensified blows at enemy positions."

On the first run to Guam the bombers were challenged by 20 to 30 Japanese interceptors. In a 40-minute running fight four of the Nippon planes were shot down, one probably destroyed and six damaged.

He has concluded a world-wide tour of war fronts on behalf of the Federal Council of Churches.

Mostly Career Men

He said he found the chaplains of this war to be largely career men—"chaplains who served in the first war and remained in the army."

"In the Pacific," he added, "I found the finest and most complete setup of chaplains. I visited fine altars under jungle palms, on the edge of defense perimeters. I found the largest chapel of any theater on Emirau Island."

(This Southwest Pacific islet, occupied last March, is three by one and one-half miles.)

"I visited 534 chaplains of three faiths, and watched the men throng to their chapels in such great numbers that they overflowed four deep outside.

Interdenominational Altars

"Out here, religion does not follow established patterns. Ministers, priests and Rabbis preach from the same altars. There is great unity of purpose.

"Whatever differences there may be at home, the churches must maintain the spirit of this unity. I believe this unity can be continued without sacrificing a single worthy loyalty. But that's a job for the home church.

"It will be a tragedy for the churches if 11 or 12 million returning men fail to find the equivalent of what they found out here."

New Zealand Forces Reach 114,022 Total

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 29 (AP). F. Jones, Minister of Defense, told the House of Representatives today that New Zealand's armed forces totaled 114,022 at the end of July.

They were distributed as follows: In New Zealand, 52,954 including 6,589 females; overseas, 61,068. Of the overseas forces, 44,143 were allocated to Europe, 14,211 to the Pacific and 2,714 elsewhere.

Regard For Chaplains Grows, Dr. Poling Says

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 29 (AP)—American front-line chaplains are more highly regarded by their commanding officers and men than ever before, Dr. Daniel A. Poling said today, and are creating a great opportunity for churches of all faiths when the war is over.

Dr. Poling is world president of the Christian Endeavor and editor in chief of the Christian Herald.

ECUADOR ARRESTS SPANIARDS IN PLOT

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Ramon and Oscar Gonzalez Artigas, Spanish proprietors of Ecuador's biggest textile factories, were under arrest today on charges of spreading Falangist propaganda and leading a revolutionary plot against the Government of President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra.

Also detained were Rafael and Lucinco Almeida Borja, Ecuadorean bankers; Alberto Alcivar Destruge, former manager of the Ecuadorean Central Bank, and Aurelio Baquero, a retired Army general.

The Gonzalez Artigas shoe and textile factories were taken over by the Government after the National Assembly passed a resolution condemning the two wealthy Spanish brothers.

Representative Leopold Benitez demanded before the assembly that diplomatic relations with Spain be broken. This came after Major Edmundo Carvajal, who represents the Ecuadorean Air Force in the assembly, charged that the Gonzalez Artigas brothers were "Falangist agitators." (The Falange is the State party of Spain.)

Pedro Saad, Communist deputy and President of the Confederation of Works, charged that the two brothers had monopolized the textile industry in Ecuador, and had been aided by "excessive" credit granted by the Central Bank and other banks.

In Guayaquil, a mob attempted to sack an Artigas store but was dispersed by police.

Only Planes Can Save Empire, Japs Told

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Warning that the war is "steadily approaching the homeland," the Tokyo radio has issued another urgent appeal to the Japanese people for an increase in aircraft production, the Office of War Information reported today.

The Japanese people, the OWI said, were told that Japan's "steel-tight" inner defense was impregnable only so long as "the planes which defend this nation are securely applied."

The broadcast appeal, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, was issued as Premier Kuniaki Koiso's Government prepared to submit proposals for increased production of planes as well as munitions and food to a special session of the Imperial Diet next week.

Proposals Outlined

Koiso's proposals for increasing munitions production were outlined to 80 high-ranking Munitions Ministry officials by Munitions Minister Ginjiro Fujiwara yesterday afternoon, Tokyo said.

In an "instructional address," the Japanese broadcast said, Fujiwara demanded that all workers in the Ministry "must arouse themselves to further action" in their task of "controlling the production of important munitions." Such action, he said, would "decide the trend of the present war situation."

NAZI TROOPS CARRY OUT OCCUPATION OF SLOVAKIA

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 — (AP) Gen. Ferdinand Catlos, commander-in-chief of Slovakia's armed forces, announced in a broadcast over the Bratislava radio tonight that German troops were carrying out a full-scale occupation of the Nazi established puppet state amid continuing guerrilla activity.

In his broadcast, which was reported by the Federal Communications commission, General Catlos appealed to the people to receive the Germans as Allies and to obey "only government orders" and not be swayed by the guerrillas.

The Puppet Slovak authorities declared martial law on Aug. 12 because of "the general war situation" and because, they said, "groups of parachutists" had been dropped in several mountain regions of eastern and northeastern Slovakia.

Moscow Radio Urges Overthrow Of Franco

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Moscow radio has broadcast an appeal to the Spinish people calling on them to oust the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco and carry out a break with Nazi Germany so as "to gain a place for Spain among the democratic and freedom-loving nations," the Federal Communications Commission said today.

Franco was a "willing host for all Fascists who are trying to escape the people's justice," the Moscow broadcast declared. It said the Spanish Government had already given refuge to French Fascists from Algiers and several Gestapo agents and "Vichy traitors" from France.

SECURITY AGENCY TO ENFORCE PEACE OUTLINED BY FDR

Would Have More Formidable Teeth Than League of Nations.

DELEGATES ACCEPT PLAN

Roosevelt Warns Discussion of Details Might Lead to Misunderstanding.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — (AP) A proposed world peace agency designed to have more formidable teeth than the defunct league of nations was outlined today by President Roosevelt, who also warned against what he termed carping discussion of its details.

He said at a news conference that to lose sight of the main objective through discussion of details would lead to misunderstanding.

The world security organization under discussion by the United States, Britain and Russia at Dumbarton Oaks will be different from the Old League (which the United States refused to enter) because the League's council had no means to enforce peace in the world, he said.

FDR Outlines Steps

Roosevelt outlined the steps through which disputes which threaten peace would be handled by the future organization just a few hours after chief delegates of the three countries announced their general agreement on its outlines.

First of all, he told a news conference, a dispute would go before the world court. If it cannot be settled there, there must be a meeting place where you can talk it over, he said. He added that you could call this an assembly.

The assembly would be composed of all nations large and small, the President declared, presenting the same general blueprint decided upon at Dumbarton Oaks.

If anyone kicks over the traces and violates a frontier, Mr. Roosevelt went on, you have got to have quick action. The council of the security organization, he indicated, will have force at its disposal to move immediately in such cases.

When someone starts bombing or invading, he said, you can't have a man send out word that there will be a meeting next month.

A reporter called the President's attention to the fact that the American-Russian-British declaration issued at Dumbarton Oaks closely paralleled his own draft of this government's ideas for a peace agency on June 15.

He replied that he had had the idea as far back as two years ago, that many people have it, and that no one can take the credit for it or claim authorship.

Asked in what ways the proposed organization would be different from the League of Nations, he said there were 50 points on which different could be found, and enumerated organizations for food and international finance. He referred to the United Nations food and agriculture organization, and the United Nations stabilization fund, agreed upon at the Bretton Woods conference.

Russia thus far has taken the stand that the security organization should be kept separate from international bodies dealing with social and economic problems but Britain has advanced views similar to President Roosevelt's, arguing that agreement on such questions would reinforce unity on problems directly affecting peace.

Mr. Roosevelt stressed that the Dumbarton Oaks conference is merely going into preliminaries which must later be discussed by all the nations.

When he was asked whether Congressional action would be required to authorize use of American force when the council decided this was necessary to restrain aggression, he said we haven't gotten that far yet.

Cautioning against losing sight of what he termed the great object, he told of a woman who misinterpreted the league covenant as meaning an authorization of white slavery instead of a drive towards eliminating it.

He said she opposed the League on the ground of that misunderstanding and that it is what comes of bringing a carping discussion of details into an organization of this kind.

The general agreement on the outlines of the proposed new organization was announced in a statement by the Dumbarton Oaks conferees.

While details are yet to be filled in the plan follows closely President Roosevelt's brief draft of June 15 with provision for a council of the main powers and some small nations, an assembly of all "peace-loving nations," a world court, machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes and use of force to maintain security.

Made at First Conference

Announcement of this long step toward formation of a world peace agency was made jointly at the first Dumbarton Oak news conference since the discussions began a week ago.

Undersecretary of State Stettinius, head of the American delegation, also asid that the Chinese memorandum for a security organization has been delivered to this government.

It is understood that the Chinese, leaning closer on this point to the Russian rather than the American or British plans, are advocating formation of an international force directly under the control of the council of the proposed organization. The Americans and British favor making national quotas of armed might available to enforce the council's decisions.

However, the Chinese draft leans towards the Anglo-Americans in emphasizing the necessity of giving an adequate voice to the small nations.

The conference communique gave no details on the establishment of force or the role of the small nations, and Stettinius replied to all requests for further information by saying that discussions are continuing.

However, he offered assurance to the lesser powers. All the delegates have the welfare, security and equality of the small nations uppermost in their minds at all times, he said, adding that this is the cornerstone on which we are building.

BIDDLE URGES ALLIES SMASH REICH CARTELS

Tells Senate Group They Are Definite Menace to World Security.

KILGORE EXPLAINS INQUIRY

Asserts German Monopolies Are Reported Laying Groundwork for World War III.

Washington, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Attorney-General Biddle proposed today that the Allied Powers "break the power of the German monopolistic firms" because they "constitute a definite menace to the future peace of the world."

Testifying before a Senate military subcommittee inquiring into cartel arrangements, Mr. Biddle said the purpose of breaking up the power of German monopolies "would not be to destroy German economic life, but to put its industries into a form where they will no longer constitute a menace to the civilized world."

"As long as they survive in their present form," the Attorney-General said, "it will be exceedingly difficult to develop independent industry in Europe outside of Germany."

Mr. Biddle added that he did not underestimate the difficulties involved in his proposal.

"We will have to have an analysis and understanding of each one of the German monopolistic firms," he said, "and then work out for it the readjustments that will be necessary. Such a program . . . will have to await the period of supervision over these companies that should come during the occupation period."

Pre-war Penetration Recalled.

Senator Kilgore (D.-W. Va.), chairman of the military subcommittee, called the inquiry, he said, to review the record of enemy penetration of the American economy after the last world war in order that Congress might be forewarned against future operation of international cartels.

Senator Kilgore said that much of Mr. Biddle's testimony was based on records of German or Japanese controlled corporations in the United States which were seized as enemy property.

"As the armies of the United Nations are moving relentlessly toward Berlin," Mr. Kilgore said in a statement, "it is reported that the Nazi cartel-masters are already drafting plans for a third world war to avenge their sure and imminent defeat. In plotting the restoration of Germany's military might, they doubtless place great emphasis upon any opportunities which may be afforded them by resumption of the old pattern of international relationships."

Strategic Cartel Contracts.

Mr. Biddle told the sub-committee that the approaching occupation of Germany made prompt consideration necessary.

The period between the last and the present world war, he stated, "was only an armistice during which the firms of Germany conducted war against us," adding that cartel contracts covered such strategic items as beryllium, synthetic rubber, magnesium, military optical instruments, synthetic nitrogen, pharmaceuticals and electrical and radio equipment.

He asserted that the firm of Carl Zeiss of Jena, scientific optical instrument makers, which was barred from making range finders, submarine periscopes, bomb sights and tank telescopes under the Versailles Treaty, set up a Dutch subsidiary to do the work. This firm, he said, made a contract in 1921 with Bausch & Lomb of Rochester under which the latter could not sell outside the United States without German permission and under which it was not allowed to sell gun sights, periscopes and other instruments to the French and British in 1935.

The American firm had to supply detailed royalty statements from which Zeiss could determine the types and quantities of instruments purchased by United States armed forces, Mr. Biddle testified.

Krupp and Bofors.

Frederick Krupp, ordered to destroy its machinery after the first world war, transferred its patents, licenses and secret processes to Bofors, Swedish manufacturer, and continued with the manufacture of heavy artillery, tanks, anti-aircraft and other armament, he added.

Krupp, he said, entered into a cartel arrangement with the General Electric Company to restrict production and export from this country of tungsten carbide. Under it, he said, General Electric, after 1936, was not permitted to grant additional licenses for tungsten carbide manufacture in the country without German consent and tungsten carbide, selling in Germany at $50 a pound, sold here for as high as $425.

I. G. Farben and U. S. Firms.

I. G. Farbenindustrie, representing the German dye trust, and chemical, oil, metallurgical and pharmaceutical companies, was known by the State Department to have been making and exporting explosives in 1925, Mr. Biddle said.

In 1929, he asserted, this trust held a series of conferences with American industrialists, including representatives of the du Pont Company, the Aluminum Company and Standard Oil.

He said cartel agreements were made under which (1) important firms were kept from the Latin American market, (2) others could not manufacture strategic products, including synthetic rubber, (3) development of the magnesium industry was retarded (4) an American company was prevented from selling a certain type of munition to the British (5) restrictions were imposed on plastic production and (6) means were established for getting information through inspection of American plants.

SEES PHILIPPINE VICTORY COMING

Washington, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Col. Carlos P. Romulo new Resident Commissioner of the Philippines, told the House today that the islanders' part in the defense of Bataan and Corregidor "were dividends paid back out of our loyalty and our faith in America."

Speaking on the twenty-eighth anniversary of enactment of the Jones act, which set in motion the machinery for eventual Philippine independence, Col. Romulo said that act promised Filipinos "a place beside our fellow Americans as men equal and free."

"We earned that position in 1941, when we offered our lives beside Americans in the blackest hour America has known," he added.

"Bataan, where Filipinos fought under the American flag to preserve democracy, was the ultimate outpost of freedom in the Far East."

Asserting in his first congressional speech that he spoke for 17,000,000 Filipinos, Mr. Romulo told the House:

"At last we see the way clear back to the Philippines and we dare speak of victory. The Jones act was our victory. You let us win it upon this floor. It was a pledge made, and America has kept that pledge. . . . We too kept the pledge. You gave us the Jones act. We gave you Bataan."

Navy Attack On Jap Called Zephyr To What Is To Come

Washington, Aug. 28—The navy, reviewing the victories over both ends of the Axis in the last 12 months, declared today that "these blows were light compared with the blows we are now prepared to deliver."

Commenting on the progress of the navy's air arm, which marks its 31st anniversary tomorrow, Vice-Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air, said:

"Task force 58, which scourged the Jap so effectively in the last eight months, was just a sweet, summer zephyr compared to the arrangements of ships, planes and other weapons—old and new—which are ready to lash out now."

100 Carriers "In Or Near Action"

He disclosed that the navy now has approximately 100 carriers "in or near action." Included are 14 of the mighty Essex type and nine of the fast and powerful Independence class, converted from cruisers. More than 70 carriers were commissioned during the year and work was started on two of the three projected 45,000-ton battleship-type carriers.

Naval aviators averaged more than four Japanese planes shot down for every American plane lost during the year, Fitch said. The actual score was more than 2,300 Japanese craft destroyed against 560 navy planes lost. He added that "a high percentage of our pilots was rescued."

Two New Weapons Promised

"Long before another anniversary rolls around, naval aviation will be hurling at least two more new weapons against the foe—a twin-engined fighter and a scouting plane of unmatched speed and range," the admiral said.

[The twin-engined plane presumably is the Grumman-designed F7F. The Truman committee disclosed its existence last spring, but the navy has not given out any details on the fighter, the first multi-engined plane designed for carrier operations. Navy officials previously have mentioned a superb new scout plane without identifying it.]

Tribute To Essex Carriers

Fitch gave the new Essex class carriers the major credit for advances against the enemy in the Pacific in the last year.

"They made possible the by-passing tactics which have placed us so close to Japan," he said. "They covered General MacArthur's advance to Hollandia. Without them we would still be inching along. We would probably still be in the Marshalls.

"The year just closing was a year of spectacular achievement which saw navy wings bridge the broad Pacific and carry the war against Japan to the very threshold of the enemy.

Year Of Triumph

"It was a year which brought to fruition the dreams of naval aviation pioneers about the potentialities of planes flown from ships; a year in which the concept of huge fast carrier task forces as an offensive weapon met and mastered its first major test; a year of triumph for navy flyers and navy planes spearheading an attack which shattered Japan's outer ring of defense and pierced deep into the core of the empire."

Stimson Denies Rumor On Italian War Captives

Says U. S. Has Not Promised to Grant Them Citizenship

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 (AP).—Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, said today there is no basis for a rumor that Italian prisoners of war in this country are receiving promises of United States citizenship in return for their loyalty.

Mr. Stimson's assertion was made in a letter to Representative Richard F. Harless, Democrat, of Arizona, following receipt by the Secretary of a resolution from the Arizona Disabled American War Veterans on the treatment of Italian prisoners.

The resolution stated that members of an Italian service unit near Phoenix, Ariz., have taken undue advantage of privileges "insulting the ladies of the community," and that "it has been rumored that these war prisoners are being promised citizenship in the United States in return for their loyalty."

The War Department "has made no promise" about granting citizenships, and "does not contemplate doing so," Mr. Stimson wrote.

The Secretary said that the only incident "of which I am aware that might have been the basis for the resolution" occurred on July 28, 1942, when a convoy of Italian service unit members en route to work was stopped at a Phoenix intersection and reprimanded by a local traffic patrolman for running a red light.

"While the patrolman was reprimanding the driver and observing the driver's permit, a few of the Italians waved at some women who were standing on the corner waiting the arrival of a city bus," Mr. Stimson wrote. "Some of the Italians also threw their arms around one another."

Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek To Come To U. S.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese Minister of Finance, said today that Mme. Chiang Kai-shek would come to the United States from Brazil, where she is currently under treatment, for additional medical care.

Dr. Kung, brother-in-law of Mme. Chiang, asserted that the wife of China's generalissimo was ill, but not seriously ill.

Consul General Tsune Chi-yu said the planned trip would take place "in the near future or maybe in the distant future."

"She is not seriously ill," Dr. Yu said. "The word reaching Dr. Kung is that she is ill and improving."

ROOSEVELT SCORES FERGUSON REMARK

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — (AP) President Roosevelt took Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) to task today for saying he had word from "reliable sources" that Donald M. Nelson would succeed James F. Byrnes as War Mobilization director upon Nelson's return from China.

Asked about the Ferguson statement, the President said that if the Senator would tell him where he got his information he would give him an answer.

He added he had some right to know where certain information comes from and chided those who try to hide identity of their informants by using such terms as high official sources. He said he sometimes wonders about the source and that he was going to try to find out where Ferguson got his information.

The President smiled and said he had spread a few rumors himself to watch how and by whom they are spread and appeared to enjoy it.

When a reporter said he had heard from "a very low source" that OPA Director Chester Bowles might head the new reconversion program, the President said Bowles' agency was getting along alright with no internal rows there.

The President again refused to say whether Nelson would again head the War Production board when he returns from his presidential mission to China. He said J. A. Krug is acting chairman of WPB, and added that the point is he is heading it. He refused to pronounce it.

AUG 30 1944

During the day, Rep. Halleck (R.-Ind.) told the House that Krug's "chief qualification up to now seems to be that he is the choice of the New Deal backstairs cabal who have succeeded in getting rid of so many efficient men."

"Only a week ago," Halleck said, "the President was protesting that he was not kicking Donald Nelson in the teeth. And within three days it developed that the President was not just kicking him in the teeth—that he was just kicking him 10,000 miles across the Pacific."

Ferguson Declares Nelson Is Picked to Succeed Byrnes

Senator Says Roosevelt Plans to Put WPB Chief in Charge of Big Task of Demobilization.

Washington, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Senator Ferguson (R.-Mich.) said today he understood from reliable sources that Donald M. Nelson had been picked to succeed James F. Byrnes as War Mobilization director upon Nelson's return from China.

AUG 30 1944

Mr. Ferguson said that he understood President Roosevelt's plan was to turn over to the War Production Board chairman direction of the gigantic task of demobilization. The Michigan Senator added that he had heard Mr. Brynes had indicated a desire to be relieved of his present duties as soon as it is convenient, and that he had emphatically expressed a desire to turn over the demobilization task to some other man.

There was no immediate comment from Mr. Byrnes's office today. However, the former Supreme Court Justice has told friends of a desire to return to private life, probably at the end of this year, assuming Germany is defeated by then.

"I've been advised by reliable sources that Mr. Nelson, upon his return, will take over the position and carry on as director of post-war demobilization," Mr. Ferguson stated, adding that the move would explain President Roosevelt's refusal to say whether Mr. Nelson would continue as chairman of the War Production Board upon his return from his confidential mission to Chungking.

Meanwhile, confronted by the angry resignation of another top-ranking administrator, Julius A. Krug waded into dissension-torn War Production Board ranks today with threats of dismissal for trouble makers.

The 37-year-old ex-Navy lieutenant-commander, back home from an overseas assignment of simplicity compared with that handed him by President Roosevelt as the aftermath of the latest home front flare-up, declared there will be but "one team at the WPB from now on."

Any who don't play ball, he said, will be let out.

Mr. Krug outlined his new policy to the Senate War Investigating Committee even as Sidney J. Weinberg was resigning downtown as WPB vice-chairman in charge of special problems with a blast at demagogic intrigues within the organization.

Developments Come Quickly.

Mr. Weinberg's stepping out followed a whirlwind series of developments starting with President Roosevelt's assignment of WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson on a confidential mission to China.

While Congressmen were asking why Nelson was being sent out of the country at a time when he was winning a battle with the military to get limited civilian production started in non-critical labor areas, Executive Vice-chairman Charles E. Wilson quit cold. He blamed members of Mr. Nelson's staff for spreading what he described as false rumors that he was opposed to civilian output.

PROBERS SEEK CORRIGAN DATA

Ask Reason For Delay Of Court-Martial Of Officer

Washington, Aug. 29 (AP)—The Senate War Investigating Committee tonight asked the Navy and Justice departments for "full reports" on what had been done with respect to a court-martial for John D. Corrigan, navy commander, who was suspended pending investigation of business relations between his former engineering firm and navy contractors.

Senator Ferguson (R. Mich.) directed Rear Admiral George F. Hussey, Jr., chief of the Navy Ordnance Bureau, and Hugh O'Donnell, Justice Department representative, to submit the reports.

AUG 30 1944

Ferguson, acting chairman, said the committee had recommended a court-martial several months ago and, while Admiral Hussey was on the witness stand, asked "what has been done about it?"

Wait On Grand Jury Probe

Hussey said his office had "turned over the material it has to the Judge Advocate General's office, and the matter is in his hands."

Ferguson then asked O'Donnell if there was any understanding between the Judge Advocate General and the Justice Department. O'Donnell said he thought the two offices had agreed any court-martial would be held up pending the outcome of a grand jury investigation now in progress in New York.

"But why is it being held up?" Ferguson demanded.

"I don't believe I am in a position to say," O'Donnell responded.

High Lights Of Hearings

The committee's action came after all-day hearings during which there were these high lights:

1. Corrigan, appearing in civilian clothes, declined to answer any further questions. He said he was standing on his constitutional rights and refusing to testify upon advice of counsel. The committee did not seek to compel him to testify.

2. Robert H. Wells, president of the engineering and production management firm of Corrigan, Osburne & Wells, testified that "possibly $300,000" of the firm's $650,000 gross income last year was from clients having navy production contracts. When Ferguson asked whether the firm's business had benefited by Corrigan's taking a leave of absence in 1942 to enter the navy, Wells replied: "Quite the reverse, Senator. I think we have lost jobs because he was in the navy."

Took Parts From Scrap Pile

3. Anthony Ritner, former head of production control at an Elmira (N. Y.) bombsight plant, testified that 20,000 parts rejected when the plant was under management by Remington-Rand were taken from a scrap pile and used after the navy took over the plant and placed it under management of Carl L. Norden, Inc. Ritner said production was increased by this means. Under the Norden management, men from Corrigan, Osburne & Wells were sent to the plant as consultants. "All they did was sit, day after day," Ritner said.

4. T. H. Barth, president of Carl L. Norden, Inc., testified Corrigan got "navy consent" before Barth employed Corrigan, Osburne & Wells at a $50,000 fee for services at Norden's New York plant. Later, Barth said, the firm was engaged for services at the Elmira plant for $40,000.

SOME BOMBSIGHTS ABOUND DEFECTIVE

Washington, Aug. 29 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Commander H. Massie Smoot, Assistant Naval Inspector of Ordnance, told the Senate War Investigating Committee today that of 300 bombsights manufactured during three months last year at a New Elmira, N. Y., plant about half had to be sent back for repairs or rebuilding.

He also testified that he was dissatisfied with the competency of the Navy personnel assigned to assist him in the preliminary inspections made at the Elmira plant, then operated by the Remington-Rand Company as sub-contractors for the Norden Company. Later the plant was taken over by the Navy.

Lieut.-Commander Smoot testified: "Our inspectors, I found, passed a number of things that they shouldn't have."

He said that he complained to his Navy superiors but that no changes were immediately made. Later he said that he was transferred to the inspection staff at the Norden company in New York city, and another Navy officer was sent to Elmira.

The lieutenant-commander said that of the 300 bomb sights in question, manufactured during June, July and August last year, practically all needed repairs or adjustments, but that half were put in condition at the Norden plant in New York after they were shipped there for final inspections. The other half were sent back to Elmira, he stated.

NICKEL PLANT SEIZED BY ARMY ON FDR ORDER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP) President Roosevelt tonight ordered the Army to take over and operate the strike-bound International Nickel company's plant and facilities in Huntington, W. Va.

The Army, in a simultaneous announcement said that Lieut. Col. George D. Woods had been designated as War department representative to carry out provisions of the President's order during government operation.

N. Y. Papers Reopen Offices In Paris

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—Two New York newspapers, the Times and Herald Tribune, announced today the reopening of their Paris offices.

The Times bureau had operated until the United States entered the war. The Herald Tribune, which published its last European edition on June 12, 1940, two days before Paris was invaded, has offered its facilities to army authorities publishing Yank and the Stars and Stripes.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, AUG 30-(AP)-WAVES OF FLYING BOMBS WERE HURLED AGAINST LONDON AND SOUTHERN ENGLAND BY THE GERMANS DURING THE NIGHT AFTER TWO SUCCESSIVE BOMBLESS NIGHTS.

THE ASSAULTS APPARENTLY WERE LAUNCHED FROM THE USUAL SITES, INCLUDING THE AREA WEST OF BOULOGNE NOW THREATENED BY THE RAPID ADVANCE OF THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE.

IT WAS BELIEVED HERE THAT THE RECENT LULL IN ROBOT RAIDS HAS BEEN AT LEAST PARTILLY DUE TO TRANSPORTATION DIFFICULTIES FACED BY THE GERMANS IN MOVING THE BOMBS TO LAUNCHING SITES.

THE OVERNIGHT RAIDS FOLLOWED UP A SERIES OF SPORADIC DAYLIGHT ATTACKS WHICH TOOK A NEW TOLL OF DEATH AND DESTRUCTION.

THE BATTLE FOR SOUTHERN FRANCE WAS DRAWING TO A CLOSE AS LT.GEN. ALEXANDER M.PATCH'S AMERICAN TROOPS STRUCK UP THE RHONE VALLEY AND TO THE EAST OF IT SPEARED PRACTICALLY TO THE SWISS FRONTIER, WHILE FRENCH UNITS PLUNGING WEST OF THE RHONE TOWARD THE SPANISH BORDER CAPTURED NIMES, A CITY OF NEARLY 100,000.

BERLIN ANNOUNCEMENTS DURING THE DAY STATED FLATLY THAT THE GERMANS WERE WITHDRAWING THEIR TROOPS FROM SOUTHERN FRANCE EXCEPT TO DEFEND CERTAIC PORTS, AND THE NAZI HIGH COMMAND SPOKESMAN GEN.KURT DITTMAR DECLARED THAT AS A RESULT OF BOTH INVASIONS "THE GREATER PART OF FRANCE IS LOST."

LONDON, AUG. 29-(AP)-PROPOSALS TO RECAST THE POLISH GOVERNMENT INTO A COALITION AND TO PETITION MOSCOW FOR A RUSSO-POLISH ALLIANCE WERE AUTHORITATIVELY REPORTED TODAY TO BE FEATURES OF THE EXILED POLISH GOVERNMENT'S NEW FOUR-POINT COMPROMISE OFFER TO THE SOVIET UNION.

OTHER POINTS SUGGEST CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS TO BE DECIDED BY PLEBISCITE AFTER THE COUNTRY'S LIBERATION AND POSTWAR DECISION ON FRONTIERS. THE NEW GOVERNMENT WOULD INCLUDE MEMBERS OF THE UNDER-GROUND ARMY IN POLAND AND THE RUSSIAN-SPONSORED POLISH NATIONAL LIBERATION COMMITTEE.

IF THE RUSSIANS AGREE TO THE COMPROMISE, PREMIER STANISLAW MIKO-LAJCZYK PROPOSES TO GO TO WARSAW AS SOON AS THE CAPITAL IS LIBERATED TO ESTABLISH THE NZW GOVERNMENT.

SECOND NIGHT LEAD WESTERN FRANCE

BY WILLIAM F.BONI

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 30-(AP)-THE GERMANS IN NORTHERN FRANCE WERE IN HEADLONG FLIGHT TODAY BEFORE AMERICAN ARMORED COLUMNS THAT ROARED INTO SOISSONS, ONLY 55 MILES FROM BELGIUM AND CLATTERED PAST THE VINEYARDS OF CHAMPAGNE TO CHALONS, WITHIN 96 MILES OF THE GERMAN BORDER.

THE U.S. THIRD ARMY IN A DASH OF MORE THAN 25 MILES ACROSS HALLOWED AMERICAN BATTLEFIELDS OF THE FIRST WORLD WAR, HAD CAPTURED CHATEAU-THIERRY AND BELLEAU WOOD AND WAS DRIVING ON NORTHWARD ALONG THE HISTORIC INVASION ROUTE TOWARDS THE FOREST OF ARDENNES.

THE AMERICANS DISLOCATED ANY GERMAN PLANS FOR A STAND ALONG THE AISNE RIVER AND POSED A POTENT THREAT TO THE ENTIRE GERMAN FLANK AS WELL AS TO THE MOST FEASIBLE ROUTE FOR WITHDRAWAL OF THE NAZI 15TH ARMY THAT GUARDS THE FLYING-BOMB SITES OF THE PAS DE CALAIS COAST.

THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY WAS THRUSTING TO THOSE SECRET WEAPON BASES WITH THE MOTTO "ONE MORE KILOMETER, ONE LESS BOMB." THE WESTERNMOST BRITISH ELEMENTS HAD DRIVEN TO ENTRAPAGNY, 18 MILES BEYOND THEIR ORIGINAL SEINE RIVER BRIDGEHEAD AT VERNON.

PARIS, AUG. 29-(AP)-HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS OF THE AMERICAN ARMY'S VICTORY MARCH TODAY THROUGH PARIS:

WHAT IMPRESSED PARISIANS MOST ABOUT THE AMERICAN ARMY WAS ITS EQUIPMENT AND THE SILENCE WITH WHICH ITS RUBBER-TIRED VEHICLES WHEELED THROUGH THE STREETS.

"BEAUCOUP MATERIEL," THEY KEPT MURMERING IN AMAZEMENT.

TANKS, HALF-TRACKS, JEEPS, ARMORED SCOUT CARS, SELF-PROPELLED GUNS AND AMBULANCES ROLLED THROUGH BY THE HUNDREDS.

COMMENTING ON THE SMOOTHNESS WITH WHICH THE VEHICLES RAN, A FRENCHMAN SAID: "THE GERMAN CARS ARE MUCH MORE NOISY--THEY ALWAYS SOUNDED LIKE THEY WERE FALLING APART."

--DASH--

WHAT IMPRESSED THE FRENCH POPULACE MOST ABOUT AMERICAN TROOPS THEMSELVES--FROM THE SWEATSTREAKED PLODDING INFANTRY TO THE DIRTY GRINNING TANKMEN--WAS THE SYMPATHETIC AND TRUSTFUL LOOK ON THEIR FACES.

"BONNE BOULE," WAS THE FRENCH CAPITAL'S TERM FOR THE EXPRESSION. GERMAN TROOPS WERE SAID TO HAVE HAD A HARDER AND MORE SMUG CAST OF COUNTENANCE.

--DASH--

ONE YOUNG FRENCH GIRL WAS UNHAPPY BECAUSE SHE MISSED OUT IN THE GIFTS OF CANDY AND CIGARETTES SHOWERED OUT BY THE TROOPS FROM PASSING VEHICLES AS THE FRENCH RAN OUT TO TOSS THEM BOTTLES OF WINE AND HANDFULS OF FLOWERS.

"IT WASN'T MUCH OF A PARADE FOR ME," SHE POUTED, "I DIDN'T EVEN GET ONE SINGLE STICK OF CHEWING GUM."

FRENCH CROWDS WERE A LITTLE APPREHENSIVE BECAUSE OF THE SHOOTING WHICH MARRED SATURDAY'S CELEBRATION AND PARADE LED BY GEN.CHARLES DE GAULLE. EVERY TIME A SHERMAN TANK BACKFIRED A DOZEN PERSONS ON THE CURBS WOULD JUMP BACK NERVOUSLY.

--DASH--

THE JEEPS AROUSED CURIOSITY AMONG THE PARISIAN THRONGS. THEY GAVE MOST APPLAUSE TO THE TANKS AND HALF-TRACKS PULLING THE ARTILLERY PIECES. ALL THE FRENCH HAVE VAST RESPECT AND FONDNESS FOR ARTILLERY, IN WHICH THEIR ARMY ALWAYS HAS BEEN EXPERT.

THE SOLDIER WHO MADE THE BIGGEST HIT WITH THE FRENCH WAS THE BOY ATOP A TRUCK WHO HAD TWO BOTTLES OF COGNAC HELD UP IN THE V-VICTORY SIGN AND YELLED REPEATEDLY: "VIVE LA FRANCE! VIVE LA FRANCE!"

--DASH--

"MY CONSCIENCE IS BOTHERING ME BECAUSE I AM HAVING A GOOD TIME," SAID CPL. ADRIAN PINSINCE OF EVANSTON, ILL., "THIS EXCITEMENT HAS GO ME. I FEEL LIKE I DID THE EVENING OF INVASION DAY."

--DASH--

ONE JEEP CONTAINED LT.JOHN J.HUCKER, NORRISTOWN, PA., AND PVT. ANDREW SEMAN, OF RANKIN, PA.

"I NEVER SAW A PARADE LIKE THIS ONE," SAID HUCKER. "THEY ARE AS HAPPY TO SEE US AS WE ARE TO SEE THEM. I NEVER SAW SO MANY BEAUTIFU GIRLS IN MY LIFE--AND I HAVEN'T HAD A DATE SINCE I'VE BEEN HERE."

"I BET WE COULD FIX THAT UP IF WE DIDN'T HAVE TO GO ON THROUGH TOWN," SAID SEMAN. "THE TROUBLE WITH THIS PARADE IS THAT YOU JUST GET TO SEE ENOUGH OF PARIS TO WANT TO SEE A LOT MORE."

AUG 30 1944

"THIS IS NICE, BUT WE ARE ANXIOUS TO GET ON WITH THE WAR," SAID SERNIAK." THIS IS JUST A LITTLE SIDESHOW BREAK FOR US--WE WANT TO GET ON TO THE MAIN EVENT NOW AND MARCH IN THE PARADE BACK HOME."

"BOY, I LOVE IT HERE," SAID FRANKLIN. "I HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING LIKE THIS SINCE ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN MANHATTAN."

U.S.PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, AUG.26-(DELAYED)-(AP)-CMDR.NORMAN MICKEY (BUZZ) MILLER'S PB4 Y WAS MAKING A BOMB RUN ON TRUK, JAPANESE BASE IN THE CENTRAL CAROLINES AND THE TOP TURRET GUNNER WAS STRAFING WITH .50 CALIBER BULLETS.

AUG 30 1944

SUDDENLY, A LARGE JAPANESE SHELL BURST DIRECTLY ABOVE THE SPEEDING PLANE. TERRIFIC CONCUSSION ALMOST WRESTED CONTROL OF THE BIG LIBERATOR FROM MILLER.

BULLETS SPED PAST HIS HEAD AND PAST HIS CO-PILOT; BADLY DAMAGED THE COCKPIT AND INSTRUMENT BOARD. MILLER'S FACE, HEAD AND RIGHT HAND WERE SINGED. SO WERE THOSE OF HIS CO-PILOT.

THE CONCUSSION HURLED THE NAVIGATOR, ENS.ROBERT K.SCHAEFFER, OF SAGINAW, MICH., FROM HIS STATION. HE WOULD HAVE HURTLED THROUGH THE OPEN BOMB BAY D[illegible]ORS HAD NOT STARTLED PETER FAY OF (BOX 294) ATLANTA, ILL) SOMEHOW MANAGED TO GRASP SCHAEFFER AND BRACE HIMSELF AGAINST THE SHOCK.

UP IN THE NOSE, .50 CALIBER BULLETS WERE SPRAYING ALL AROUND THE GUNNER. SURPRISINGLY, NOT A ONE HIT HIM.

"AFTER A FEW SECONDS THAT SEEMED LIKE ETERNITY, I REALIZED ALL THOSE .50'S WERE COMING FROM OUR TOP TURRET GUNNER," MILLER RECALLED. "CONCUSSION HAD DEPRESSED THE GUN SO IT WAS FIRING PAST THE CO-PILOT AND ME, THROUGH THE INSTRUMENT PANEL AND INTO OUR NOSE. IT ALL HAPPENED SO FAST THE GUNNER DIDN'T REALIZE HE WAS SHOOTING UP HIS OWN PLANE."

AUG 30 1944

THAT'S ONE OF THE UNEXPECTEDS WHICH KEEP LIFE FROM BECOMING TOO MUCH OF A PATTERN FOR NAVY SEARCH-BOMBERS SUCH AS MILLER'S SQUADRON VB-109 WHICH JUST HAS COMPLETED 7 1/2 MONTHS IN THE CENTRAL PACIFIC AND IS HOMEWARD BOUND FOR LEAVE. MILLER IS FROM JACKSONVILLE, FLA., AND WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

"THAT'S A LOT OF HOOEY ABOUT DROPPING YOUR BOMBS IN A PICKLE BARREL FROM 10,000 FEET," SAID MILLER.

SO ALMOST IMMEDIATELY AFTER HE AND HIS SQUADRON ARRIVED AT ITS GILBERT ISLANDS BASE EARLY THIS YEAR, HE SET ABOUT DEVELOPING HIS OWN LOW-LEVEL BOMBSIGHT.

MILLER, AND OTHERS OBTAINED 30 BOMBS--"LIVE ONES, NONE OF THOSE PRACTICE DUMMIES"--SET UP TARGETS ON THE OCEAN AND WENT TO WORK.

SEDAN ONCE AGAIN MAY BECOME A LANE FOR INVASION--THIS TIME IN THE DIRECTION OF BERLIN INSTEAD OF THE DIRECTION OF PARIS.

THE FIRST GREAT BATTLE OF SEDAN IN MODERN HISTORY OCCURRED IN SEPTEMBER, 1870, WHEN THE FRENCH WERE ASSEMBLED IN THE ARDENNES DEPARTMENT TO MEET THE THREAT OF THE SWIFTLY APPROACHING PRUSSIANS.

THE GERMANS SMASHED THROUGH AND ON TO PARIS AND THE BATTLE WAS A DISASTROUS ONE FOR THE FRENCH, WHO LOST 17,000 KILLED AND 52,000 WOUNDED.

GERMAN DREAMS OF CONQUEST OF FRANCE AND ULTIMATE INVASION OF ENGLAND DURING WORLD WAR I BEGAN AT SEDAN IN THE ARDENNES FOREST --AND AT SEDAN WERE ENDED.

SMASHING THROUGH BELGIUM THE GERMANS BORE SWIFTLY DOWN ON THE ARDENNES FRONT IN 1914. THE FRENCH AWAITED CONFIDENTLY, SECURE IN THE BELIEF THAT THEIR DEFENSES WERE IMPREGNABLE. THE GERMANS SMASHED THROUGH AND WERE ON THE INVASION ROUTE TO PARIS UNTIL THE FIRST BATTLE OF THE MARNE STOPPED THEM.

AUG 30 1944

IN THE CLOSING DAYS OF THE WAR THE DISORGANIZED GERMAN ARMY RETREATED TOWARD BELGIUM ALONG THE SAME ROUTE, ALL THE WAY FROM THE AISNE TO THE RIGHT BANK OF THE MEUSE. THEY NEEDED TO HOLD SEDAN TO MAINTAIN THEIR SUPPLY LINES FOR TROOPS WEST OF THE RHINE. A BREAK-

Yanks Take Laon Near Belgian Border, British Speed Drive for Rocket Coast; Russians Capture Ploesti Oil Fields

U. S. FORCES SEIZE REIMS AND PUSH ON

Americans Now 36 Miles From Belgian Border At Two Points

Supreme Allied Headquarters, Thursday, Aug. 31 (AP)—American armored columns rolled through the cathedral city of Reims and pushed on within 36 miles of the Belgian border yesterday in unchecked pursuit of the Germans falling back upon their homeland, while British forces, in a 23-mile break-through, made their first deep thrust toward the robot-bomb coast.

Both the American First and Third armies were disclosed to be taking part in the drive northeast of Paris across first World War battlefields and through the Germans' old Hindenburg Line.

The First Army, under Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, gained 20 miles in a drive from captured Soissons northward to Laon, and early today was believed to have run through this town just 36 miles from Belgium. It also struck nine miles to the east and reached Montaigu.

Captured Without A Shot

The Third Army, under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., captured Reims without firing a shot and rolled on beyond. The city fell after the Americans had outflanked it and forced a German withdrawal during the night.

British armored columns, after moving relatively slowly for days, struck north from the Seine and drove beyond the town of Beauvais in a smash of 23 miles from Etrepagny, which carried to a point only 25 miles south of the big communications center of Amiens on the Somme river. Beauvais is 40 miles north and slightly east of Paris.

The British also reached the town of Gournay, 16 miles west of Beauvais.

Rouen Outflanked

At the same time Canadian forces outflanked the Seine port of Rouen, a city of 123,000, which the Germans announced during the day they had evacuated. The Canadians advanced five miles northeast of the city, which lies near the mouth of the Seine.

It was disclosed today that it was General Hodges' First Army which had captured Chateau-Thierry and Soissons yesterday. First Army troops took 1,466 prisoners in the smash to raise their total since D-day to 115,131, it was announced. The Third Army as of August 28 reported 81,000 Germans killed or captured since the start of the Brittany campaign.

The Third Army, in addition to taking Reims, drove on northward ten miles and established a new bridgehead across the Aisne in the vicinity of Neufchatel, also only 36 miles from Belgium.

45 Miles From Sedan

Here Patton's men were just 45 miles southwest of Sedan, through which the Germans invaded France in 1940. Hodges' men stood 50 miles from Sedan.

Supreme headquarters early this morning was without late news of the American forces east of Chalons, southeast of the Reims area, but the German radio put the Americans on the approaches to St. Dizier, which is only 83 miles from the German border.

Associated Press Correspondent Edward D. Ball, in a dispatch from Reims, said the city's famous Gothic cathedral was found undamaged.

Reims, also noted for its wine and champagne industry, was occupied by the Germans for a few days in the first World War and then, after being recovered by the French in September, 1914, remained besieged and shelled throughout the remaining four years of that war.

Bridgeheads Expanded

Northwest of Paris the Americans, British and Canadians expanded and consolidated their bridgeheads virtually all the way from Paris to just east of Rouen, with only a small, fast-closing gap between the British and Canadians delaying the formal establishment of one large bridgehead.

Two British Second Army columns of the Vernon bridgehead captured Longchamps, 25 miles from Vernon and 47 miles northwest of Paris, and near-by Mainneville, cutting the Paris-Rouen road. This marked an advance of four miles.

Only at the extreme western end of the line were the Germans continuing to put up a stiff resistance.

SEP 1 1944

The Canadian bridgehead which originated at Elbeuf and Pont-de-L'Arche five miles below Rouen was extended to reach the road running from Rouen to Boos, just east of the big port, and a linking of this bridgehead with the British holdings to the east was expected momentarily.

The Germans said they demolished harbor works and other military valuable installations at Rouen before evacuating as the Canadians closed in.

Of the three large Seine river loops in this area, the largest one, nearest the sea, was cleaned out by Allied forces at considerable cost, but there still was stiff opposition to Allied troops driving northward into the other two.

The American Third army's drive northeast of Paris toward Belgium past landmarks of the last World war continued to overshadow the rest of the front. After rolling through Reims — and across the Vesle river before it—the Americans fanned out northward and to the east, toward Verdun, the Argonne Forest, Metz and Germany itself.

A drive along this road already was under way a few miles to the south. After occupying Chalons, the Americans drove on four miles East to L'Epine, just 22 miles from Ste. Menehould at the edge of the Argonne forest, 40 miles from Verdun and 92 miles from the German border.

The Argonne forest marked the western end of the line from which the American First army under General Pershing launched its great Meuse-Argonne offensive on September 26 in 1918, which was still rolling at the armistice.

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—Two American Armored columns were less than 40 miles from Belgium today.

One clattered into Reims, siege fortress of World War I, and pushed ten miles beyond. A second unit to the northwest battled on the approaches to Laon, within 38 miles of the Belgian border, carrying doughboys well across the escape path for German armies above the Seine and on the Pas de Calais rocket-bomb coast.

The United States Third Army struck ahead all along a 70-mile front, and the Allies on the western wing knifed as deep as 25 miles north of the Seine between Paris and the sea.

The German high command said the Seine port city of Rouen had been evacuated.

Reims, noted for its cathedral and its champagne, is 50 miles from Belgium and 107 from the German homeland border. Tank units crossing the Vesle river already had covered ten of the remaining miles to Belgium. Americans besieging Laon were but 93 miles from Brussels, the Belgian capital.

Chalons Captured

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army was lunging on an almost straight line from Laon southeast to Vitry-le-Francois on the upper Marne, and was mopping up that town 96 miles from the Reich and 45 from Verdun. Chalons-sur-Marne to the northwest, and Les Grandes Loges eight miles northwest of Chalons fell.

The Berlin radio said American troops had driven almost to St. Dizier, little more than 80 miles from the German border. Such a thrust would be the closest approach yet to the Reich and an advance of nearly 20 miles southeast of Vitry, the last officially reported position of the Third Army's right wing.

Le Havre Outflanked

The loss of Rouen, whose converging highways lead to Dieppe, Le Havre, and the Somme valley, was announced by Berlin as Canadians closed in. Berlin said that harbor installations were destroyed, and that remnants of the Nazi Seventh Army from the Normandy traps had all pulled back across the river. Allied dispatches reported that the last two pockets in loops of the Seine were being methodically wiped out.

The great Atlantic port of Le Havre was outflanked.

British troops plunging above the Seine toward the Pas de Calais "rocket coast" reached Neufmarche, 25 miles from the river. Longchamps and Mainneville were taken in their advance.

Nazi Hopes Of Stand Dashed

The Allied grip on the north bank of the Seine had been consolidated from Louviers to Paris, 45 miles by airline and much longer by the river's winding course. All German hopes of a stand on the Seine were dashed.

Some units of Patton's army penetrated to Montaigu, ten miles southeast of Laon and 50 miles from Sedan—scene of the Nazi breakthrough into France in 1940.

Germans by-passed and cut up by lightning armored strokes were being killed or captured by mop-up columns in a great area northeast and east of Paris.

"Noticeable Relief"

(A Berlin radio commentator, discussing the withdrawal of the Seventh Army across the Seine, said this "is a noticeable relief for the German command. It has shown itself already in the Paris-Reims area by an increase of German resistance there." A German communique said Americans attacking between Paris and Reims were "halted in bitter fighting."

(The German commentator also asserted: "Allied formations which had been driving about the country between the Seine and the Marne more or less unmolested in the recent past are now encountering everywhere a strong defense of German troops operating in that area. The threat to the German right wing might now be described as having been removed.")

Fight At Brotonne Forest

Although the Americans were meeting little resistance in their rapid advances northeast of Paris, the progress was harder at the western end of the Allies' S-shaped front.

The Seine bend south of Caudebec was entirely in Allied hands but the Germans were cleared out of the Brotonne Forest in that area only after hard fighting.

What Germans were left on the south side of the Seine were in two remaining horseshoe loops. They were resisting fiercely, but General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's troops were smashing into both loops to clean them out.

Advances In Paris Area

In the Paris area, advances were made through the northeastern outskirts of the city beyond Le Bourget and Montmorency, and farther west elements cleared the Foret de St. Germain and moved north to a point less than two miles south of Pontoise.

Yanks Roll Through Paris

Division Parades Along Champs Elysees

New Government Surprises Citizens.

Paris, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Parisians returned today to arranging the scrambled fragments of their pre-war existence after a three-day liberation celebration climaxed yesterday by a parade of American troops past the Arc de Triomphe and down Paris's beautiful avenues.

That parade was not like a war's-end march along New York's Fifth avenue by soldiers finished with battle. Swinging down the Champs-Elysees where their fathers had marched a generation ago, the men of a great American infantry division followed the sound of their drums through Paris and headed back to the battle line.

With them went the cheers and silent prayers of hundreds of thousands who stood along the line of march. At one place a bearded priest stood solemnly with uplifted hands, not bothering to brush away the tears that rolled down his cheeks.

To the Unknown Soldier.

Along the route were mingled cries and shouts — everything from "God bless you" to "Any gum, Yank?"

It was a solemn moment when Lieut.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Lieut.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig laid a wreath on the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier of the first world war.

Things remained orderly in Paris today but far from normal. There was no public transportation—buses and subways dwindled to nothing after the invasion—and no one had hot water because of the fuel shortage.

The American Army had established an endless chain of trucks and planes bringing in American food, and in addition reviving traffic from the French countryside. Everybody was eating, but a restaurant meal might cost $50 for three.

Government Big News.

Dozens of little cars hastily painted with F. F. I. initials continued to race through the streets honking furiously, and there was the continual clatter of armor moving to the front, as well as the cheers of bystanders.

But the sniping and random shooting had ceased and every one felt a little more secure.

Matters governmental were the crux of the confusion. Newspapers newly brought up from the underground announced the composition of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's new civil Government. Throughout the occupation the F. F. I. had been in constant touch with the De Gaulle organization in Algiers, but to many millions in France who were not on the inside of the F. F. I. and to whom Gen. De Gaulle was liberation figurehead, the transplanting of the regime organized in Algiers came as a complete surprise. Some of the men involved were unknown or concealed behind assumed names of war.

Paris is virtually under three regimes—the De Gaulle civil administration, Gen. Koenig's military governorship and the United States Army, which is establishing a great base of operations and managing the emergency food supply and anti-aircraft defense.

Meanwhile, special American war services are now moving in. The Army newspaper Stars and Stripes, which had been publishing at Rennes, has set up in the Paris Herald offices. Blue uniformed American Red Cross girls are filtering in.

Address by De Gaulle.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, speaking over the Paris radio told the French people last night that their nation was on the threshold of rejoining "the ranks of the greatest," and was aware of "the necessity to act in such a way that the enemy will be completely and irretrievably beaten."

The French leader paid homage to members of the French resistance movement and to Parisians who, he said, "in the secret depths of their souls have never accepted the humiliation of defeat."

"France renders homage," he said, "to the brave and good Allied armies whose irresistible offensive rendered possible the liberation of Paris and are making certain the liberation of the whole territory."

CHEVALIER DEATH PUT NEAR CANNES

F. F. I. Think Actor Was Victim Of South French Maquis

Paris, Aug. 30 (AP)—Maurice Chevalier, French star who sang and clowned his way to fame in American movies, was believed killed by Maquis near Cannes in southern France, French Forces of the Interior said tonight. However, the F. F. I. said the death had not yet been confirmed.

Chevalier left Paris five months ago for southern France and his whereabouts have been a mystery since.

Never Active Collaborationist

The F. F. I. said he never had been an active collaborationist, merely following the path which assured him of the most comfortable living. He was friendly with Vichyites and Germans in the manner of making the best of things, it was said, but he was not known to have done any special harm.

The F. F. I. informant said Chevalier aged considerably in the last year. He worked intermittently, being engaged by cabarets frequented by the Nazis. The rest of the time he lounged about in comfort.

If he has been killed he is but one of several French actors put to death. Others now are under arrest and may also be shot. Their numbers include Sacha Guitry, Pierre Fresnay, Gilbert Gil and the comedian Aimos.

CORRESPONDENT INJURED

Boyle Hit by Motor Cycle During American Parade in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 30 (AP)—Hal Boyle, Associated Press correspondent, was injured yesterday when he was struck by a motor cycle during the American infantry parade down Champs-Elysées.

Mr. Boyle had escaped bombs, shells and bullets in the North African landings and in the campaigns through Tunisia, Sicily, Italy and northern France without injury. He was almost drowned when he went ashore in North Africa with the first invading Americans.

Yesterday he suffered ripped back ligaments that will keep him in a hospital for three days. Doctors said he had narrowly missed more serious injury.

Mr. Boyle was gathering names when a motor cycle policeman lost control of his machine, which was clipping along at forty miles an hour, and spun into the crowd. Mr. Boyle was hit and thrown high in the air. A doctor said that he had suffered no spinal injury.

HAL BOYLE INJURED

Paris, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Hal Boyle, Associated Press war correspondent, was injured yesterday when he was struck by a motorcycle during the American Infantry parade down the Champs Elysees.

Ironically, Mr. Boyle had escaped bombs, shells and bullets in the North African landings and in the campaigns through Tunisia, Sicily, Italy and northern France without injury, although he nearly was drowned when he went ashore in North Africa with the first invading Americans.

Yesterday he suffered ripped back ligaments which will keep him in a hospital three days. Doctors said he narrowly missed more serious injury.

Mr. Boyle, who is from Kansas City, Mo., was gathering names for home town newspapers when a motorcycle policeman lost control of his machine which was clipping along at forty miles an hour and spun into the crowd.

Mr. Boyle was hit by the motorcycle and thrown high in the air. He landed on his back and was unable to rise for several minutes. Although in pain he wrote his story before going to a hospital for X-rays. A doctor said he suffered no spinal injury.

Dr. Alexis Carrel Arrested By F. F. I.

Paris, Aug. 30 (AP)—Dr. Alexis Carrel, director of the Vichy-supported Carrel Institute and one-time scientific associate of Charles A. Lindbergh, has been arrested by the French Forces of the Interior, it was announced today.

He had been "suspended from all his functions" seven days ago.

The F. F. I. charged that Dr. Carrel, 71 years old, founded his institute with Vichy support for the purpose of supplanting the great French universities, and introducing Fascism and Marxism to the students.

Earlier he collaborated with Lindbergh in the invention of a mechanical heart.

The F. F. I. asserted that the Petain regime donated funds freely to Dr. Carrel's Institute, the initial gift amounting to 40,000,000 francs (roughly $800,000), with the intention of hiring away professors from the Sorbonne and other established universities.

When few of them accepted, Dr. Carrel then tried to close university laboratories so the professors would have to come to his institute to earn a living, the F. F. I. further alleged. Finally the attempt was abandoned because of the wave of protests, it was added.

Norman Lewis, Banker, Reported Dead In Paris

SEP 1 1944

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—A broadcast from Paris today said that Norman Lewis, investment banker and former Paris representative of the Eastman Dillon Company, was killed accidentally in his Paris apartment by a stray bullet during street fighting August 24.

Lewis was recently released from a concentration camp at Compiegne and had taken an apartment across the street from the Majestic Hotel, in the center of Nazi activity, the broadcast said. The fatal shot pierced one of the apartment windows, it was announced.

Lewis, 51, a widely known financier, was a long-time president of the American Club of Paris and a holder of the French Legion of Honor.

While at Compiegne last November, Lewis was shot in one leg without provocation by a German guard.

SUSPEND NEWSMEN FOR PARIS REPORT

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS

30.24 — 18379

ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 30 — (AP) Six correspondents accredited to Supreme Headquarters have been suspended in Paris and ordered to return to London for investigation of charges that they evaded censorship in filing dispatches, it was announced today.

Names of the correspondents involved will not be announced until the investigation ends. A high ranking officer at Supreme Headquarters said none of the Associated Press staff which entered Paris was involved.

Some ofthe persons figuring in the case are accused of making an uncensored broadcast direct from Paris after having agreed, under the usual practice in the European theater of operations, to submit material for field censorship.

Further comment was declined at headquarters until after the inquiry.

Patriots Take 37 Nazis In Ambush Above Lyon

With French Forces North of Lyon, Aug. 30 (AP)—Fighting French patriots, harassing the enemy's flank all the way to the Nazis' main escape route in the north, laid an ambush today 17 miles north of the German stronghold of Lyon and came out unscathed with 37 prisoners, including two majors.

These units picked the highway junction of St. Paul on the Lyon-Bourg road for the latest action after holding several Rhone river bridges east of Lyon against enemy attempts at demolition.

On one recent occasion, it was reported, 3,000 French patriots fought a pitched battle with 30,000 Germans in the hills not far from Grenoble. This particular battle was precipitated when Germans broke into a Maquis hospital in the vicinity and killed all the patients and nurses.

F. F. I. Free Four Towns, Tighten Ring About Lyon

Clermont-Ferrand Liberated, Nazis Slain in Alps

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP).—French Forces of the Interior have liberated four towns, have gained around Lyon and Bordeaux and have killed or captured 600 Germans in the Alps near Grenoble, they announced tonight.

"The towns of Clermont-Ferrand, Tarare, Bourgoin and Bourg St. Maurice have been liberated by the F. F. I." headquarters of General Joseph Pierre Koenig, Military Governor of Paris, said. "The ring around Lyons is being drawn tighter. Several points inside the town already are controlled by F. F. I., and the Germans are organizing themselves into pockets of resistance.

"During operations in the Belledonne Mountains near Grenoble, 200 enemy were killed and 400 taken prisoner. At Bordeaux the Germans have withdrawn to the right bank of the Garonne."

Army Absorbing F. F. I

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP).—Members of the French Forces of the Interior in Paris are being formed into an infantry battalion, the Paris radio said today, and will be incorporated as rapidly as possible in Brigadier General Jacques Le Clerc's regular army units.

Bodies Of 50, Reported Nazi Victims, Exhumed

SEP 1 1944

Paris, Aug. 30 (AP)—A wave of popular indignation swept Paris tonight following the exhumation of bodies of 50 French policemen and members of the FFI which were listed as German victims in the metropolitan area.

French newspapers said they had been shot by German SS troops without trial in the week preceding the fall of Paris. Some had been ordered to dig their own graves and many had been tortured without being formally accused or told the reason for their arrest, it was declared.

Eight bodies were recovered three days ago from a common grave in the courtyard of the Caserne de la Republique, a German barracks in the heart of Paris. Eight more were found in Luxembourg gardens, in the university quarters, and 34 were exhumed from three pits in the woods at Vincennes, a suburb east of Paris.

BODIES OF GERMAN VICTIMS RECOVERED

PARIS, Aug. 30 — (AP) Fifty bodies of French policemen and men of the FFI, shot by German SS troops without trial during the week before Paris' fall, have been dug up in the metropolitan area.

French newspapers said many victims were tortured before being killed, and died without being formally accused or told the reason for their arrest. Some were compelled to dig their own graves.

Arrests Continue In Paris

Paris, Aug. 30 (AP)—The intermittent boom of guns was heard in Paris for hours tonight and fighting was reported around Champigny, less than eight miles from the center of the capital, although this may have been against only a limited pocket of German resistance.

Arrest of persons accused of collaboration with the Germans continued. One was Francois Lehideux, former Vichy automobile industry director. Another was Madame Titayna, famous French novelist.

Parisians expressed fear the arrests might be proceeding too indiscriminately, recalling the "denunciations" of the French revolution.

175 NAZI OFFICERS KILLED BY BOMB HIT

ROME, Aug. 30 — (AP) American bombs killed an estimated 175 German staff officers in Marseille last May when dozens of bombs from Liberators solid hits on an enemy headquarters ensconced in a convent, Mediterranean air force headquarters announced today.

The M.A.A.F. announcement said additional convent buildings housing nuns and 300 orphans were not touched. Bodies of some of the Germans still are buried in the debris.

Yanks Six Miles From Valence In South

SEP 1 1944

Rome, Aug. 30 (AP)—United States troops forging up the Rhone Valley have reached within six miles of Valence, 27 miles up river from captured Montelimar and about 115 airline miles above Marseille, headquarters announced tonight.

The push carried well above the junction of the Rhone and Drome rivers. Doughboys hit last night at Germans attempting to escape across the Drome.

The heaviest fighting centered around Loriol, south of the Drome along Highway 70. The Germans threw pontoons across the stream, but whether they succeeded in getting any sizable group across was unknown.

Yanks Pushed Back

Meanwhile, due east near the Italian frontier, American troops were forced back to the outskirts of Briancon, a city on a 4,330-foot elevation in the Hautes-Alps 90 miles north of Nice, by an enemy force which was reported here to have crossed into French territory from Italy.

(Whether this indicated the flight of any large force of German troops from northwestern Italy was not made clear.)

The retreating German force in the Rhone Valley, remnants of the Nazi 19th army, was declared fighting for its very existence.

Scenes of destruction and chaos lined the road of the enemy's retreat. An army spokesman said this morning more than 800 German vehicles, including trucks fully loaded, were taken after the enemy abandoned them. Two batteries of German 88s also were taken by the pursuing Americans.

Fleeing By Sea

A naval announcement indicated many Germans are fleeing the southern France dragnet by sea in attempts to get to northern Italy. The announcement said many small boatloads of Germans had been captured.

Allied headquarters said the prisoner total had now passed 45,000, more than 10,000 being taken in the Marseille area alone.

Admiral Captured

At Montelimar, Rhone Valley city more than 100 miles north of Marseille, the Americans captured Maj. Gen. Otto Richter.

The 198th Infantry Division, which he commanded, and the 11th Panzer Division, have both figured prominently in all Rhone Valley actions. Prisoners said this division was recently transferred from Russia.

Another high ranking German leader to fall into Allied hands this week was Vice-Admiral Ruhfus, who commanded the enemy defense forces at Toulon.

Below Montelimar American and French troops steadily expanded the liberated territory. The French on the west side of the Rhone Valley reached the village of Bagnols, 13 miles northeast of Uzes.

SOUTHERN FRANCE DRIVE CONTINUES

Americans Hack at Fleeing Nazis—Germans Take Troops from Italy.

ROME, Aug. 30 — (AP) American forces hacked relentlessly at fleeing survivors of the German 19th army along a 20-mile stretch of the Rhone Valley today, while 90 miles to the east a strong Nazi armored force struck into France from the Italian frontier in an effort to relieve the pressure on Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz's shredded army. NORTHERN

Yank motorized infantry attacked the Germans retreating from southern France with particular ferocity at Loriol, 13 miles north of Montelimar, where the Nazis were attempting to get across the Drome river on hastily-thrown pontoon bridges and resume their flight toward the fatherland.

One three-mile German column estimated to have contained nearly 300 vehicles, including numerous pieces of horsedrawn artillery, virtually was wiped out by American artillery and planes in the Nazi "graveyard" between Montelimar and Valence, headquarters announced.

Advance American elements, skirting the maelstrom of battle at this point and driving to head off another segment of the enemy's disorganized forces, had reached the town of Chabeauil, 27 miles up the valley from Montelimar and only six miles east and slightly south Valence.

The 56 miles from Valence on the city of Lyon promised only more unremitting punishment for the Nazis, and even the vanguard of the fleeing enemy appeared unlikely to escape the closing Allied net except in very small, disorganized groups.

The Germans were in such desperate straits that in the past two days they had abandoned 800 loaded trucks and two batteries of their famed dual-purpose 88-millimeter guns. For scores of miles the Rhone valley was littered with German equipment, tossed aside in the mad rush to get away.

Presumably hoping to compel Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch to divert part of his forces from the methodical slaughter along the Rhone, the Nazis sent a striking column across the Alps from northwestern Italy to attack the American garrison at Briancon, eight miles inside France and about 50 miles southwest of Grenoble.

Although the Yanks were driven out of the medieval fortress town, suffering some casualties and loss of equipment, the setback was considered of minor importance. Edward Kennedy, Associated Press field correspondent, reported from the vicinity:

"The German attack was of local character and Briancon is of little value in itself. Americans still hold all of the route Napoleon up to the outskirts of Briancon and the Germans are far from achieving an escape route through France."

It was assumed that the attacking enemy column contained elements of the two armored divisions which last week were reported concentrated north of Turin in Italy, more than 50 airline miles east of Briancon. This was the first offensive gesture undertaken by the Nazis since the Allied invasion of southern France began over two weeks ago.

Prisoner Count Up To 45,000

Allied headquarters announced that the count of enemy prisoners had reached 45,000, and additional thousands were being rounded up daily. Included in the bag were six enemy generals, the most recent prize being Maj. Gen. Otto Richter, commander of the Nazi 198th Infantry Division, who was seized at Montelimar. The division was said to have been recently transferred from Russia.

The towns of Sauzet and Clary, northeast of Montelimar, were mopped up by American infantry.

For 100 miles from Montelimar to the sea American and French troops expanded the liberated territory as they mopped up isolated groups of Nazis. The French on the west side of the Rhone Valley reached the village of Bagnols, 17 miles northwest of Avignon.

Flight By Sea Blocked

A naval announcement said many small boatloads of Germans had been captured as they tried to escape along the coast of southern France.

American troops advancing eastward along the Riviera coast toward the Italian frontier were drawn up outside the resort city of Nice at last report, feeling out the strength of the German garrison.

There yet was no Allied confirmation that American troops had reached the Swiss frontier near Geneva, as the Germans reported yesterday.

7TH NAZI GENERAL TAKEN IN SOUTH

Montelimar, France, Aug. 29 —(Delayed)—(A. P.).—American troops in the southern France invasion captured their seventh German general, with 400 of his men, today, in a fierce fight north of this Rhone Valley town.

The arrogant Prussian officer refused even to tell his name until he was presented to an American general. The lieutenant bringing him to Seventh Army headquarters got only a cold stare for his question and this:

"I don't have to answer any questions for you."

The battle took place between two hills and blazed more than two hours. G. I.'s on one hill began an attack across a valley toward the other hill, where the Nazis were holding out. In the same neighborhood, an American outfit had captured thirty artillery pieces only two days before.

Arms and artillery flamed violently until the Americans scaled the height and captured the German garrison. The general was incensed because an American counterpart was not there at the moment he was captured.

RESISTANCE CHIEFS IN FRENCH REGIME

SEP 1 1944

Revised Cabinet Also Includes Communists—Order Marks Investigations in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 30 (AP)—A French Provisional Government, headed by Gen. Charles de Gaule as President and including Communists and some men whose real identity is still hidden by assumed names, was announced today by the French Committee of National Liberation.

André Le Trocquer, former Socialist Deputy, was named Commissioner for Liberated Territories. Quartus Cérat, former Senator Henri Queuille and former Deputy François Billoux were named Commissioners for territories still occupied by the Germans.

André Philip, a former Deputy, was appointed as liaison between the Provisional Government and the temporary Assembly. Gen. Georges Catroux was made Coordinator of Moslem Questions.

All bear the title of Commissioner of State.

Cérat is the assumed name of a man who has been General de Gaulle's Minister at Large, doing liaison work with the forty-odd underground groups. He is a former Attorney General of the Supreme Courts.

13 Commissioners Announced

The names of thirteen Commissioners—a rank equivalent to that of Minister—were also announced. Ten of these held the same positions in the committee set up in Algiers and one held a similar post under a different title. The list follows:

Foreign Affairs—René Massigli.
Justice—François de Menthon.
Colonies—René Pleven.
War—André Diethelm.
Air—Fernand Grenier.
Finance—Pierre Mendès-France.
Information—Henri Bonnet.
Communications and Merchant Marine—René Mayer.
War Prisoners and Deportees—Henri-Pierre Frenay.
Labor and Social Matters—Adrien Tixier.
Production—Paul Giacobbi.
Education—René Capitant.
Without Portfolio—Jean Monnet.

Pending the assembly of the group, the principal functions will be conducted by the following secretaries:

War—General Fortin.
Education—Henry Wallon.
Health—Prof. Pasteur Vallery-Radot.
Justice—Marcel Willard.
Information—Jean Guignebert.
National Economy—René Constant.
Finance—M. Monick.
Agriculture—Jean Lefèvre.
Industry—Robert Lacoste.
Communications—M. Mathieu.
Post, Telegraph and Telephone—M. Quesno.
War Prisoners—M. Mitterand.

Radio France in Algiers said tonight that members of the Committee and the Provisional Consultative Assembly had left Algiers for Paris. Before the departure, Gen. Georges Catroux was named Commissioner of State for French North Africa, it was announced.

M. Cérat will handle civil affairs in liberated France, besides continuing his direction of the underground in still-occupied territory. His assistant is a man named Pierrot, also an alias, who said: "De Gaulle always was recognized as the leader of French resistance, both inside and outside the country."

No appointments were ever made by General de Gaulle without first consulting the underground and gaining its approval, he said. If the underground differed on any problem and offered suggestions, they were always accepted.

The Provisional Government, which, it was understood, will remain substantially as announced until war prisoners and deportees could be returned to participate in a general election, was received with varying degrees of enthusiasm by the newly revived Paris press. There were indications of an early revival of traditional French political dissension.

Bank Officials Arrested

"Every official of the Bank of France from the governor on down has been removed and arrested," Charles Collingwood, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, said in a broadcast from Paris.

"Of course," he added, "the Bank of France is Germany's principal financial enterprise in France. Then in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs all of the Vichy officials have been suspended pending an investigation to discover whether any of them were acting secretly for the resistance movement. There's a great deal of this going on now in Paris, but it ought to be said that it is being done quietly and moderately—there is no reign of terror in Paris.

"The De Gaulle government of France is a real government now. It has a country to govern and a capital to govern from. It's being given a completely free hand by the Allies. Until now, we've only seen it as a sort of debating society in Algiers, but from now on we can watch it as a government in operation, and a refugee government is very different from a government in being. A refugee government makes plans far away from the scene; a real government has to carry them out on the ground."

Unions Get Pledge

General de Gaulle pledged the restoration of trade-union liberties and activities as soon as possible in liberated France, the Paris radio reported yesterday, according to the Federal Communications Commission.

François Lehideux, former member of the Vichy Cabinet and a leader in the French motor industry, has been arrested by Paris police, the American Broadcasting Station in Europe said, according to the Office of War Information.

Cerat Revealed As FFI Aide To De Gaulle

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP—Delayed)—The French underground and the Committee of National Liberation in Algiers have functioned as one body since April of this year, when Gen. Charles de Gaulle appointed the man known as Quartus Cerat as his personal representative in France to assure closest harmony between the two groups.

Through Cerat's hands passed all the problems of both groups and orders were put into effect only after unanimous approval by both the underground and Algiers Government.

Headed Resistance Groups

As the personal representative of de Gaulle, 42-year-old Cerat was given direct charge of all resistance movements in France—more than 40—which were represented by the National Council of Resistance.

His performance under the most difficult circumstances has won Cerat a position in the new Government as Minister Without Portfolio. He will handle civil affairs in liberated France as well as continuing his direction of the underground in territory still occupied by the Germans.

Not His Real Name

Quartus Cerat is not his real name. He assumed the nom de guerre four years ago, when he joined the resistance movement after the fall of France. In all that time he walked in the shadow of death, for he was a well-known figure before the occupation, having been an attorney general attached to the Supreme Court.

Cerat's assistant is a man named Pierrot, also an alias, who told me today, "de Gaulle always was recognized as the leader of French resistance, both inside and outside the country."

Paris Silences Papers Published Under Nazis

Many Directors Flee or Are Placed Under Arrest

PARIS, Aug. 26 (Delayed) (AP).—All the Paris newspapers which published during the Nazi occupation, except those issued clandestinely in defiance of the Nazi-controlled Vichy regime, have been silenced by the French Forces of the Interior.

Many of their directors have fled or have been reported arrested. Among those held was Stephane Lauzanne, chief editorial writer of "Le Matin," famous French daily.

"Le Matin," "Le Petit Parisien," "Paris-Midi," "L'Oeuvre," "Le Cri du Peuple" and "Aujourdhui," which started during occupation with German support, were raided days ago by the F. F. I. and ceased publication.

"L'Oeuvre" was the mouthpiece for Marcel Deat, French Minister of Labor, and "Le Cri du Peuple" was put out by Jacques Doriot, former Communist deputy, who joined the Vichyites.

The famous Parisian newspapers of pre-war days which French journalists say are to be revived within a few days include "Excelsior," "L'Intransigeant" and "Le Journal." First to reappear was "Le Figaro."

British Troops Join Poles To Hit Nazi Gothic Line

ROME, Aug. 30—(AP) British troops, transferred secretaly from the interior, have joined the Polish corps in a smashing attack against German Gothic line outposts near the Adriatic coast and have captured a commanding ridge eight miles southwest of the port of Pesaro, Allied Headquarters announced tonight.

The full-scale assault, apparently taking the enemy by surprise, dislodged the crack German First Parachute division from strong positions and threatened to outflank Pesaro, from which Polish and British troops were only four miles distant after a two-mile thrust from Fano along the coast.

By capturing the three-mile-long ridge overlooking the Foglia river, which flows into the sea at Pesaro, the British and Poles virtually cleared the enemy from the last hill positions before the Gothic line defenses in that sector. The attacking troops were within 18 miles of the rim of the great Po Valley of northern Italy.

A British destroyer supported the Allied advance by slipping close inshore at night and bombarding the strongly-fortified Pesaro area. Allied fighter planes knocked out many Nazi gun positions ahead of the ground forces.

On the left flank of the Allied drive, British troops reached Colbordolo, 11 miles southwest of Pesaro, and captured a height within 1,000 yards of the Foglia river. Urbano, 19 miles southwest of Pesaro, fell to another Allied column pushing through the mountains.

East and northeast of Florence the Nazis continued to pull back into the Gothic line. Eighth Army patrols scouted nearly five miles north of Pontassieve, just east of Florence, without meeting opposition. Ontignano, three miles northeast of Florence, was found to have been evacuated by the enemy.

Florence itself was quiet except for scattered artillery fire, as was the entire Fifth Army front along the Arno river westward to the Tyrrhenian sea.

ALLIES TAKE RIDGE IN ITALY

Battle for Last Heights Before Gothic Line.

SEP 1 1944

Rome, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Smashing through veteran German parachute troops in the first full blown attack on the Italian front in recent weeks, British and Polish forces are driving the enemy off his last hill positions before the Adriatic end of the Gothic Line and are within eighteen miles of the Po Valley rim.

Heavy fighting was reported as the Eighth Army dislodged the Nazi First Parachute Division—reformed since its defeat at Cassino—from a three-mile long range overlooking the Foglia River after crossing the Arzilla River. The Foglia flows into the Adriatic at the heavily fortified town of Pesaro, which would be threatened with being outflanked if the advance further inland were continued.

On the coast British forces operating with the Poles advanced more than two miles beyond Fano.

Capture of the ridge overlooking the Foglia River put Eighth Army elements in Monte Cigcardo, eight miles southwest of Pesaro. Further to the southwest other units reached Colbordolo, eighteen miles south southeast of Rimini, and were on heights within 1,000 yards of Foglia.

Urbino, nineteen miles southwest of Pesaro, fell to another column driving toward the Gothic Line through the mountains, headquarters announced.

The naval command, meanwhile, disclosed that a British destroyer had supported the advance along the Adriatic by slipping close inshore Monday night and bombarding the fortified Pesaro area.

In the center of the Italian front the Germans continued slowly pulling back into strong defenses in the northern Appenines. Eighty Army elements pushed nearly five miles north from Pontassieve in the big bend of the Arno River east of Florence. British patrols found the enemy gone from Ontignano, three miles northwest of Florence.

Florence itself was reported quiet except for scattered artillery fire, while operations on the Fifth Army front were limited to patrolling.

Allied aircraft supported the attack in the Adriatic sector, bombing and strafing enemy positions. R. C. A. F. Spitfires from the City of Windsor Squadron eliminated one major obstacle from the path of the troops by sealing a big German railway gun in a tunnel. Led by Squadron Leader O. C. Mallio, Ironwood, Mich., the Canadian pilots ripped up tracks at both ends of the tunnel with 500-pound bombs. The same squadron knocked out enemy positions 1,000 yards ahead of the Eighth Army forces.

363d Regiment In Italy

Rome, Aug. 30 (AP)—The 363d Regiment of the United States 91st Infantry Division has been fighting in Italy as a unit of the Fifth Army since July 4, it was announced tonight. Col E. Fulton Magill, Jr., of Portland, Ore., is commander.

Virginia Flyer Fifth Ranking American Ace

Rome, Aug. 30 (AP)—Lieut. James L. Brooks, Roanoke, Va., became the fifth ranking American ace in the Mediterranean theater yesterday by shooting down two Messerschmitt-109's over Czechoslovakia.

He is a Mustang fighter pilot and his score now is 13 victories.

Allied Forces Stage Raid On Foe on Dalmatian Isle

Blow Up Ammunition Dumps in Attack on Korcula

ROME, Aug. 30 (AP).—Allied infantry, artillery, air and naval forces carried out a successful raid against enemy forces on the Dalmatian island of Korcula Saturday night, it was announced tonight. Korcula is off the central Yugoslav coast in an area where Marshal Josip Broz's (Tito's) army has been active.

The landings were not opposed. Casualties were inflicted, gun positions were damaged and ammunition dumps were blown up.

The Balkan Air Force, especially created to aid Partisan forces in the peninsula, participated.

Serbian Strong Point Captured By Slavs

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—Two Bulgarian battalions defending a strong point on Mount Slatibor, in Serbia, yielded to Marshal Tito's Partisans after 850 were killed and 120 captured, a Yugoslav communique said today.

This entire sector now has been freed of the enemy and remnants are retreating toward western Moraca, the war bulletin said, adding that more than 2,000 enemy troops in Montenegro had been wiped out. Kolasin, in Montenegro, was captured.

Nazi Column Routed

A German column which had been forcing Yugoslavs to move from western Dalmatia to the Island of Hvar, southeast of Split, in the Adriatic, was routed and many civilians were freed.

The bulletin also asserted the Partisans had cleared Nazi troops out of the Brekalnica-Osodovo sector in Macedonia and that new harassing attacks had been made upon enemy communications in Herzegovina and Serbia.

Romanians Announce Capital Has Been Wrested from Nazi Control.

GENERALS CAPTURED

Russians Announce Germans Suffered 'Tremendous Losses.'

By W. W HERCHER

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 31—(AP) The Russians cleared the Germans out of all the rich Ploesti oil fields and penetrated the Bucharest metropolitan area yesterday while linking up their two armies in the Romanian theater for a concentrated blow in the direction of the Hungarian plains.

Fall of Ploesti, long the greatest single source of oil for the German armies, was hailed as the most significant day's victory of the 12-day campaign, which forced Romania a week ago to jump from the Axis to the allied camp.

In capturing more than 200 towns in a day around Ploesti and northeast of Bucharest, the nearest announced Soviet approach to the Romanian capital was 17 miles, at the village of Meriuta.

Patrols near Capital

Speedy patrols, however, were believed to be much nearer to the capital, which the Romanians have announced they themselves already have retrieved from the Germans.

The lightning advance southwestward by Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army caught another 15,000 Germans Tuesday, Moscow announced, the prisoners including a corps commander, Gen. Heil; a divisional commander, Lieut. Gen. Weitzner, and two colonels commanding divisions. This brought the total of captured German Generals to 34 since the general summer offensive began June 23.

The bag in Wednesday's race of more than 45 miles from Buzau had not yet been counted, but the German losses in the unsuccessful defense of Ploesti were declared by the Moscow communique to be "tremendous."

East of Malinovsky's newly-won positions, the Third Ukrainian army of Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin captured 100 towns in the big pocket between the Danube river bends and the Black sea and shouldered up to the river next to their comrades of the second army.

The Russians claimed no towns in the vicinity of the present Bulgarian border on their left flank, but Moscow dispatches said it was considered a certainty that they had thrown out flanking guards and established some sort of frontier contact with the southern Dobruja territory that Bulgaria took from Romania in 1940. Moscow will have an important voice in deciding the ultimate disposition of that territory.

Whether the next main Russian thrust will be westward up the Danube to Hungary or through the Carpathians into Transylvania remained a Soviet secret.

Hungarian-held Transylvania territory already has been penetrated in two places by elements of Malinovsky's army. The Russians remained silent about that front, but German accounts indicated a major push might be shaping up there.

A drive up the Danube, however, would present the possibility of forming a solid front with Marshal Tito's partisans in Yugoslavia.

Capture of Ploesti and all its petroleum fields was the big success of the moment, however.

Current production of Ploesti oil is uncertain. Allied headquartedrs figures in London showed that the refineris there used to produce 10,000,000 tons of petroleum products annually and supplied the German war machine with a full third of its entire needs.

The refineries have been repeated targets of American bombers, with an intensive campaign since May which undoubtedly has reduced production. The wells, however, were deliberately avoided.

Despite mining of the Danube and blasting of other transport routes to Germany, the Ploesti wells had been Germany's one source of natural oil in any volume.

The Nazi loss was hailed in Moscow by a salute of 20 salvos from 224 cannon.

High in the eastern Carpathian mountains some 75 miles north of Ploesti, other forces of Malinovsky's army were developing a major offensive against Hungarian-held Transylvania.

The Germans have acknowledged Russian entry into Hungarian territory at two points, and while the Russians have refrained from full reports on the operations there, it was known that they already had won control of four principal passes into Transylvania.

Hungarian and German troops fought fiercely to try to plug these gaps, the German radio said.

Far northward in Poland, the Germans also admitted that the Russians had resumed a ferocious offensive north of Warsaw and breached the German lines at a number of places, but did not give definite locations. The Germans also mentioned heavy fighting west of the Vistula some 130 miles below Warsaw.

Moscow, Aug. 30 (AP)—The beaten Germans fled today from their last strongholds on the Black Sea as Russia, with troops within 29 miles of Bulgaria, appealed to the Bulgars for support in quick liberation of the Balkans.

The capture of Constanta, Romania's largest port, appeared likely to be followed within a few hours by a complete mopup of scattered German forces in the Bucharest-Ploesti zone by Soviet armored columns, last reported 37 miles to the northeast.

Rout Called Disorderly

The Nazi rout in Wallachia province was so disorderly that road and rail bridges escaped demolition. Little sabotage was reported in the Ploesti oil fields.

(The German communique said Russian attacks were checked in the Buzua area of Romania and that Soviet troops invading Transylvania, part of Hungary since 1940, were thrown back in counter-attacks.)

With Hungary in the hands of a new Government of generals and the Germans hastily increasing their garrison in the rump state of Slovakia, central Europe continued to be jarred politically as well as militarily by the power blows of Red army groups under Gens. Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Fedor I. Tolbukhin.

Reds' Position Favorable

The Russians are in a position to capitalize immediately on any new defection by Nazi satellites on the eastern fringe of the Reich.

Bulgaria was warned that passive neutrality was not enough. The Bulgars watched Red warships cruising beyond Constanta in unchallenged supremacy of the Black Sea. Balcic, a Romanian port less than 10 miles north of Bulgarian Dobrudia, seemed an easy prize for another Russian amphibious assault.

A complete German collapse in the Balkans, perhaps within a few days, was seen as hinging on possible Bulgar action. Large withdrawals of German units from Greece have been reported. The Nazis were marching north along Bulgar outposts in Macedonia. Bulgaria also is within striking distance of Nis, the Yugoslav rail junction controlling communications throughout most of the Balkan peninsula.

Early Hungarian Rout Seen

Moscow officially forecast an early rout of Hungary.

"The time is not far off when all the Hungarian lackeys of Hitler will fall head over heels," declared a Soviet communique.

Red troops drove upon Bucharest, Romania's capital, from three directions—one column from less than 60 miles away on the northeast through the Ploesti oil region.

On the southeast, Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian Army also ranged close to the city. In the center other columns drove along the Danube Valley.

Constanta is the terminus of the oil pipeline from Ploesti.

SEP 1 1944

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—The German radio said tonight that the Russians had resumed their offensive north of Warsaw and breached German lines at a number of points. The Red army in that area threatened not only to outflank the Polish capital, but menaces the defenses of East Prussia as well.

Poles Rule In Lublin,

Prepare To Fight Again

SEP 1 1944

By Daniel De Luce

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 29 (AP—Delayed)—A Poland unbroken in spirit after five years as a Nazi slaughterhouse gropes courageously today for a new life of freedom and peace.

In Lublin, 35 miles behind the Red army front and 700 miles from Moscow, a provisional government of Poles exercises wide authority without the appearance of foreign interference.

Catholicism continues as the state religion and priests teach in the public schools. Church property and lands are untouched.

A peasant market thrives in an open square where the Germans had razed a section of Lublin's medieval ghetto.

Soldiers Drill In Streets

Thousands of young Poles, most of them still in civilian clothes, for uniforms are scarce, drill in the cobblestoned streets under veterans of guerrilla warfare—recruits for a Polish army that is expected soon to number a half million. Women carry arms and serve in all branches of the national defense except actual combat.

A few score Jews, all that are left of the pre-war ghetto population of 40,000, never can efface the memory of the German terror but in this new Poland—whose National Committee includes a prominent Zionist—there are no barriers of race or creed against them.

Guns Still Heard

Anti-aircraft guns bark on the outskirts of Lublin and German observation planes are a daily sight. The stench from the infamous Majdanek prison camp, where it is estimated 600,000 or more victims of the Nazis were put to death, becomes a nauseating reminder when the wind is from the east.

Poland still is in the agony of war. Lubin citizens know their kinsfolk have been dying by thousands in the ruins of Warsaw. But here, where Poles sit in the highest government offices, Polish judges and police conduct the administration of justice and Polish newspapers forecast an era of prosperous democracy, Polish pride and hope are reborn.

Standing in busy Krakow street, you meet Poles great and small who speak with unquenchable hatred of past German tortures and with determination of rebuilding a strong, independent Poland.

Only 300,000 Jews Left

Dr. Emil Sommerstein, the only Jewish member of the Committee of National Liberation, says:

"There were three and a half million Polish Jews before the war. Now, counting emigration to Russia, Palestine and other countries, perhaps 300,000 still live. Some 60,000 young Jews were compelled to work in German war industries at Lodz. What has happened to them we don't know.

"We know the more than 300,000 Jews in Warsaw were nearly all killed. Of 107,000 Jews in Lwow about 2,000 survived. Here a little more than 50 of Lublin's 40,000 Jews are registered as alive. For 42 years a Zionist, I'm proud to say our new government has promised in fact as well as law to make no distinction between Jews and non-Jews."

A small bright-eyed woman, Rachela Baumrin, told me how her life was saved by false papers identifying her as a Christian and how she shielded her husband for 15 months in a cellar room against the Gestapo.

Gets Letter From Fiance

Overjoyed Sophie Borowska, born in Philadelphia 30 years ago, waved a Red Cross letter from her fiance, Waldzimierz Bakanowski, with the address of Windsor, Canada. She last saw him when he went to the front in September, 1939. He was captured during the campaign of British-Polish forces at Narvik, Norway.

"He must have been released in an exchange of war prisoners and that's how he got to Canada," she said.

60 Priests Executed

Bishop Joszef Kruszynski of Lublin emerged from his quarters adjoining the bomb-scarred cathedral.

"We had 400 priests in the diocese before the war," he related. "Sixty were excuted by the Germans and more than 150 were sent to the Dachau and Oranienburg concentration camps.

"My predecessor, Bishop Fulman, is under house arrest even yet in a village near Krakow. Suffragan Bishop Goral, under death sentence, was removed to Oranienburg. I spent six months in a cell in Lublin castle after November, 1939, because I was a rector of Lublin University and I was forced to witness the shooting of two professors. . . ."

Polish Churches Closed

The bishop said of the 350 churches in his diocese the Germans destroyed 20, but other bishops reported losses of up to 80 per cent. He continued:

"Our Committee of National Liberation has approved the teaching of religion in state schools as before the war. Our properties are unmolested. Since the Red army came, only one of my priests was detained and that was because he was of German nationality. Yes, today, I can tell you we have liberty."

New York Teacher

Outwitted Nazis in Poland

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 29 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Stella Buddy is a pert, blue-eyed school mistress from little old New York, but her heart—at least half of it—belongs to Poland.

She went through the 1939 siege of Warsaw without ever going into a cellar shelter because, she says, she's "afraid of rats."

One morning last month she was interrupted while cooking breakfast when a Soviet tank started firing under her apartment balcony. That was the day the Red Army captured Lublin.

At present the ex-school teacher is the favorite interpreter for the Polish Committee of National Liberation when it grants interviews to the American press in this temporary capital of Poland.

"I'm 32, married and the mother of two children," she told me during a pause in transcribing notes on a four-hour meeting of the committee. "The last letter I had from my family in America was four years ago, when my father—Stanley Bodzinski—lived at 9935 Third avenue, Brooklyn. I suppose both my brothers were drafted early.

"I came to Poland in 1932 to teach English at the Methodist Mission in Warsaw because there were no vacancies in the New York city school system. When my year's contract was almost up I found I had fallen in love with a young electrical engineer. I married him, but I kept my American passport. He was a cadet officer of an artillery battery defending Warsaw.

"When the Germans won out they were going to ship my husband to some foreign prison camp, although Polish troops had been promised release. He escaped from a line of prisoners being marched from the city and stayed with friends until I could bring him a civilian suit. I cried for a long time that night.

"Here in Lublin he got a job in the city power plant and I taught English privately.

"You'd be surprised how many Poles want to speak our language and how swiftly they learn. The Germans, of course, wouldn't have allowed it if they had known."

She said that she and her husband had "scraped along" by bartering little household treasures for minor luxuries in food and clothing throughout the long German occupation, during which many personal acquaintances were victims of Nazi persecution.

"When we saw the German civil administrators running away like curs and heard the sound of Russian artillery outside the city we knew the hour of liberation had struck at last," she declared.

MOSCOW, Aug. 30 — (AP) Donald M. Nelson and Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Hurley arrived in Moscow today enroute to Chungking for a brief visit at the Chinese capital.

Russ Tank Leader Honored

Moscow, Aug. 30 (AP)—V. A. Malyshev, Commissar of Tank Industry, received the Order of Lenin and gold star in a special decree of the supreme Soviet and was promoted to lieutenant general.

The Moscow radio said tonight the Soviet Government had decorated Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov with a second Medal of the Gold Star and had conferred on Marshal Alexander M. Vasilevsky the Medal of the Gold Star and the title of Hero of the Soviet Union.

Czech Patriot Army Strikes At Nazis

London, Aug. 30 (AP) — The Czechoslovak underground army came into the open today as a fighting unit. In its first communique delivered to London by underground radio, it reported the capture of one town and fierce fighting against the German in three areas.

The communique, issued by the Czechoslovak Press Bureau, said:

"The German high command has since August 29 been occupying Slovakia. Czechoslovak troops in Slovakia, together with guerrilla detachments, have offered resistance to the Germans.

Frontier Town Taken

"According to reports so far received, the town of Cadca, on the frontier between Slovakia and Moravia, has been taken by assault.

"Heavy fighting has been reported from the regions of Zilina, Povazska Bystrica and Trencin."

Cadca is south of Jablonica Pass and lies on the railway leading from the Slovak capital of Bratislava to Berlin and Krakow.

Zilina is the most important rail junction in central Slovakia and also the seat of war industries.

Dominates Vlara Pass

Povazska Bystrica is just south of Zilina on the road to Bratislava. Trencin is still further south, roughly half way between the capital and Zilina, and dominates the Vlara Pass into the White Carpathians.

Meanwhile London Czechs heard an unconfirmed report that Sano Mach, minister of interior of the puppet Slovak Government, attempted to "commit suicide" and is now at a Nazi-guarded nursing home in Bratislava.

August 26 Mach warned the people against cooperation with guerrilla bands and Allied parachutists and claimed that Slovak troops and police were taking" energetic actions against the Partisans."

Spread Swiftly

But according to Czech underground sources in London, the majority of the troops sent to quell the uprising joined Czechoslovak forces of the interior and the uprising spread so swiftly the Germans were forced to march in.

Frantisek Slamen, member of the executive committee of the totalitarian Hlinka party and member of the Slovak Parliament, was the first prominent collaborator to be killed by Partisans, the underground said. He was killed August 27 at Brezno in central Slovakia.

PRAVDA FIRES BLAST AT TURKS

SEP 1 1944

Soviet Paper Says Spying by Nazis Continues.

Moscow, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—The semi-official newspaper Pravda today accused Turkey of harboring German spies and turning her diplomatic break with the Nazis into a "friendly rupture."

With Russian troops closer to the Dardanelles than on any occasion since the first world war, Pravda asserted German diplomatic, military, aviation and commercial attaches still were in Ankara twenty days after their scheduled departure.

The article carried the dateline of Batum, nearest Russian Black Sea port to Turkey, and was spread over two columns on Pravda's foreign news page. Its significance could hardly be overemphasized.

Says Espionage Increases.

The article charged that Nazi espionage and propaganda against the Allies, especially against the Soviet Union, actually had increased since Turkey broke relations with the Reich and that German diplomats still held receptions attended by Turkish officials and representatives of German satellite governments.

The article said that some of the most important Turkish newspapers remained under German influence, and that Turkey allowed Nazi diplomats to mail official private correspondence through the Ankara post office to Germany. It said that the German embassy personnel retained diplomatic licenses on their motor cars and rode freely about the capital.

"The unbecoming picture of the servile attitude of Turkish authorities to the Hitlerite diplomats cannot help but provoke surprise," Pravda said, quoting journalistic sources in Ankara to the effect that the Turks promised Nazi Ambassador Franz von Papen to keep all terms of the Turkish-German agreement of July, 1941, until the end of the current war, regardless of the diplomatic break.

Pravda's correspondent estimated that 1,300 Germans still were in Turkey, among them the military attache, Gen. Rode; the air attache, Gen. Kettenbeil, a Gestapo representative and other prominent Nazis.

TURKEY ACCUSED OF DOUBLE GAME IN SOVIET PAPER

REUCE

MOSCOW, Aug. 30 — (AP) Soviet Russia, having crushed German power in the Black Sea, today called on Bulgaria and Turkey to assist in the Allied liberation of southeastern Europe as Pravda, the semi-official newspaper, accused Turkey of playing a double game with Germany.

Apparently the Kremlin was determined to reinforce the Red army offensive in Romania with politico-military decisions by Bulgaria and Turkey which would compel immediate German evacuation of the Balkan peninsula and make central Europe the next battlefield.

Charging that Turkey's diplomatic break with Germany has been turned into a "friendly rupture," Pravda declared that Nazi espionage and propaganda against the Allies — especially against the Soviet Union — had increased; that some of the most important Turkish newspapers remained under Nazi influence; that German diplomats still held receptions attended by Turkish officials and that an estimated 1,300 Germans, including diplomatic, military, aviation and commercial attaches, still were in the country.

The article, carrying the dateline of Batum, nearest Russian Black Sea port to Turkey, asserted that "the unbecoming picture of the servile attitude of Turkish authorities to the Hitlerite diplomats cannot help but provoke surprise."

(In Washington, Pravda's blast was widely recognized in official quarters as a Russian determination to gain unlimited access to the Mediterranean sea through the Turkish-controlled Bosporus and Dardanelles.

Appeal to Spaniards

(Meanwhile, the official Soviet News agency Tass denied that Russia was satisfied with Bulgaria's "passivity," and a Moscow broadcast reported by the FCC, appealed to Spaniards to oust the Francisco Franco regime and break with Germany "to gain a place for Spain among the democratic and freedom-loving nations.")

The Russians admittedly are tired of excuses, delays and evasions by Sofia and Ankara at a moment when the entire German structure in southeastern Europe could be demolished by coordinated action. If Bulgaria and Turkey refuse to help, the Red army, with Romanian support, is confident of finishing the job anyhow.

BULGARIAN DELAY HIT BY SOVIETS

SEP 1 1944

Russians Charge 'Neutrality' Is Ruse—Turkey Criticized.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 31—(AP) The Balkan kettle was boiling over today, threatening the German defense structure with these developments:

1—A bitter Soviet radio attack on Bulgaria's proclaimed "neutrality" as a pro-German ruse;

2—Arrival of a Bulgarian armistice commission in Cairo to try to bargain with Britain and the United States for peace;

3—Arrival of a Romanian armistice commission in Moscow to talk terms, even though Romania already has shifted to the Allied side;

4—Flare-up of guerrilla warfare in the German puppet state of Slovakia which led to a German occupation;

5—Russian press criticism of Turkey, accusing her of playing a double game with the Germans and urging a more positive pro-Allied stand.

The latest blast from the Moscow radio, quoting Tass, official Soviet News agency, in a dispatch significantly datelined "Constanta," said German naval vessels had found safe shelter in Bulgarian Black sea and Danube river ports and that "the Bulgarian government's proclaimed 'neutrality' is in order to enable the Germans to hide in Bulgaria from prosecution by the Allies."

Russia is not at war with Bulgaria, but a campaign of Soviet diplomatic pressure on that wobbly German satellite has been growing steadily stronger.

Dispatches direct from Moscow portrayed the Kremlin as believing that perhaps the Balkans represented the easiest route of invasion of Germany, provided Turkey would get busy and clean out the Aegean and provided Bulgaria would come around to the Allied side, permitting a juncture of the Russians and Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisans.

German-dominated Hungary already was in a hapless position which was reflected in her recent cabinet crisis, and the uprising in Slovakia sharpened the menace to Germany's back door.

Nazi Spokesman Gloomy.

London, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Germany's increasingly worse position in the Balikans, plus the Allied advances in France, drew a gloomy broadcast review from Gen. Dittmar last night. Acknowledging Germany's setbacks, Gen. Dittmar implied the Reich would be willing to cease fighting if the Allies would relax their war aims and substitute "an attitude of reason and better understanding."

No Temporizing In Terms To Bulgars

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—An armistice proposal couched in "take it or leave it" terms probably will be handed to Bulgarian emissaries within the next few days and, under present plans, probably will be signed in Cairo, a dispatch from that capital said today.

The identities of the Bulgarian delegates, who probably number four, have not been disclosed. It may be some days before the document is signed, but the best available information in Cairo indicated any suggestion of "negotiations" has been avoided carefully.

New Regime In Hungary

A new Government was installed today in Hungary in an apparent German attempt to shore up the Reich's last Balkan defenses against the Red army.

Berlin broadcasts last night announced the fall of Premier Doeme Sztojay's regime less than 24 hours after Russian forces had speared deeply within Hungarian-held Transylvania.

The German propaganda agency, Transocean, said Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Hungarian regent, had appointed Col. Gen. Vitez Geza Lakatos to form a new government. Lakatos' Cabinet, announced simultaneously, was studded with military figures.

Nazis Reported Leaving

This abrupt government change in Hungary, under tight Nazi control since Hitler's troops marched in last March, came amid reports from both Axis and Allied sources that the Germans were withdrawing as hurriedly as possible from Bulgaria, now on the verge of peace.

A dispatch from Ankara said it was believed there that Stoicho Moshanov, Bulgarian peace emissary, already had informed Great Britain and the United States that his country has accepted armistice terms.

Germans Rush To Hungary

Both Russian and German reports said Nazi troops were getting out of Bulgaria as quickly as possible and rushing to Hungary to bolster Hungarian-German garrisons.

Germany also rushed troops into Slovakia, the puppet state Hitler created immediately north of Hungary. Gen. Ferdinand Catlos, commander in chief of Slovakia's armed forces, appealed to the people to receive the Germans as allies and obey "only Government orders." Recent parachutist and guerrilla activity have been reported in Slovakia.

Reds Assail Bulgar Neutrality

London, Thursday, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Moscow radio sharply attacked the Bulgarian Government's "proclaimed neutrality" today and asserted it was "in order to enable the Germans to hide in Bulgaria from prosecution by the Allies."

The broadcast, quoting a Tass dispatch from the newly captured Romanian port of Constanta, said "according to verified reports the other day 23 German armed ships reached Ruse (Rushchuk)," Bulgarian port on the Danube and, "in violation of the neutrality proclaimed by Bulgaria, these ships were not subject to a regime of internment."

U-Boats Hide In Ports

In addition, Moscow said, German ships including submarines find shelter in the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas and, "with the assistance of Bulgarian authorities, the Germans already have sunk several of these ships."

"According to reports reaching here," the Tass dispatch said, "Germans turned over a part of their ships to Bulgarian authorities in payment on German trade obligations.

"All this indicates that the Bulgarian Government's proclaimed 'neutrality' is in order to enable Germans to hide in Bulgaria from prosecution by the Allies."

Bulgarian Armistice Envoys Fly to Cairo to Receive Terms

British Place Them in Seclusion, Await American Minister; Romanian Delegates in Moscow; 'Pravda' Assails Turkey as Pro-Nazi

SEP 1 1944

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Aug. 30.—A Bulgarian armistice delegation arrived by plane from Turkey today, and is expected soon to sign the armistice terms which will remove Bulgaria from the Nazi camp. The delegation immediately was taken into seclusion by British authorities, without the identities of the delegates becoming known.

Armistice terms are to be presented to Lord Moyne, British Resident Minister in the Middle East, after Lincoln MacVeagh, American Minister to the Yugoslav and Greek governments, returns to Cairo from Washington, where he has been in consultation with the State Department on Bulgarian negotiations.

A statement by Allied authorities said: "The Bulgarian armistice delegation has arrived in Cairo, where they will shortly have armistice terms presented to them. A statement will be issued when the armistice has been signed."

Rumanians in Moscow

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 31 (AP)—A Rumanian Government armistice delegation has arrived in Moscow to discuss peace terms with Russia, the Moscow radio announced today.

The broadcast, recorded by the Soviet monitor, said the purpose of the delegation was "the carrying on of conversations and the conclusions of an armistice."

The Moscow radio sharply attacked the Bulgarian Government's "procliamed neutrality" today and asserted it was "in order to enable the Germans to hide in Bulgaria from prosecution by the Allies."

The broadcast—quoting a Tass dispatch from the newly captured Rumanian port of Constanta, said that "according to verified reports the other day (twenty-three German armed ships reached Ruse (Rushchuk)," Bulgarian port on the Danube and, "in violation of the neutratity proclaimed by Bulgaria, these ships were not subject to a regime of internment."

Russia, the Moscow radio announced today.

The broadcast said the purpose of the delegation was "the carrying on of conversations and the conclusion of an armistice," Romania announced last Thursday she was withdrawing from the war as a partner of the Axis and would "fight against the enemy."

Moscow replied that only by fighting alongside Russia could Romania obtain terms, denying that an armistice was in effect.

The Romanian delegation to Moscow was headed by Prince Barbu Stirbey, who has been active in peace maneuvers dating back to last spring. Also included were Minister of Justice Lucretiu Patrascanu, Vice-Minister of the Interior Colonel D. Damaceanu; Lieutenant Colonel Focsanianu and Constantin Visoianu, who was associated with Prince Stirbey in some of the earlier peace negotiations.

Carry War To Slovakia

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—A new menace to the whole rear of the German defense structure in southeastern Europe flared up in Slovakia today as Czechoslovak armed forces of the interior joined Slovak Partisans in fighting the Germans in that puppet state next door to Hungary.

The Czechoslovak Government in exile in London requested quick Allied aid for the resistance forces as the underground in the partitioned homeland issued its first communique announcing capture of one town and fierce fighting in four areas.

Germans Send Fresh Troops

the fighting patriots that the utmost was being done to get Allied help for them and appealed to them to cut German communications and wreck transport in Moravia and Slovakia.

The Slovak regime admitted the Germans had to send fresh troops into Slovakia "to help suppress Partisan activities there."

The Czech communique said that Cadca, an important junction on the railway connecting Bratislava, the puppet state's capital, with Berlin and Cracow had been "taken by assault" by the Czech and Partisan forces while heavy fighting was in progress in central Slovakia.

Effective use of parachutists by the Czechs was admitted by implication by the Slovak Government, which said German aid had been called in because of these activities.

Hungary Almost Encircled

The new flareup left Hungary—Hitler's last bulwark in the southeast—almost encircled by areas of resistance.

Inside Hungary the sudden upset of the short-lived German-backed Stojay dictatorship and its replacement by a Cabinet of generals reflected the critical condition of Hitler's Hungarian followers.

Authoritative quarters in London were watching closely for new signs of an early Hungarian collapse. They said it was too early as yet to determine whether the new Cabinet was aiming to try to get out of the war or gird for a last-ditch fight at Hitler's side, but that either way the end was not far off.

Retreat From Balkans Hinted

The Germans frankly viewed the Balkan situation in the most somber fashion, one Berlin radio commentator declaring, "German defenses cannot be maintained in the Balkans" and lines must be withdrawn "to defend German soil."

In deciding to call for Allied aid, the Czechoslovak Government in London declared that all military and guerrilla detachments were "members of the regular Czechoslovak army" and that its commanders were in regular communication with the Government here.

A Czech spokesman, broadcasting to Europe over the BBC, assured

Poles in London Ask Stalin for Long-Term Pact

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP).—Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk sent to Moscow today the exiled Polish government's proposals for an agreement with the Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation.

The plan involves a Cabinet realignment incorporating elements of the committee, now established at Lublin, and the Polish underground.

The declaration emphasized the need for a long-term Polish-Russian alliance.

The London Daily Mirror said today that the good relationship existing between Britain and Russia is being seriously menaced as a result of developments over the relief of Warsaw.

The Mirror said that Britain and the United States had been refused the use of Soviet bases to supply food and arms to Gen. Bor's Partisans fighting the Germans in Warsaw.

FINNISH PEACE MOVE SEEN

Mannerheim Letter to Moscow Disclosed in Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 30 (AP)—The belief that Finland may be seeking to reopen peace negotiations with Russia was enhanced today by the disclosure that President Mannerheim had been in communication with Moscow recently through diplomatic channels.

Baron Mannerheim, it was learned, dispatched a message to Moscow on Monday. While its contents remained a secret, it was generally believed here that it dealt with peace.

It also was learned that Juho Kosti Paasikivi, who helped to negotiate the Finnish-Russian peace in 1940 and who participated in fruitless negotiations with Moscow earlier this year, had been called back to Helsinki from the town where he had been resting for the past eight weeks. Reports were current here that he might be named to the Cabinet as Minister Without Portfolio to give him more authority if he were sent to Moscow on a peace mission.

Three Liberals Resign From Greek Cabinet

SEP 1 1944

Cairo, Aug. 30 (AP)—Three Liberal party members of the Greek Cabinet in exile, including Vice-Premier Sophocles Venizelos, have resigned in protest against the conduct of the Government by Premier George Papandreou, it was learned tonight.

Those who resigned with Venizelos are Alexander Mylonas, Minister of the Navy and C. Rendis, Minister without portfolio. A Cairo source said it was understood they criticized the Premier last Sunday on the ground that he conferred with Prime Minister Churchill in Italy and reached important decisions without consulting the Cabinet.

Americans Batter Reich Cities

SEP 1 1944

Large Bomber Formations Blast Ports as Well as Robot Sites.

London, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Large formations of American bombers battered the Continent today, bombing the German ports of Kiel and Bremen through clouds and the robot platforms in northern France.

Very heavy forces of British bombers before dawn supported the Russian armies of the north with attacks on the Nazi Baltic ports of Stettin and Konigsburg, and Mosquitoes hurled many two-ton blockbusters on battered Berlin and Hamburg.

The weather was bad and the bombers cast their explosives by instruments through clouds. A communique said that one bomber was lost over the robot bomb sites and that all fighters returned. No mention was made of losses over the German objectives.

Hit Pas de Calais Targets.

Up to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators with Mustang fighter escorts smashed at the Pas de Calais targets. More than 500 Fortresses and 250 Mustangs went over the German ports.

The flying bomb targets are just in front of advancing Allied armies in northern France.

The German radio in mid-afternoon said that a bomber fleet was approaching northwest Germany and Radio Cologne went silent, indicating attacks in the Ruhr.

More than 1,000 heavy bombers participated in the overnight attacks, unloading approximately 1,500 tons of high explosives and incendiaries upon Stettin and another great cargo of destruction upon Koenigsberg.

This twin blow was in direct support of the Russian armies battering at Germany's eastern frontiers, both the Baltic port of Stettin and the East Prussian capital of Koenigsberg being important links in the German supply lines leading to the Russian front.

Both Berlin and Hamburg were hit by speedy Mosquitos, which carry a bomb load of 4,000 pounds.

The Air Ministry said that forty-one planes were lost in the overnight operations, during which many mines were laid in enemy waters.

Blows from Italy.

Up to 750 heavy United States bombers from Italy also struck yesterday in tactical support of the Russian armies whipping through Romania by bombing Hungarian rail bridges and yards at Szeged and Szolnok and enemy barracks and trains moving through that threatened Balkan land.

Some of these planes flew into Czecho-Slovakia and bombed steel works at Moravska Ostrava, the largest plate rolling mill in Europe.

Marauders Bomb Island

The heavily fortified little island of Cezambre, where the Germans still are blocking the entrance to St. Malo harbor on the Breton coast, was bombed tonight by two waves of Ninth Air Force Marauders which used the pathfinder technique to hit their targets through thick clouds.

The little island has forts armed with 150-mm. guns and manned by a strong German garrison.

The raid on Kiel was the 14th by the Americans; that on Bremen the tenth. Crewmen reported heavy clouds required bombing by instruments and prevented accurate assessment of the results.

Stettin Raid At Night

Overnight the RAF made heavy attacks on Stettin and Koenigsberg, two vital links in the complex German communications system to the Eastern front.

The planes had to fly more than 2,000 miles through severe electrical storms and were required to circle their targets 20 minutes before finding gaps in the undercast to make certain aim.

Many of the bombers were in the air more than 12 hours, and the Air Ministry called the operation "one of the most dramatic the RAF ever carried out."

More than 1,200 tons of high explosives, including many 8,000-pound bombs, fell on Stettin alone. One pilot over the port an hour after the attack said he saw a vast fire that sent smoke five miles high.

41 Bombers Lost

Mosquito planes meanwhile were busy over Berlin and Hamburg during the night.

The night's operations cost 41 bombers.

Continuing bad weather over the French battlefields curtailed fighter-bomber operations during the day, but some attacks were made against ammunition and fuel dumps and enemy troop formations trapped in the lower Seine bends.

Operating on the request of ground troops, Havoc attack bombers of the Ninth Air Force during the afternoon raided an important fuel-storage depot near Dieppe. Thick clouds prevented the accurate appraisal of results. Spitfires escorted the bombers and all planes returned safely.

PLANES STRIKE BREMEN, KIEL

1,000 U. S. Heavies Hit German Ports Without Loss

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—More than 1,000 United States heavy bombers, with an escort of approximately the same size, joined in assaults today on the German ports of Kiel and Bremen and flying bomb installations in the Pas-de-Calais area. All the planes returned safely.

A communique tonight reported intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered by the force of up to 750 Flying Fortresses which struck the Kiel and Bremen areas and that some ground fire had been met by the more than 300 Fortresses and Liberators in an earlier attack on the flying bomb installations.

No enemy air oppostion, however, was encountered in either

HEAVY WAR WAGED ON ROCKET BOMBS

London, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—American heavy bombers, anti-aircraft fire and fighter pilots all were directed today against German robot bombs which kept hurtling the channel toward London and southern England.

One pilot shot down three before dusk. Ground fire brought down many more. The heavy bombers attacked launching platforms in northern France.

Flight Lieut. Rene Van Lierde, a Belgian, had bagged twenty-seven bombs so far; another pilot had fifty and a Pole had downed twenty. Many of the pilotless explosives have been destroyed by American flyers who have spotted them by chance while on other missions.

New waves of German flying bombs hurtled against London and southern England during the night, most of them apparently coming from the region west of Boulogne upon which Allied armies now are rapidly advancing.

The attacks ended a lull which had continued for two successive nights—a break believed due in part to German difficulties in transporting the robots to launching sites.

During the night attack the southwest coast town of Folkestone shook and the earth rumbled to a distant explosion which some reports said was the heaviest shock felt there during the entire war. Most persons agreed that the explosion, shortly before midnight, occurred across the Channel in France and there was some belief that the Germans might have been testing their long-threatened "vengeance weapon No. 2."

Robot Attacks Go On as Allies Hammer Bases

Nazi Radio Says Operation Can Shift to Any Part of European Mainland

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP).—Smashing through blazing defensive fire, periodic salvos of flying bombs struck London and southern England today, and as Allied armies racing for Belgium captured more launching sites and bombers hammered others, the Nazi-controlled Oslo radio declared that Hitler's V-1 weapon is portable and can be shifted for operation to all parts of the mainland.

One of the missiles exploding in southern England scattered propaganda leaflets which accused Britain of inaugurating the bombing of civilians. The leaflets bore pictures of mothers and children allegedly killed in Hamburg and Cologne.

"The Royal Air Force began the air war against civilians by bombing the open town of Freiburg on May 10, 1940," the leaflets stated. "German air attacks on Warsaw and Rotterdam could never be recognized as a pretext for these British attacks, because both cities then lay in the front line and were defended militarily by enemy troops."

In London, agitation continued for lifting or easing the blackout "to give us light on the last mile of war," but regional defense chiefs advised Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, to play safe and maintain the blackout and fire guards to the finish.

Heeding government urging, 5,000 more mothers and children evacuated London.

Defenders cut down many of the flying bombs today, one pilot bagging three. But there were multiple deaths, and one explosion killed at least seven persons and left rescuers digging late for more bodies.

A lull of two successive nights was broken last night as new waves of the robots, apparently coming from the area west of Boulogne, tore into southern England. Shortly before midnight a terrific explosion, which most persons agreed had occurred across the channel in France, shook the southeast coast town of Folkestone. There was some belief the Germans may have been testing their long-threatened V-2.

LT. CHENNAULT NOW FLYING IN EUROPE

LONDON, Aug. 30 — (AP) Lt. Claire P. Chennault, son of the commander of the U. S. 14th Air Force in China, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, is flying bomber escort and fighter bomber missions against the Germans.

Headquarters of the European theater of operations announced tonight his presence. He is from Waterproof, La., formerly worked in Natchez, Miss., and was commissioned in the air force at Luke Field, Ariz.

U. S. War Correspondent Escapes

London, Aug. 30 (AP) — Gault MacGowan, New York Sun war correspondent, who was captured by the Germans near Chartres, has escaped and now is behind Allied lines, the British Press Association reported today.

List Of War Criminals Of 'Impressive Length'

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—The list of war criminals being compiled by the United Nations War Crimes Commission already has reached an impressive length, Chairman Sir Cecil Hurst told a press conference today, but their identity and number cannot be disclosed now.

The commission's function, he explained, is limited to investigation and preparations for punishment of actual war crimes—violations of the laws of war by belligerents—such as massacres of prisoners, shooting of hostages and other atrocities.

He stressed that the competence of the commission "does not cover treasonable behavior of collaborators with the Axis—the so-called Quislings." Such persons will be dealt with by the nations concerned.

Moslem Leader Sets Date in Offer Telegraphed to Gandhi

BOMBAY, Aug. 30 (AP)—Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, telegraphed to Mohandas K. Gandhi today that he would be glad to confer with him on Sept. 7 or on any day thereafter on problems that might arise should India be partitioned into separate Hindu and Moslem states.

The leaders were to have met earlier this month but Mr. Jinnah was reported ill.

JAPS DRIVING FOR AIR FIELDS USED BY YANKS

MOOSA

CHUNGKING, Aug. 30 — (AP) A bitter battle is raging for Lishui, potential Chekiang province base for future bombings of Japan and the goal of the Japanese in China ever since Doolittle's 1942 raid on Tokyo, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

The Japanese have driven all the 30 miles south from their base at Wuyi in the heart of the maritime province and in the space of several weeks reached the gates of the city.

(A Japanese broadcast claimed Lishui already was captured and described it as a "formidable air base" of the American air forces in China.)

The Japanese also launched a strong attack in Hunan province and another far to the west in Yunnan province near the Burma border.

The Hunan attack was aimed at Chinese positions ten and one half miles southwest of Hengyang, Japanese-held Canton-Hankow railway junction. Apparently they were attempting to eliminate the main Chinese threat to Hengyang from the Chinese astride the Hunan-Kiangsi railway to the southwest.

Intercepting Chinese fought bitterly for the position.

At Yungfeng, 45 miles northwest of Hengyang, another battle raged. The Chinese there seemed to have checked an enemy southward thrust intended to trap or disperse Chinese forces still remaining in the Hengyang area.

Surveying this Hunan fighting, Anthony Dralle of Hornell, N. Y., assistant professor of the Chinese postgraduate school of journalism in Chungking on leave from the Hornell Tribune, said the incessant battering of Japanese supply lines and the continuing Chinese pressure in the Hengyang area might bog down the Japanese drive to capture the whole railway from north to south of China.

Destroy Jap Fighters

Continuing the air support of Chinese ground forces, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's 14th Air Force Liberators, with fighter escort, destroyed 11 enemy fighters yesterday in a battle with from 25 to 30 Japanese interceptors over Yochow, supply base of the Hunan province drive. Two other enemy planes probably were destroyed and one damaged. One Liberator was lost.

In another mission over the Yochow area, Warhawks shot down six of 16 enemy interceptors near the Pailuchi airdrome.

Say Japs Fear Shanghai Raids

Chungking, Thursday, Aug. 31 (AP)—Chinese reports asserted today that all Japanese civilians had been advised by Japanese authorities to evacuate Shanghai and Amoy because of the danger of Allied bombings. One group of refugees was said to have already left Shanghai.

Air Base Periling Japan

Chungking, Aug. 30 (AP)—Japanese troops reached the gates of Lishui tonight and bitter fighting raged for possession of the city, a potential base in Chekiang province for future bombings of Japan, the Chinese high command said.

(A Japanese broadcast claimed Lishui was captured August 27, and described it as "the foremost air base" of the United States Air Forces in southwest China.)

Ever since the Doolittle bombing of the Japanese homeland the Chekiang province city has been a major goal of the Japanese. The current drive, based on Wuyi, 30 miles due north in the heart of the maritime province, was launched several weeks ago.

Japs Drop Supplies

The high command announced that Japanese reconnaissance planes had appeared over the Burma Road bridge across the Salween river in the western Yunnan fighting zone and one dropped a small quantity of supplies to the beleaguered Japanese garrison on Sungshan mountain. Chinese troops took two more fortified hilltops in the Sungshan area.

Bitter fighting proceeded at Tengchung, Japanese stronghold in the Salween area, where a temple in the western quarter of the town changed hands six times.

11 Jap Fighters Destroyed

The high command said an enemy column moving north from Hsiangtang, four miles southwest of Lungling, on the Burma road, was repulsed after attacking a point two miles south of Lungling.

Liberators of the 14th United States Air Force with fighter escort destroyed 11 enemy fighters yesterday in a battle with 25 to 30 Japanese interceptors over Yochow, Hunan province, Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced. Two other enemy planes were probably destroyed, one damaged and one Liberator was lost, preliminary reports showed. In another engagement P-40 fighters shot down six of 16 Japanese aircraft near the Pailuchi airdrome in the Yochow area.

Allied Burma Force At Chindwin River

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters, Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 30 (AP)—Allied troops driving into western Burma in pursuit of Japaneese troops retreating from India reached the Chindwin river yesterday at Hwemate, an Allied communique announced today.

In the course of their advance, the announcement said, the Allied forces captured Thanan, where 500 enemy dead were counted and much equipment was seized.

The Japanese also were said to have suffered heavy losses in a trap laid for their rearguard retreating down the Tiddim road.

Allies Reach Chindwin River

Southeast Asia Headquarters, Aug. 30 (AP)—Forward elements of the Allied 14th Army in Burma were established tonight on the bank of the Chindwin river in the tiny village of Hwemate.

The new advance came after Allied troops crushed an enemy stronghold on the trail east of Thanan where 500 Japanese bodies were counted after the battle. Heavy Japanese equipment was captured.

Other Allied troops pushing down the Tiddim road gained five miles after trapping and smashing an enemy rear-guard force.

U. S. BOMBERS BUSY IN PACIFIC RAIDS

Washington, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—American bombers sank one Japanese vessel and damaged three others in raids on the north Pacific Kurile islands on Sunday, the Navy reported today. Eleventh Army Airforce Liberators, raiding Paramushiro, northernmost island in the chain reaching from Japan proper to the Russian Kamchatka Peninsula, sank an enemy patrol vessel and badly damaged another.

A direct hit was scored on a medium-sized tanker by naval search planes attacking shipping near Paramushiro. The tanker was set afire.

Another large cargo ship was bombed by the naval planes at Suribachi, causing a heavy explosion. Another enemy patrol vessel also was attacked there.

One naval Ventura search planes which carried out the assault was damaged in an engagement with three enemy fighter planes. Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet Commander, reported also that on Sunday night Liberator bombers from the Seventh Army Air Force struck Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands.

They concentrated their attack on the Japanese airfield on that island, less than 700 miles from Tokyo. Two enemy fighters were in the air at Iwo Jima, but they made no attempt to intercept the bombers. Admiral Nimitz reported also raids on Nauru Island, in the South Pacific, on Moen Island, in Truk Atoll, and on enemy-held positions in the central Pacific Marshal Islands.

Destruction of seventeen Japanese vessels, including two destroyers, by American submarines operating in enemy waters, also was reported by the Navy today. The destroyers could have been trying to protect Japanese convoys carrying supplies to hard-pressed enemy garrisons. Their destruction brings to fifty-eight the number of Japanese warships sunk thus far by American submarine action.

Other ships in the latest bag of the submarines included two tankers from the badly depleted fleet of Japanese fuel-carrying vessels. The total included also thirteen cargo vessels, all of which could have been loaded with materials vitally needed at the enemy's Pacific bases.

Forrestal Reveals Navy Has Trebled in Strength in Five Years.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

American submarines have sunk 17 more Japanese vessels, including two destroyers, to give the undersea fleet the greatest bag of any one month this year with a total of 52 enemy ships sunk during August.

The Navy announced the new sinkings yesterday while observing the 31st anniversary of the Navy Air Force. This new total for the submarines clearly indicates that newly won bases in the far Pacific are greatly aiding the undersea craft in their patrols of Japan's sea lanes.

The Navy on Aug. 10 announced 16 Japanese ships had been sunk by submarines and on Aug. 21 revealed that 19 more had been destroyed.

875 Ships Sunk

A compilation of the submarine bag for this year shows that 36 Nipponese ships were sunk in January, 30 in February, 42 in March, 29 in April, 41 in May, 50 in June, 48 in July and 52 in August. That brings the year's total for this one Navy arm to 337 craft sunk this year. The overall total for the submarines since Pearl Harbor in Japanese ships sunk or probably sunk is 875 craft.

At the same time Navy Secretary Forrestal revealed that the U. S. Navy has been trebled in strength in the last five years and its air force has been boosted twenty times its size over the same period.

Referring to the Navy as the "greatest Naval power on earth," the Navy Secretary pointed out that 65,000 vessels of all types have been added in that period. He said the Navy building program is little more than half finished.

1,150 Fighting Vessels

This means America has at least 1,150 fighting vessels—aircraft carriers, battleships, crulsers, destroyers and submarines.

These figures were made public a short time after Japanese leaders had urged their country to spur its production of the materials of war.

The Japanese homeland clearly looks for more and larger blows against its cities in the near future.

American aerial bombs bracketed the Jap homeland to the north and south—in the Kuriles and Volcano islands—in the latest raids made public.

Eleventh army air force liberators and navy search planes sank one Japanese patrol vessel and damaged four more craft, including a medium sized enemy tanker, in raids on Paramushiro Sunday.

The admiral also reported raids on Nauru island in the south Pacific, on Noen island in the Truk atoll and on enemy positions in the central Pacific Marshall islands.

In the southwest Pacific Japanese shipping was hit again by American planes and a 1,000 ton craft was sunk off Mindanao.

Navy Catalinas, ranging off the Celebes, damaged or sunk a 7,000 ton enemy ship Tuesday night.

Oft-bombed Halmahera, gateway to the southern Phiippines, was pounded again in a 113 ton bomb raid. This was the fourth heavy raid on that place in less than two weeks and the sixth 100-odd ton pasting given the Moluccas by American planes.

General MacArthur in his communique today (Thursday) said that Davao was bombed lightly.

Army And Navy Planes In Climax Of Year's Raids

Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 30 (AP)—The year-long bombing campaign in the Kurile Islands north of Japan reached a climax Sunday with a series of raids by army and navy planes which sank a Japanese patrol vessel and damaged four other ships.

Fleet headquarters announced today that navy search planes spotted several enemy vessels near Paramushiro and swooped to the attack. One obtained a direct hit on a medium tanker, setting it afire. Another hit a large cargo ship at Suribachi, causing a heavy explosion. A third attacked an enemy patrol vessel.

Sunk By Liberators

The same day two Liberator bombers of the 11th Army Air Force sank a Japanese patrol vessel and badly damaged another near Paramushiro.

One navy plane was damaged in these actions.

In other raids reported today Seventh Army Air Force Liberators bombed the airfield on Iwo, in the Volcano Islands, 750 miles south of Tokyo, Sunday night without interception, although two enemy fighters were aloft.

Pagan Island, in the Marianas, was hit the same day, causing fires. Pagan was bombed and strafed by fighter planes again on Monday.

In the Carolines, Seventh AAF Liberators bombed Moen Island in the Truk atoll Monday, fighting off seven enemy interceptors. One Liberator was damaged. Ponape also was bombed that day.

Neutralizing raids were made Monday against Mili and Maloelap atolls in the Marshalls.

Nauru, phosphate island south of the Marshalls, was smacked by navy planes Sunday.

Halmahera Is Bombed In Fourth Heavy Raid

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Thursday, Aug. 31 (AP)—The fourth heavy raid in less than two weeks on Halmahera, gateway to the Philippines, was announced today. One hundred and thirteen tons pounded the island's defenses and supplies.

It was the sixth air attack in that time on the Moluccas chain of islands south of Mindanao.

In the latest Halmahera smash, Liberators and Mitchells caused heavy and widespread damage Tuesday at Wasile and Kaoe bays

Ceram Island Hit

Elsewhere in the Moluccas chain, just west of New Guinea, American bombers hit oil installations on Ceram Island and Kaoe village on Halmahera.

The same day, Liberators cascaded 48 tons of bombs on Palau, at the western end of the Carolines. Davao in the southern Philippines was visited again by night air patrols.

Aussies To Release 45,000 Military Men

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 30 (AP). Thirty thousand men will be released from the Australian army and 15,000 from the air force by next June 30 to help relieve the Commonwealth's critical labor shortage, Prime Minister John Curtin told the House of Representatives today.

Australia, he explained, needs 96,000 more workers, including at least 39,000 in high-priority industry.

The guiding principle in releases from the armed forces, Curtin added, would be maintenance of their striking power.

"Defeat of Hitler will not imply any lessening of demand on this country," he went on. "Events abroad confirm the Commonwealth's view that the Pacific war will have to be continued after the European war has been won."

SOUTH FRANCE PUT UNDER EISENHOWER

7th Army Joins His Command —Equality of Bradley and Montgomery Is Reported

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Extension of General Dwight D. Eisenhower's command to include the Seventh Army now sweeping north from the Mediterranean coast of France was disclosed today in high quarters.

The operations of the American and French forces in the south under command of Lieut. Gen. Alexander M. Patch was said to be an integral part of the over-all campaign to crush the Germans in France.

Although General Patch's forces invaded France from the Mediterranean coast, it was said that their operations were tied to those of the Allied Expeditionary Forces under General Eisenhower, rather than to the campaigns in the Mediterranean under the command of Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson.

[Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force had no comment on The Associated Press Washington report of a set-up under which Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery would have equal status as army group commanders.]

A realignment of the Allied command in France to give Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley parallel status with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery as an army group commander was reported here today. This move, it was explained, would be made in recognition of the rapidly broadening scope of operations.

Anticipating a recurrence of protests voiced by some newspapers in Britain when a similar report—later denied—came from Allied headquarters two weeks ago, informed persons said there was no criticism, real or implied, of General Montgomery.

A formal announcement of the change is expected shortly. Meanwhile, it was said that since General Eisenhower moved his headquarters to France and took personal command of the operations the need for a deputy commander for all Allied ground forces no longer existed, and therefore the title held by General Montgomery since the invasion started has lost its meaning.

Called Logical Step

At the same time, it was said, General Montgomery's field responsibilities as commander of the Twenty-first Army Group (British-Canadian) multiplied enormously as the Allied forces swarmed out of the beachhead in pursuit of the disorganized German armies, so that the logical step was to free him of any further responsibility for operations of the Twelfth Army Group under General Bradley.

This development was said to have been foreseen from the beginning, and it had been clearly understood by the Americans—they thought by the British also—that General Montgomery's overall ground command was for the initial invasion, and would continue until the American strength was built up to equal that of the British and a breakthrough was achieved.

Nevertheless, the stories from headquarters two weeks ago that the change had become effective brought a storm of protest in sections of the British press over what they termed the "demotion" of General Montgomery, and one paper demanded an apology to the British general. After these criticisms were published, Allied Supreme Headquarters issued a statement Aug. 16 which said:

"It is officially stated at Supreme Headquarters that announcement of General Bradley's Command of the Twelfth Army Group in no way affects the position of General Montgomery as over-all commander of all Allied ground forces in France under General Eisenhower."

That statement startled officials in Washington, who knew of the plan to make General Bradley directly responsible under General Eisenhower for his Army group, but because of the unexpected reaction in Britain they have been reluctant to discuss the episode.

Another factor entering the picture, although its place is not yet clear, is the invasion of southern France by the Seventh Army under General Patch. This force, now sweeping north through the Rhone Valley, is part of General Eisenhower's command, but there is no indication yet whether it will become a part of General Bradley's army group or operate as a separate command, after a juncture is made with the forces in northern France.

FINAL TRIUMPH NEAR, DECLARES SEC. PATTERSON

SEP 1 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 — (AP) Complete and final victory over Germany is not far off, acting Secretary of War Patterson said tonight in a report on his recent trip to the combat zones in Italy and France.

In a broadcast (CBS) description of the things he saw, Patterson said that among the troops engaged in the battle "the sense of success is unmistakable, in the bearing of the soldiers and in everything they do."

"Complete and final victory over the Germans is not far off, a victory that will be won not by our men alone, but by the combined power of the armies of the United Nations," said Patterson.

"I cannot set the date for that victory. General Eisenhower cannot set the date, though he will bring it to pass by his great leadership, and he will, I am sure, make good the prediction he gave last winter that the war in Europe would be won before the end of 1944 if everybody does his part.

"The Germans have suffered a heavy defeat in France, a defeat from which they will never recover; but our soldiers will tell you that the Germans still put up a hard fight. x x x

Must Keep Up Efforts

"Here at home we must keep up the flow of supplies, without stint and without limit, for that army in Europe and for our forces fighting in Asia and in the Pacific with equal courage and devotion, as well as for the Allies that fight by their side. x x x I assure you that there is no over-supply of what it takes to carry on a war on the scale of this war."

Patterson said it was difficult for anyone who had not seen it to realize the tremendous momentum of the armies in northern France. What once was a powerful Nazi army has been wrecked, he said, and "not many of those German soldiers will get back to Germany with arms in their hands."

The acting Secretary praised the Air Forces, saying the great victories in France and Italy would have been impossible without them, and said the supply services were pouring equipment into France at a rate of thousands of tons a day, and moving it promptly forward by rail and truck.

"I saw thousands of trucks on the roads," he said. "The movement never stops."

HIGHER RANK DUE BRADLEY

Group Commander To Be Made Equal To Montgomery

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—A realignment of the Allied command in France to give Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley parallel status with General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery as an army group commander was reported here today. This move, it was explained, will be made in recognition of the rapidly broadening scope of operations.

Anticipating a recurrence of protests voiced by some newspapers in Britain when a similar report—later denied—came from Allied headquarters two weeks ago, informed persons said there was no criticism, real or implied, of General Montgomery.

Need For Deputy Past

A formal announcement of the change is expected shortly. Meanwhile, it was said that since General Eisenhower moved his headquarters to France and took personal command of the operations, the need for a deputy commander for all Allied ground forces no longer exists and, therefore, the title held by Montgomery since the invasion started has lost its meaning.

At the same time, it was said, Montgomery's field responsibilities as commander of the 21st (British-Canadian) Army Group multiplied enormously as the Allied forces swarmed out of the beachhead in pursuit of the disorganized German armies, so that the logical step was to free him of any further responsibility for operations of the 12th Army Group under Bradley.

Foreseen From Beginning

This development was said to have been foreseen from the beginning, and it had been clearly understood by the Americans—they thought by the British also—that Montgomery's over-all ground command was for the initial invasion, and would continue until the American strength was built up to equal that of the British and a break-through was achieved.

Nevertheless, the stories from headquarters two weeks ago that the change had become effective brought a storm of protest in sections of the British press over what they termed the "demotion" of Montgomery, and one paper demanded an apology to the British general.

BARGAIN PEACE OUT, HULL SAYS

Unconditional Surrender Only Terms To Germany

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—The American Government, it was emphasized today, is resolute on unconditional surrender as the only terms for Germany and it does not intend to let Hitler and his henchmen escape punishment by taking refuge in some neutral country.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, restated this policy in effect when asked at his news conference for comment on the broadcast of the ace Nazi military commentator, Lieut. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, admitting that the defeat of Germany is drawing closer.

It is evident, Hull declared, that the Germans are desirous of a negotiated peace but the Allied position for unconditional surrender is too well known to require reiteration.

Watching Escape Attempt

As for the possibility that Hitler and other leading Nazis may flee to a neutral country, Hull said this Government is keeping that constantly in mind. President Roosevelt, he recalled, appealed to the neutrals a year ago not to furnish sanctuary to war criminals and the British Government did likewise.

Dittmar's broadcast was the latest in a series of German appeals to the Allies to be reasonable. He declared that the Germans must fight "as long as our enemies are maintaining their war aims."

Nazi propaganda took a similar line a few weeks ago in an Axis magazine article again directed at softening the granite terms of unconditional surrender.

Piecemeal Surrender Likely

Diplomatic officials said this newest turn shows that the German general staff is convinced that the war is lost, and it is making its last play to avoid complete defeat by seeking a bargain peace.

An increasing flood of defeatist and peace talk is expected from Berlin, but these sources say that Hitler has such a tight hold on the home situation that he may be able to forestall a general staff capitulation.

In that case, the officials speculate, it is likely that there will be extensive Nazi surrenders in the field as front commanders become convinced their situation is hopeless.

This would mean piecemeal German surrender until the Nazi home front is in utter chaos, or until Hitler and his followers are completely cut off from the rest of the country.

HULL OUTLINES SECURITY AIM

SEP 1 1944

Asserts Conference Seeks World Peace Design.

Washington, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull said today that the Dumbarton Oaks security talks are concerned exclusively with the problem of designating a world organization to keep the peace.

The extent to which that organization eventually may take jurisdiction over such questions as food and finances, he told a news conference, is not a concern of the present meeting.

Looking to the future, President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that he envisioned a world security organization which could take up all kinds of problems like food and finances.

Mr. Hull also reported that in his opinion the issue of ratifying a treaty covering a world peace organization would be presented to Congress entirely apart from whatever peace treaty is devised to settle the war.

He said that naturally the general organization of security would be collaborative with many other activities, such as the peace treaty and the problems it covers, and all sorts of economic subjects, particularly as they relate to keeping the world at peace.

However, he added, the only purpose at Dumbarton Oaks is to try to agree among the four leading Allied nations on the shape of a security organization so it can be presented to the na[illegible]

[illegible]ons and the people of the world. There is no intention now, Mr. Hull declared, of undertaking at this early stage to determine the exact scope and nature of the world organizations.

His news conference observations on the conference came after it was learned that there is a growing possibility the talks may produce a four-power recommendation for the creation of an international air corps.

SMALLER NATIONS' ROLE IS DISCUSSED

SEP 1 1944

Security Conference Reaches Agreement on One Point at Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(AP) British, Russian and American delegates to Dumbarton Oaks security talks were reported today to be reaching agreement on the role of smaller nations in a future world peace organization.

The plan to have a council of eleven members at the top of the security agency has met with general favor, it was learned. A settlement seems in the offing that would require a majority vote by the council, including the Big Four, for some types of decisions and a two-thirds vote for the most important decisions.

Chinese ideas parallel this view it is understood. The Chinese government is being kept informed of the progress of the talks, now in their second week.

Secretary of State Hull said that working out machinery for maintaining peace and security was the exclusive concern of the conference, and it is understood that China has agreed to leave aside for the moment the question of the future of Japanese mandated islands and Korea, just as the other powers are shelving European and African territorial questions.

Hull also told his news conference he believed the final [illegible] for the security organization would go before Congress [illegible] any treaty settling the war.

1,150 FIGHTING SHIPS IN NAVY

Forrestal Discloses 65,000 Vessels Added In Five Years

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—The American fleet now numbers more than 1,150 major fighting ships, James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, disclosed today in reporting that 65,000 vessels of all types have been added to the navy in the last five years.

This armada makes the United States "the greatest naval power on earth," Forrestal commented at a new conference, with its building program "little more than half finished."

He was asked how many ships have been turned over to other nations under lend-lease and was unable to reply offhand but the navy later issued a memorandum giving the total as 2,822. Of these, the memorandum said, 1,784 are classified as combatant ships and include large type landing craft.

Navy Has Been Quadrupled

Forrestal said the warships added to the navy number more than three times those in the fleet just before the war started. This means the navy has at least 1,150 ships of principal fighting types—battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

These are the "spectacular" vessels but it is the auxiliary ships, Forrestal continued, that make the victories possible by supplying the fighting fleet.

Other Expansion Figures

In addition to the navy's vast growth in ships, Forrestal gave these figures on other expansion in the five years since the European war started:

AIRCRAFT — 57,600 planes delivered, air strength increased 20 times and still growing with 30,000 planes to be delivered in the next 12 months.

ORDNANCE—Torpedo production increased 40 times over 1939. Depth charge production 60 times greater than five years ago; 125,000 anti-aircraft guns and 1,000,000,000 rounds of anti-aircraft ammunition produced.

PERSONNEL—For every person serving in the navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard in September, 1939, there are over 24 today. Combined strength of the navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard now is 3,717,000.

Forrestal also reported that many new weapons, "most of which cannot be talked about," have been developed to meet modern battle conditions.

Red Blast At Turks Studied In D. C.

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP)—Behind Soviet Pravda's blast at Turkey today is a Russian determination, widely recognized in official quarters here, to gain unlimited access to the Mediterranean Sea through the Turkish-controlled Dardanelles.

This determination, it is reported, will be expressed eventually in more exact terms. Possibly Russia will insist that the Dardanelles be internationalized; possibly it will ask merely that Turkey sign away forever any rights to bar Russian ships from Dardanelles passage.

Interest Aroused

Officials here expressed great interest in the criticism of Turkey in the semi-official newspaper Pravda. An article said that Turkey's recent diplomatic break with the Nazis was being turned into a "friendly rupture" and that Nazi spies still were operating in Turkey.

Some American officials said that the article more accurately pictured conditions as they had existed in Turkey several weeks ago than today. A Pravda assertion that the Turkish Government has been slow in ejecting Germans was described as true but the reason given here was a poorly organized effort by the Turks to separate the "bad" Germans from the lukewarm Nazis who would be permitted to stay.

Troops Near Area

Pravda quoted journalistic sources in Ankara as saying that a July (1941) Turkish treaty with Germany would be kept in force regardless of the diplomatic break. American sources said Turkey had promised the Allies that this treaty would be ended forthwith.

Most significance was attached here to the fact that the Pravda article, in the Russian tradition of journalistic attack for diplomatic purposes, comes at a time when Red armies are drawing near to European Turkey and the passageway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

Notice Is Served

Bulgaria is expected to make an armistice in a few days. In the circumstances, it was said here, Russia wants to put Turkey on notice that her break with Germany comes too late to entitle her to any special consideration in the war settlements.

Having thus made her position clear, Russia is expected to go ahead with demands regarding the Dardanelles and access to the Mediterranean which, until now, has been a primary sphere of British influence.

He said the island of southern France, [illegible]bornly defended," but enemy garrison ran up the flag and surrendered "follo[illegible] several days of bombardment naval forces."

"The capture of the bastion guarding the eastern approaches to the Toulon area completed the investment by Allied forces of the Hyeres Islands," he said.

Allies Discuss Armistice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP).—The United States and Britain, which are at war with Bulgaria, and Russia, which is not, are now negotiating the armistice terms to be imposed on that Balkan state in order to get it completely out of the war. Similarly London, Moscow and Washington are studying the final version of terms to be handed to Romania.

The crumbling of Adolf Hitler's Balkans position, as indicated in these Allied diplomatic activities, is regarded here as marking not only the end of German domination in southeastern Europe but also the end of an era of exclusive British control of the Mediterranean.

Roosevelt Awards Six Congressional Medals

Washington, Aug 30 (AP)—In the largest ceremony of its kind since the war began, President Roosevelt today presented the Congressional Medal of Honor, highest decoration for war heroes, to the families of two marines who lost their lives in the Pacific and to four army men who distinguished themselves in that theater and in Europe.

Receiving the decorations posthumously were First Lieutenant William D. Hawkins, of El Paso, Texas, and First Lieutenant George F. Power, of Worcester, Mass.

The army men who received medals in the presence of high army officials and members of their families gathered at the White House were First Lieutenant Arnold L. Bjorklund, of Seattle; Staff Sergeant Jessie R. Drowley, of Luzerne, Mich.; Technical Sergeant Forrest L. Vosler, of Livonia, N. Y., and Pfc. William J. Johnston, of Colchester, Conn.

1,279,000 Out of Army Since Beginning of War

967,000 Honorably Discharged, Deaths Total 74,000

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Army announced today it had lost a total of 1,279,000 men, chiefly through discharges, from the start of the war through June 30.

Comparable figures from the Navy were not available.

The Army's latest accumulative round figures, the announcement said, showed that 967,000 men, —17,000 officers and 950,000 enlisted men—had received honorable discharges.

Total deaths were 74,000, including 16,000 officers and 58,000 enlisted men. This figure included both battle and non-battle losses.

Prisoners of war and missing were 16,000 officers and 56,000 enlisted men, a total of 72,000, while "other separations" were 4,000 officers and 162,000 enlisted men, a total of 166,000.

"Other separations" included men placed on inactive status but not discharged, dishonorable discharges and retirements of regular army officers and men.

NAVY CASUALTIES

Washington, Aug. 30 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today the names of 373 casualties in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard which makes a total of 58,019 casualties reported by the Navy since Pearl Harbor. Of this total 23,472 are reported dead, 20,446 wounded, 9,635 missing and 4,466 prisoners of war. The list today includes the following with their next of kin:

Cuba's New President Arrives At Washington

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP) — Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, newly elected President of Cuba, arrived today to confer with President Roosevelt and seek United States support and advice on post-war planning for the island republic.

Secretary of State Hull officially greeted the Cuban leader, who said he brought from his countrymen a message of affection for the United States, whose men are "fighting so bravely on the world's battlefields." Full military honors were accorded the visitor, who was escorted to Blair House, Government residence for distinguished guests.

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP) — Representative Fish (R., N. Y.) suggested today that married men 35 and older be released from the armed forces when the war with Germany ends.

He told the House he would propose this as an amendment to the post-war mobilization and reconversion bill.

G. L. K. SMITH IS NOMINATED

'America First' Party Names Him For President

AUG 31 1944

Detroit, Aug. 30 (AP)—The first national convention of the America First party today nominated the party's director, Gerald L. K. Smith, of Detroit, for President and Harry Romer, of St. Henry, Ohio, for Vice-President. No other names were submitted.

Smith had been nominated by the Michigan convention and Romer was substituted when John W. Bricker, Republican Vice-Presidential nominee, refused the Michigan convention's nomination.

Platform Debated

Delegates debated planks of a platform embodying the party's policies.

Among proposals submitted to the convention were these:

Money—"Constitutionalize our money system."

Peace—"Terms must be based on America first principles."

Taxes—"No Federal income tax on incomes less than $5,000."

Veterans—"$1,000 cash for mustered-out veterans having served one year."

Jewish Proposals

Jews — "We must admit that there is a Jewish problem. It must be solved honestly, realistically and courageously. We shall oppose prejudice and encourage the research necessary to the solution of this, the world's most unsolved problem."

A substitute proposal on Jews, in which Delegate Homer Mairtz, of Chicago, urged that "all Jews should be deported to a later designated area, if they do not leave America voluntarily within five years," and that those remaining be sterilized, was not brought to a vote by the convention.

DEWEY TO VISIT WEST COAST

Major Speeches Planned For Doubtful California

AUG 31 1944

Pawling, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP)—With war emphasis expected to veer toward the Pacific between now and election day, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight mapped out an intensive campaign drive along the Japanese-conscious West Coast.

Two major speeches will be made by the Republican Presidential nominee in the politically potent State of California, which both sides concede to be in the doubtful column this year. It was from San Diego that President Roosevelt accepted his fourth-term nomination in a nation-wide broadcast last month.

As further indication of the importance attached to the Pacific area by Dewey's managers, it was announced that major campaign addresses also have been scheduled for Seattle, and Portland. President Roosevelt's broadcast from Bremerton, Wash., on his return from Pearl Harbor and the Aleutians, has been described by the Republicans as a political speech.

To Visit Borderline States

As announced by Herbert Brownell, Republican national chairman, in Chicago today, and later released here, Dewey's September itinerary will carry him through several other borderline States before he starts concentrating on the industrial Northeast in October.

The GOP standard-bearer will start his cross-country expedition from New York next Thursday "loaded for bear." He has been in seclusion on his farm near here since last Friday night drafting his speeches.

No hint has leaked out as to what targets he has in mind, but indications have mounted that the topic for one of his Pacific Coast speeches might well be the surprise Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the Administration's handling of relations with Japan prior to December 7, 1941.

To Discuss Pre-War Dealings

John Foster Dulles, the Governor's foreign affairs adviser, made it clear after his talks with Secretary of State Hull in Washington last week that Dewey feels there should be a full discussion of this Government's pre-war dealings with other countries.

The Pacific Coast swing, a 6,700-mile all-rail journey that will take the Governor through 21 States and give him major sounding boards for at least seven nation-wide broadcasts, will start with an address in Philadelphia's convention hall next Thursday night.

The following night he will make a bid for the women's vote, expected to play a dominant role in this year's election, with a broadcast speech at Louisville, Ky., before the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, an organization claiming 300,000 members.

Plans Visit To Mother

From Louisville he swings to Lansing, Mich., for conferences with Gov. Harry F. Kelly and other State leader on September 9. That night he will spend with his mother at Owosso, Mich., his birthplace.

From there he will go to Des Moines, Valentine, Neb.; Coeur D'Alene, Idaho; Spokane, Seattle, Portland, Ore.; San Francisco, Los Angeles and back along the Southern route to Oklahoma City, where he will end the tour with a broadcast on September 25. From Oklahoma City he plans to return direct to Albany.

REPORT FRITZ KUHN ON HUNGER STRIKE

FT. STANTON, N. M., Aug. 30—(AP) Fritz Kuhn, former German-American bund leader, and 25 other internees are on a hunger strike at the internment camp here, but Department of Justice officials say they suspect the German aliens are getting food on the sly.

A. M. Tenny, Department of Justice officer in charge, predicted the hunger strike, in its ninth day, would end before long. "The kitchen is open at all times," he said.

In Washington a justice department spokesman said the hunger strikers are German civilians who were transferred to the camp because they were "trouble makers" in the segregation camps to which they had been assigned.

He said the strike began Aug. 22, when eight new arrivals were housed in the recreation room until other quarters could be furnished. The original 18 objected to losing use of the recreation room, and also objected to the other eight being sent to the camp.

SEES NO POST-WAR CHANGES IN U. S.

Regina, Sask., Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Ray Atherton, United States Ambassador to Canada, said today he believed that when peace comes the United States will "revert to its pre-war social and economic structure and will build post-war improvements on that solid foundation."

Speaking before the Canadian Club here, Mr. Atherton said the war had interrupted a program of social and economic reforms, but declared the interruption would be only temporary.

Mr. Atherton enumerated accomplishments in labor relations, social security, housing and other fields which, he said, already had been achieved, and added:

"These gains can never be lost. They were not temporary spurts of reform; they were permanent structures added to the American scene, never to be torn down.

"When the American people return to contemplation of their own affairs after the war, when they resume progress toward a better way of life, they will start from these milestones."

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 30.—(AP) Dr. H. H. Kung, Chinese minister of finance and second in command to Generalissimo Chang Kai-Shek, will discuss "China's position in the international scene," at a public meeting at Yale university tomorrow night. The meeting is sponsored by the National Conference of Chinese Students Christian association in session this week at the Yale Divinity school.

Hero Of World War I Killed In South Pacific

Reading, Pa., Aug. 30 (AP)—Chief Pharmacist's Mate Paul B. Binder, who won the Croix de Guerre in World War I for leading 800 blinded Frenchmen through a poison-gas hollow although his own mask leaked, has been killed in action in the South Pacific, the Navy Department notified his wife today.

A former golf professional and insurance salesman, Binder enlisted in October, 1942, was cited for bravery on Bougainville and credited with saving a number of lives. He also served with the marines on Guadalcanal. He was 50.

Unit Citation to Submarine

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30 (AP).—The underseas raider U. S. S. Trigger, sistership of the famed submarine Wahoo, which bagged nineteen Japanese ships before she was lost in action, has received the Presidential unit citation for "highly daring and hazardous tactics" in the Pacific. The 12th Naval District announced today the Trigger and its sixty-five-man crew received the flag in recent ceremonies at Hunter's Point naval drydocks here. Her commander is Lieutenant Commander Frederick Joseph Harlfinger, of 24 Oneida Terrace, Albany, holder of the Presidential unit citation ribbon for service aboard the U. S. S. Trout and twice winner of the Silver Star.

Lone Ranger Killed in Action

Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 30 (A. P.).—Sergt. Lee Powell, 35 years old, of the United States Marine Corps, who as the red-masked Lone Ranger rode his white stallion through fifteen episodes of a motion picture serial, has been killed in action, his widow, Mrs Norma Powell, said today.

With the Marines in the South Pacific since November, 1942, Powell fought at Tarawa and Saipan. He attended the University of Montana, where he was a football and track athlete. He toured the United States and Canada with Wallace Bros. circus in his Lone Ranger character.

Inventor Demonstrates 2-Blade Rotor Helicopter

Flies Plane for Army-Navy Experts on Eve of Induction

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30 (AP).—A new type of helicopter which eliminates the customary tail propeller and overcomes torque by using superimposed, contra-rotating two-blade rotors was demonstrated to the Navy, Army and National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics today by its inventor, nineteen-year-old Stanley Hiller jr., of Berkeley. Tomorrow he will report for induction.

The ship rose vertically, hovered, swung in a circle, inched forward, slid backward and landed within a foot of the take-off spot.

Young Hiller, son of a Pioneer Pacific flyer and steamship company president, said the experimental ship had a speed of about 100 miles an hour and cruises at from one and one-half to ninety miles an hour. Its longest flight so far has been about ninety miles.

The youth established a large business manufacturing miniature racing automobiles. When he enters the armed services his father will continue to operate the die-casting plant which uses the process young Hiller invented for the miniature cars and now turns out castings for several aircraft companies.

REPORT GERMANS PLAN USE OF GAS

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—(AP) Time correspondent John Scott broadcast over the Blue network from Stockholm today a report that Germans were sending poison gas cylinders to the English Channel coast.

The correspondent said an Allied plane had strafed a heavily-guarded train, en route from Germany through Holland to the coast, and that poison gas had escaped from cylinders it was carrying, killing several of the guards and throwing a nearby Dutch town into panic.

"Many trains, heavily guarded such as this one, have passed through Belgium and Holland recently towards the Channel coast," Scott added.

Meanwhile, a British broadcast monitored by NBC said Polish patriots in Warsaw have reported the capture of "gas grenades" from Germans fighting inside the Polish capital.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(AP) The Daily Mail's Geneva correspondent today quoted reports "circulating freely in the Reich and neutral countries" that the Germans were planning a poison gas offensive as a last ditch war measure.

"Chemical factories in Bohemia and northern Italy are working on huge orders for products which are veiled in the greatest secrecy," the story said, "and other factories are said to be working night and day on mass production of gas masks."

The story quoted the Swiss newspaper Gazette de Lausanne as say-ng that "since Germany has lost air mastery, her efforts will be reduced to insensate attacks. The leaders of the Reich will gravely aggravate their position by adding gas to flying-bombs dropped on the civil population of London."

New Roosevelt-Churchill Meeting Expected Shortly

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Signs multiplied last night (Wednesday) that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are arranging another meeting soon to discuss the future of rapidly-weakening Germany, and plans to step up the war against Japan.

In Washington, the belief was general that the swift Allied inroads against the German defenses in Europe have spurred plans for the meeting. Military and naval men take the view, it was learned, that while German resistance can conceivably be prolonged, it may collapse at any time.

This poses, not only the question of the armistice terms to be imposed on the Reich, but the broad subject of how to bridge the gap between the end of the war in Europe and the proposed establishment of a world agency to keep the peace.

American officials have suggested that the existing European Advisory Commission, with its Russian-American-British membership, be broadened in scope to cope with problems arising out of possible internal revolutions in some European states and "little wars" over territory.

The British Broadcasting Corporation said in a broadcast to Europe yesterday that political correspondents expected Roosevelt and Churchill to meet soon concerning German armistice terms and "how to hasten the downfall of Japan."

This followed President Roosevelt's news conference remark Tuesday that everyone knew another meeting with the Prime Minister was to take place. He added that the time and place were too intimate to reveal. It will be the eleventh session between the two leaders.

In London it was felt there was a strong chance that Britain would sponsor France's return as an Allied power at the next Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, and that that nation might hold a ranking place in the conversations.

In London diplomatic circles it was generally believed a proposal to add the name of France to the big four — Britain, China, Russia and the United States—would have the backing of America, but simultaneously it was stressed that its fulfillment would have to await a general French election.

France's traditional influence in European affairs and importance in the economic world has long given the country a role as a major power and it is in the British interests, politically and economically, to have her cross-channel neighbor both friendly and strong.

Churchill-F. D. R. Parley Forecast

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—The BBC said in a broadcast to Europe tonight it was predicted that Prime Minister Churchill will confer with President Roosevelt soon on German armistice terms and the Asiatic military situation.

"Political correspondents predict," BBC stated, "that Prime Minister Churchill will not remain long in England following his report to the War Cabinet on his trip to Italy and conferences with Marshal Tito and the heads of numerous Balkan states. He is expected to confer with President Roosevelt soon."

A week ago the London Daily Herald said plans were being made for Roosevelt and Churchill to be present in Paris, "if that is practical," when Allied troops paraded under the Arc de Triomphe—and the Daily Mail predicted that a conference between the two leaders would "take place within a matter of weeks on French soil."

Big Increase Reported In Aircraft Production

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—Victor Emanuel, retiring president of the Aircraft War Production Council, East Coast, today said monthly production of the council's eight member companies had increased more than 500 per cent. in three years.

He reported 1942 output of 11,985 units was more than surpassed in less than six months of 1944.

Emanuel, president of Aviation Corporation, said East Coast airframe companies now use more floor space than the entire industry did in 1941. He added that member company employes rose from 61,000 in November, 1941, to about 200,000 this month.

Col. "Jock" Whitney Reported Nazi Prisoner

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—The family of Col. John Hay (Jock) Whitney disclosed today they were attempting to check a rumor that he had been captured by the Germans "somewhere in France."

Colonel Whitney, scion of one of the nation's wealthiest families and a horse-racing and polo enthusiast, is the husband of the former Betsy Cushing, first wife of James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son.

A family attorney, Major L. A. Beard, said the rumor began circulating here yesterday and he had been unable to determine its origin or obtain confirmation. The rumor, he said, was to the effect that Colonel Whitney was taken prisoner while riding in a jeep with other officers in what was believed to be friendly territory.

New York, Aug. 30 (AP)—The army today took over its 22d and largest and fastest hospital ship, the 700-bed Charles A. Stafford, named for an Army Medical Corps captain killed during the Java evacuations. It formerly was the New York and Cuba mail liner S. S. Siboney.

Lieut. Col. William Keller, of Upper Darby, Pa., will command it.

French Patriots Hidden In Grace Moore's Villa

The Riviera villa of Grace Moore, American opera star, was a refuge for French patriots sought by the Nazis during the four years of German occupation, it was revealed yesterday in a dispatch to the Office of War Information.

The villa, Casa Lauretta near Cannes, was converted by Julien, Miss Moore's former chauffeur and gardener, into a relay station for patriots fleeing the Gestapo. The patriot leader at Cannes, the dispatch reported, said that Julien had hidden, clothed and fed more than fifty patriots.

"Tell Miss Moore that Casa Lauretta has been used in the service of France," Julien said.

AUG 31 1944

MORE THAN 1,000 HEAVY BOMBERS PARTICIPATED IN THE OVERNIGHT ATTACKS, UNLOADING APPROXIMATELY 1,500 TONS OF HIGH EXPLOSIVES AND INCENDIARIES UPON STETTIN AND ANOTHER GREAT CARGO OF DESTRUCTION UPON KONIGSBERG.

THIS TWIN BLOW WAS IN DIRECT SUPPORT OF RUSSIAN ARMIES BATTERING AT GERMANY'S EASTERN FRONTIERS, BOTH THE BALTIC PORT OF STETTIN AND THE EAST PRUSSIAN CAPITAL OF KONIGSBERG BEING IMPORTANT LINKS IN GERMAN SUPPLY LINES LEADING TO THE RUSSIAN FRONT.

AN HOUR AFTER THE ATTACK UPON STETTIN, THE AIR MINISTRY SAID, RECONNAISSANCE REVEALED SMOKE FROM VERY LARGE FIRES RISING TO A GREAT HEIGHT.

BOTH BERLIN AND HAMBURG WERE HIT BY SPEEDY MOSQUITOS, WHICH CARRY A BOMB LOAD OF 4,000 POUNDS.

THE AIR MINISTRY SAID 41 PLANES WERE LOST IN THE OVERNIGHT OPERATIONS, DURING WHICH MANY MINES WERE LAID IN ENEMY WATERS.

THIS NEED WAS BROUGHT OUT IN A PRESS CONFERENCE WHICH ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE ARMY'S CIVIL AFFAIRS DIVISION DOING MUCH THE SAME TYPE OF WORK AS THE UNRRA IN INITIAL STAGES OF LIBERATION HAS OFFERED NO CLUE WHEN IT EXPECTS TO TAKE OVER. MEANWHILE, THE ARMY DOES NOT KNOW WHERE IT STANDS IN THE FIRST TWO BIG AREAS TO BE LIBERATED, FOR THE ATLANTIC CITY CHARTER PREVENTS IT FROM GOING INTO ENEMY TERRITORY BY A CLAUSE WHICH MAY BE REMOVED AT THE CANADIAN CONFERENCE IN MONTREAL NEXT MONTH.

ALTHOUGH A MEMBER OF THE RELIEF ORGANIZATION, GEN. CHARLES DEGAULLE'S NATIONAL LIBERATION COMMITTEE HAS MADE NO MOVE AS YET TO ASK HELP OR SEEK GUIDANCE FROM THE UNRRA IN SUCH FIELDS AS AGRICULTURE, WELFARE AND MEDICAL SERVICES.

"THIS IS PROBABLY THE FIRST TIME IN ANY INVASION THAT A LARGE TOWN IS GOING TO BE ATTACKED FRONTALLY AS A BEACHHEAD," HE SAID, POINTING OUT THAT IT WOULD NOT BE EASY. WHEN THE FRONTAL ASSAULT WAS TURNED BACK, HE LANDED A REGIMENT AT ANOTHER SPOT IMMEDIATELY AND MOVED IT IN TO ASSAULT THE SAME TOWN FROM THE SIDE. IT WORKED.

DAHLQUIST COMMANDEERED A DUCK, "ONE OF THOSE BIG, CLUMSY COMBINATIONS OF MOTOR TRUCK AND FREIGHT FERRY" FOR HIS USE ON THE BEACH.

DAHLQUIST IS ONE OF THE FEW DIVISION COMMANDERS WHO CAME UP WITHOUT BENEFIT OF WEST POINT. HE JOINED THE ARMY IN 1917 FRESH FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA AND WAS COMMISSIONED A SECOND LIEUTENANT IN THE INFANTRY OFFICERS' TRAINING CAMP AT FORT SNELLING, MINN. HE RERVED OVERSEAS IN THE FIRST WORLD WAR AND REMAINED IN GERMANY WITH THE OCCUPATION ARMY.

HE WAS PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN IN 1920 AND WAS MADE A LIEUTENANT-COLONEL--HIS PERMANENT RANK--IN 1940. HE BECAME A BRIGADIER GENERAL IN 1942 AND A MAJOR GENERAL IN JULY, 1943, WHEN HE WAS ORDERED TO RETURN FROM ENGLAND TO COMMAND THE 70TH DIVISION AT CAMP ADAIR, ORE.

HE HAD HELPED TO ORGANIZE THE DIVISION.

HE HAD GONE TO ENGLAND IN 1942 AS A G-1 (PERSONNEL) U.S.ARMY OBSERVER, AND IN MAY OF THAT YEAR HAD BEEN MADE A DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF IN THE EUROPEAN THEATER UNDER GEN.EISENHOWER.

THE PLACE WHERE THE 36TH WAS ORDER TO LAND IN THIS INVASION WAS CLOSE TO WHERE NAPOLEON LANDED WHEN HE RETURNED FROM THE ELBA EXILE. DAHLQUIST WAS ASKED WHAT HE KNEW ABOUT THAT.

"YOU KNOW," HE REPLIED, "SO MANY PEOPLE ARE ASKING ME THAT I'VE ORDERED THE FORMATION OF A HISTORICAL SECTION IN THIS DIVISION. WE'LL HAVE TO GET TO THE BOTTOM OF THIS."

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, AUG 30-(AP)-AMERICAN TROOPS THRUST ACROSS THE AISNE RIVER IN TWO PLACES AND DROVE NORTH OF THE CHEMIN DES DAMES ROAD TO WITHIN 38 MILES OF THE BELGIAN BORDER TODAY, THREATENING TO OUTFLANK THE GERMAN 15TH ARMY.

THE GERMANS ALSO WERE FACED WITH NEW PRESSURE ON THE WEST END OF THE ALLIED LINE BY A BRITISH DRIVE BEYOND THE SEINE.

ADVANCE ELEMENTS OF THE U.S. THIRD ARMY COMMANDED BY LT.GEN. GEORGE S.PATTON, JR., SPED ON FROM CAPTURED SOISSONS--THE "HELL'S GATE" OF THE 1918 BATTLE OF THE AISNE--AND WERE WITHIN 3,000 YARDS OF LAON, 19 MILES TO THE NORTHEAST AND ONLY 36 MILES FROM BELGIUM.

ANOTHER AMERICAN COLUMN PENETRATED TO MONTAIGU, 10 MILES SOUTHEAST OF LAON AND 50 MILES FROM SEDAN WHERE THE GERMANS MADE THEIR BREAKTHROUGH INTO FRANCE FOUR YEARS AGO. SEP 1 1944

MONTAIGU IS 25 MILES BEYOND SOISSONS, BUT IT WAS NOT IMMEDIATELY CLEAR WHETHER UNITS REACHING THAT TOWN MOVED THROUGH SOISSONS OR PUSHED UP FROM A SECOND BRIDGEHEAD ACROSS THE AISNE AT PONT-ARCY, 14 MILES EAST OF SOISSONS.

BOTH THESE BRIDGEHEADS ARE BEING EXTENDED AS AMERICAN UNITS FARTHER BACK WERE CLEANING UP THE AREA BETWEEN THE MARNE AND THE AISNE NORTH OF MEAUX AND CHATEAU-THIERRY.

SEP 1 1944

A HUNDRED MILES TO THE WEST BRITISH TROOPS DROVE NORTHWARD FROM THE NOW CONSOLIDATED BRIDGEHEADS ON THE NORTH BANK OF THE SEINE CAPTURING LONGCHAMPS AND MAINNEVILLE IN A THRUST CARRYING THEM 20 MILES BEYOND VERNON FOR THEIR DEEPEST PENETRATION INTO THE AREA OF THE GERMANS' FLYING BOMB LAUNCHING SITES.

THE SAME COLUMNS OVERRAN ETREPAGNY AFTER SWEEPING ACROSS THE MAIN ROUEN-PARIS ROAD WHICH ALSO WAS CUT NEAR THE VILLAGE OF ECOUIS BY TROOPS STABBING OUT FROM THE LOUVIERS BRIDGEHEAD.

THE VERNON-LOUVIERS BRIDGEHEADS HAVE BEEN JOINED AND THEY HAVE BEEN LINKED UP WITH THE AMERICANS' MANTES-GASSICOURT BRIDGEHEAD. THE AMERICAN BRIDGEHEAD HAS BEEN DOUBLED IN SIZE IN THE PAST 24 HOURS THUS GIVING THE ALLIES A SOLID LINE STRETCHING 35 AIRLINE MILES ALONG THE NORTH BANK OF THE SEINE.

ALTHOUGH THE AMERICANS WERE MEETING LITTLE RESISTANCE IN THEIR RAPID ADVANCES NORTHEAST OF PARIS THE PROGRESS WAS HARDER AT THE WESTERN END OF THE ALLIES' S-SHAPED FRONT.

THE SEINE BEND SOUTH OF CAUDEBEC WAS ENTIRELY IN ALLIED HANDS BUT THE GERMANS WERE CLEARED OUT OF THE BROTONNE FOREST IN THAT AREA ONLY AFTER HARD FIGHTING.

WHAT GERMANS WERE LEFT ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE SEINE WERE IN TWO REMAINING HORSESHOE LOOPS. THEY WERE RESISTING FIERCELY, BUT GEN.SIR BERNARD L.MONTGOMERY'S TROOPS WERE SMASHING INTO BOTH LOOPS TO CLEAN THEM OUT.

NEAR NICE, FRANCE, AUG.28-(DELAYED)-(AP)-SLOWLY AND CAREFULLY AMERICAN FORCES WERE WORKING THEIR WAY FORWARD TODAY INTO THE FAMED PLAYGROUND CITY OF NICE, BYPASSED IN THE MAIN ASSAULT IN SOUTHERN FRANCE.

EXCEPT FOR THE EXPLOSION OF AN OCCASIONAL MINE THERE WERE NO SOUNDS OF WAR ON THE BANKS OF THE VAR RIVER.

THERE WAS NO DEFINITE INDICATION OF THE STRENGTH OF THE GARRISONS WITHIN THE CITY.

GERMAN TROOPS FLEEING TOWARD SIEGFRIED LINE

U. S. Forces Dash Through Argonne Forest, Meet Slight Resistance.

BRITISH TAKE AMIENS

Slice Up French Coast Cutting Off Half of Enemy's Rocket Coast.

Agnew

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Friday, Sept. 1.— (AP) American troops have crossed the Meuse river near the Ardennes forest on the Belgian frontier in a tidal offensive stabbing into the outskirts of the historic battle city of Sedan, and field dispatches early today said the Yanks were unlikely to collide with any major German resistance short of the famous Siegfried Line, or west wall, on the German frontier itself 55 miles east of Sedan.

NIGHT

The Meuse apparently was crossed between Sedan—where the Germans broke into France in 1940—and Charleville, and hard-riding Yank armor units then fanned out agai both towns just five miles fr the Belgian border.

A rabble of disorganized Germans was melting in the path of the Americans—fleeing in an effort to get into Germany, field dispatches said.

Cut Through Argonne Forest

Leaping in a single day through the Argonne forest, where Gen. John J. Pershing's Doughboys battled for six weeks, free-wheeling U. S. armored units may already have sprung the barrier of the Meuse, just south of Sedan.

Matching the speed of Lt. Gens. Courtney H. Hodges and George S. Patton, Jr., British tanks broke loose into the open plains of Piccardy, and advancing 60 miles in two days captured the cathedral and industrial city of Amiens, where the "Black Day" defeat of the German army in 1918 induced Germans to make their first bid for peace.

From a strong bridgehead across the historic Somme at Amiens, Lt. Gen. Sir Richard Nugent O'Connor's armor plunged on 10 miles to Corbie, 55 miles from the Belgian border, and virtually sliced off half the Germans buzzbomb coast.

The Canadians, driving straight through Rouen, ticked off 16 miles to Buchy, only 17 miles south of Dieppe, and a third of the way across Le Havre peninsula.

Supreme headquarters had no immediate confirmation of the report that Sedan was almost reached, but latest accounts from the field said the Americans were sweeping on to the northeast from Rheims, Laon, Chalons and Vitry on a 90-mile front, unchecked and scarcely hindered by totally disorganized Germans.

The Americans were simply motoring along in their tanks and armored cars, occasionally encountering suicide squads, usually made up of a few riflemen and an antitank gun, at the cross roads.

Drive Toward Reich

The spearhead near Sedan was the second aimed at the Reich, for it was announced earlier that Gen. Patton's Third army had reached St. Dizier, 40 miles from the old Maginot line and 87 miles from the Reich. Some field accounts said this column was fighting only 70 miles from the Siegfried line in Germany.

Even these sensational accounts apparently were behind the actual strides of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's armies fighting along a winding 270-mile front.

Patchy communications hindered the receipt of field dispatches, and even field commanders were reported idling at their headquarters for want of word from the fast-striking columns.

"We are just going on until we bump into the Russians," said one British staff officer at the front. "There's nothing ahead of us."

Even the German rearguards more often than not were men who stayed behind to surrender.

Unless Field Marshal Guenther Gen. Von Kluge somehow could produce a German "miracle of the Marne" soon it was evident he would be fighting his next battle within Germany.

The last German resistance south of the Seine had been rubbed out and the Somme and Marne lines along which he might have made a stand already had been passed, as had the Aisne. The Oise was nearly outflanked.

Everywhere British and American troops were hurdling World War battlefields where they had drawn out the agony of four years in the First World War.

The Americans in four days had ploughed through the whole belt of battlegrounds northeast of Paris which had taken the Allies four years to cover in the former conflict.

The British, in their drive northeast of Amiens, were proceeding toward the bloody reminders of Bapaume, Arras and Cambrai, with Arras 28 miles to the north and Cambrai 36 to the northeast.

Fight in Compiegne Forest

The Americans were reported fighting in Compeigne forest north of Paris where Adolf Hitler dictated peace tarms to the French in 1940 in the historic railway car of Marshal Foch.

It was Sedan which the Americans, after their bloody fight through the Meuse-Argonne offensive, took Nov. 7, 1918, just four days before the armistice.

Then, as now, German armies were collapsing and German routes of retreat into Germany were threatened.

The Germans were being thrown completely out of France, buzz-bomb coast and all, and back into Belgium with such astonishing speed as to suggest that they were thinking only of defending their Fatherland.

SEP 2 1944

Already Field Marshal Gen. Guenther von Kluge's Seventh army and newly-organized Fifth tank army have dragged down into decisive defeat the bulk of the 15th army with total enemy casualties of more than 400,000, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced. Twenty-five divisions, including five armored divisions, have been destroyed and 18 severely mauled, he said.

The romp to Amiens astride the Somme by Lt. Gen. Richard Nugent O'Connor's British armor was through lightly-held country against only moderate resistance or none at all.

O'Connor's tankmen simply slashed through scattered pockets, leaving them to be mopped up later.

"We won the war on the Orne," commented a British staff officer at the front. "When you by-pass the Hun now he chucks it. He's through."

By this slash the British drove to within 60 miles of the Belgian frontier and a scant 25 miles from Abbeville where the Germans sprang their trap at Dunkerque in 1940.

This column which virtually sliced off half the buzzbomb coast started from the Seine at Vernon at daybreak Tuesday and entered the ancient capital of Piccardy at daybreak this morning, capturing Beauvais and Gournay in the operation.

Push Into Rouen

First Canadian infantry meanwhile pushed into Rouen on the lower Seine and without waiting to mop up that strong point of snipers began driving west around and beyond the city for the purpose of cleaning up scattered elements in the by-passed Le Havre peninsula.

The Canadians reached a point nine miles north of Rouen, only 22 miles from Dieppe where the August raid of 1942 taught the Allies lessons for the invasion.

Below Rouen three more bridgeheads were thrown across the Seine for a more direct attack on Le Havre, the British crossing in the loop near Duclair and in another loop between Caudebec and Lilleborne, while Belgians crossed nearest the coast at Quillebeuf. This town is 17 miles east of Le Havre.

Only small pockets of Germans were now left south of the Seine.

The great American thrusts spreading east and northeast of Paris were at such a pace that it was difficult to keep contact with fleeing elements.

"Total disorganization" was the term applied by American officers to the enemy's resistance.

Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First army, which took Laon, caught three trains loaded with German troops. All were killed or captured before the trains could pull out in retreat.

40 Miles From Verdun

General Patton's Third Army at St. Dizier, 45 miles northeast of Troyes, was only about 40 miles southwest of Verdun and west of Nancy, two towns which along with Metz formed the three corners of one of the strongest belts of the old French Maginot Line.

There were reports that the Germans had reversed the guns in the Maginot fortifications, but it was doubted that they had time to do this effectively. Moreover, many of the forts have been stripped of guns by the Germans who moved them to coastal fortifications.

There was no indication, however, that General Eisenhower intended to send his armies headlong into the Maginot and German Siegfried lines.

Aimed Northeastward

Instead, the spearheads at present were aimed northeastward toward the Ardennes through which the Germans broke in their invasion in 1940, catching the French by surprise and turning the Maginot Line.

In the Brittany peninsula, American siege forces cleared all the Brest peninsula south of Brest. Supreme headquarters advised reporters to be on hand at Brest, a possible indication that its fall was expected soon.

AMERICANS ADVANCE SWIFTLY

Patton's Tanks Only 70 Miles From Germany—Another Column Near Belgium.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Patrols of the Third U. S. Army have lanced into the Argonne Forest, seventy miles from Germany and the Siegfried Line, a field dispatch said tonight as British tanks on the west seized Amiens and smashed across the Somme in a drive that carried sixty miles in forty-eight hours.

In the famous Argonne Forest, the Americans had reached the region whence the Allies in the last war launched the final grand offensive that forced the Germans to sue for peace.

Another column, from the First United States Army, keeping pace with these lightning advances, overran Laon and stabbed on north along the last thirty miles to Belgium with such bewildering speed that they overwhelmed three trainloads of German soldiers trying to escape.

The offensive, virtually uncontested along a 150-mile arc at the Somme and approaching the Meuse River, indicated that the Germans had given up the last pretense of a rearguard stand and were in open flight through Belgium back to Germany.

The Somme itself had been considered a natural barrier along which the enemy might attempt a stand, but the capture of Amiens, which straddles the river, blasted this possibility.

Half of Robot Coast Doomed.

With the Canadians mopping up the river port of Rouen, twenty-five miles inland from Dieppe, and the British twenty-five miles inland from Abbeville at Amiens, half the German robot bomb coast and any forces garrisoning it seemed doomed.

There was no rest anywhere for the Germans, and Allied drives mushroomed over battlefields of the first world war, covering in an hour territory that it once took days and weeks to conquer.

One force of Americans, heading east for the German frontier, seized St. Dizier, eighteen miles southeast of fallen Vitry and pressed on to within forty miles of the reversed Maginot Line. The Saar border of Germany was eighty-seven miles ahead of this force.

Forty-five miles ahead of the American drive was the gateway city of Sedan, where the Germans won the battle of France in 1940 by skirting the Maginot Line. Verdun, forty miles north of St. Dizier, along with Metz and Nancy were strongpoints of the French defense line.

There have been reports the Germans were able to reverse Maginot guns to point west, but many observers doubt that any real reversal has been attempted. This would take years, and the Germans have had a few scant weeks since it dawned upon them that Allied armies were loose and headed for German borders. Equally, there is no indication that Gen. Eisenhower intends a head-on attack through the Maginot and Siegfried lines.

Spearheads are aimed instead at the Ardennes Forest, skirting the north end of the Maginot and leading into Germany, where the German chain of forts probably is thinnest.

The British bridgehead across the Somme—last natural barrier on this front before Belgium—was established in strength. The British were halfway from the Seine Line to Belgium and at Amiens they were where the "Black Day" defeat of the German Army in 1918 brought Ludendorff to ask for peace.

The Germans were pulling out along a whole 150-mile arc in a top speed withdrawal which suggested final abandonment of northern France for the defense of the Reich.

British and Belgians crossed near the mouth of the Seine, 18 to 25 miles east of the doomed Atlantic port of Le Havre, and Canadians flushed the last snipers from historic Rouen, whose river docks make it an immense military prize.

The Canadians not only entered into Rouen but drove nine miles north to within twenty-two miles of Dieppe where some of them tested the Allied pattern for invasion two years ago. Further down the Seine, Belgians won a new bridgehead at Quillebeuf, eighteen miles inland from Le Havre.

Beauvais, Gournay Taken

The British capture of Beauvais, 30 miles north of the Seine, and Gournay, 15 miles west, denied to the Germans left on the Havre peninsula their most direct route of retreat, and the onrushing British at Amiens threatened to seal off the entire coast to Le Havre, 85 miles southwest.

(A British broadcast recorded by CBS said Americans in the center had reached Clermont, 37 miles north of Paris and due west of Compiegne, in whose forest the 1918 armistice was signed

The fall of Beauvais, thirty miles north of the Seine, and Gournay, fifteen miles west, denied to the Germans left in the peninsula their most direct route of retreat, and the British at Amiens threatened to seal off the entire coast to Le Havre, eighty-five miles southwest.

At Amiens the British were on familiar soil, for it was here that their fathers under Sir Douglas Haig launched a counterblow on August 8, 1918, that caught the Germans off balance and hastened the day of their final collapse.

Some 200 enemy vehicles caught on a road going northeast of Amiens in today's clearing weather were wiped out, the R. A. F. reported.

65 Miles North Of Seine

Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' American First Army, shifted eastward several days ago, drove two and a half miles northeast of Laon in its dash toward the Belgian border, now only 33 miles away.

From Paris to the sea American, British and Canadian bridgeheads over the Seine were blended into a single front which cut the inland road from Dieppe and extended 65 miles north of the Seine to Amiens. The British and Canadians were veering directly toward the rocket coast.

In the swift British advance that covered more than 60 miles in two days, an armored column that started from the Vernon bridgehead on the Seine at daybreak Tuesday pushed into Amiens soon after first light today.

Aim Is to Meet Russians

WITH BRITISH TROOPS, Before Amiens, Aug. 31 (AP)—British tanks cruising the country east of the Seine are fanning out at such speed that it no longer is possible to keep abreast of their progress. At a forward headquarters this morning the staff was setting out again to establish a new position for the third time in forty-eight hours.

"I don't even know where we are going," a staff major said. "We are just going on until we bump into the Russians. There is nothing ahead of us."

The whole German front is collapsing. Except for isolated German "suicide squads"—usually a single anti-tank gun and a handful of riflemen at a crossroads—there is no organized enemy resistance in the sector today.

British tanks entered Amiens at 5 A. M. today against little more than token resistance. Behind them scores of towns and villages either had been captured or bypassed, and there no longer was much difference in the two terms. German garrisons more often than not were simply awaiting an opportunity to surrender.

Key points engulfed by the army of Lieut. Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey included Beauvais, Gournay and Songeons.

RUSSIAN FORCES ENTER BUCHAREST IN 30-MILE DRIVE

Win Great Air-Rail Base for Sweep Into Hungary, Germany.

REDS REACH BULGARIA

Soviet Army Chases Retreating Nazis Beyond Ploesti Oil Fields.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 1—(AP) Red army tanks and motorized infantry rumbled into the broad avenues of the capitulated Romanian capital of Bucharest yesterday, winning a great rail-air base for an overland sweep into Hungary and southern Germany, and also reached the Bulgarian frontier in a 30-mile advance below the captured Black Sea port of Constanta.

The dusty Second Ukraine army units under Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky, victor at Odessa, clattered into "the little Paris of the Balkans" after a 30-mile march southward from the burning Ploesti oil fields, wrested from the bitterly-resisting Germans Wednesday.

Chase Retreating Nazis

Other Soviet columns had turned northwest of Ploesti, chasing the retreating Germans nine miles beyond the great oil center along the roads leading across the Predeal pass into Transylvania.

A 20-salvo salute from 420 Moscow victory cannon marked the collapse of the Germans in Romania and the entry into Bucharest.

The parade of big Russian tanks and guns down the broad Calea Victorei, Bucharest's main thoroughfare, came three years and six weeks after Romania made the fatal mistake of joining the Germans in their June, 1941, attack on Russia—a step that has cost the Romanians more than 300,000 men, either captured or who perished on the vast Russian Steppes leading far back to Stalingrad.

For Malinovsky, who, as a sergeant in the First World War fought beside American troops in France, it was a great climax to a 12-day terrific offensive begun in the Iasi sector, 200 air-line miles to the northeast. Beyond lie the roads into Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Germany. Belgrade, Yugoslav capital, is 275 miles west of Bucharest, and Marshal Tito's partisans are reported fighting on that area.

On the fifth anniversary of the Nazi march into Poland, Sept. 1, 1939, another huge Soviet army had smashed to within nine miles northeast of Warsaw, Moscow's communique said, in a steady flanking movement on that capital.

Crowds Cheer Entry

Moscow said the Russian march through Bucharest was made without incident, and that thousands lining the streets cheered the Red army and tossed flowers to the men.

Bucharest was the second former Axis capital taken by United Nations' arms, and the first by the Soviet army.

As in the case of Italy, Romania's government had quit the Axis, asked for Allied armistice terms, and declared war on Germany before her capital was entered.

Marshal Ion Antonescu, pro-German premier ousted a week ago, is reported to be a prisoner in King Mihai's palace. He may be the first big Axis political leader to be taken by the Russians.

Premier-Marshal Joseph Stalin in an order of the day announced the march into Bucharest, avoiding use of the word "capture" since Romania now has joined the fight against Germany. He said the routing of German units in the Ploesti area had liquidated the "German threat from the north to the capital of Romania."

Nearly 600 miles to the northwest another big Russian army attacking on the approaches to Warsaw captured the rail city of Radzymin, only 11 miles northeast of Praga, eastern suburb of the embattled Polish capital on the Vistula river, the daily communique said.

Radzymin itself had been taken a month ago when Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russian Army reached the Warsaw area, but was lost later to a German counterattack. Attacking on a 12-mile front between the Warsaw-Bialystok railway and the Bug River the Russians also seized Cegielnia and Ciemnie, a few miles below Radyzymin and only nine miles from Warsaw's edge.

Nazis Admit Reverses

Berlin admitted the Russians had broken through German lines, using four divisions supported by herds of warplanes and tanks, and said they were beyond Radzymin in the effort to seize Warsaw and make a break-through across the flat Polish plains toward Germany.

Malinovsky's troops swept through 250 towns and villages in Romania, and captured 7,000 more Germans in a Nazi disaster now matching the Stalingrad debacle. With the entry into Bucharest's broad avenues the Russians were within 165 miles of the "Iron Gate" pass along the Danube on the Romanian-Yugoslav border, imperiling the 15 German divisions strung out through the Balkans down to Greece on the Mediterranean, and putting the Red army in a position to drive on toward Hungary and lower Germany.

Simultaneously, 115 miles southeast of Bucharest the Third Ukraine army under Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin reached the Bulgarian frontier at Caraomer, 30 miles southwest of the Black Sea port of Constanta, which for years had been the main German naval base for preying on Russian shipping.

Caraomer is on the 1940 Romanian-Bulgarian border, established when Bucharest gave a slice of southern Drobrudja to Bulgaria. Unless the Sofia government quits its hesitation and declares war on Germany it is thought likely the Russians will send their armored columns pouring into Bulgaria.

May Drive Along Danube

A Berlin commentator, Col. Ernst Von Hammer, said the Russians intended not only to cross into Bulgaria, but also to sweep on into Yugoslavia in the southwest, and wheel westward along the Danube, ancient invasion gateway to central Europe, in a strike toward wavering Hungary and Germany itself.

Beyond Bucharest extend open plains, rich in ripening wheat, and around the Romanian capital are great air bases which the Soviets undoubtedly will quickly put to use. These fields also probably will soon supplant the Russian Ukraine "shuttle bases" used by American bombers in their hops from Italy.

A mass of confused, disorganized German troops were reported withdrawing into the Carpathian mountains north of fallen Ploesti in an effort to escape the fury of the Russians and the combined attacks of Romanian divisions which are said to have sealed off those escape hatches into Transylvania.

Moscow dispatches said the Romanians still had 30 or more divisions which could be sent into combat against the Germans despite the great campaign losses suffered by the former Axis satellite.

Although the Germans had destroyed large parts of the Ploesti oil installations, Moscow dispatches said Romanians were aiding the Russians in putting out the fires there.

7000 Nazis Are Captured In Ringed Romanian Capital

Two German Generals Among Prisoners and Third Is Found Dead—Russians Battle Ploesti Oil Fires

London, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Russia's Second Army of the Ukraine entered the Romanian capital of Bucharest today and captured more than 7,000 Germans in an encirclement, Moscow announced tonight.

In this great trap sprung by the troops of Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky, the Russians captured two more generals, the commander of the Seventy-sixth German Infantry Division and the former commander of the garrison at Iasi, Moscow's broadcast communique announced.

Among the enemy dead in this area was found the body of Gen. Mieck, commander of the Fourth German Army Corps, the Russians said, and more than 250 populated places in Romania were reported seized during the day.

Meanwhile, in the Warsaw sector, 600 miles to the north, Russian counter attacks considerably improved the Soviet positions above the eastern suburb of Praga, the communique announced, and led to the capture of the railway station of Radzymin, eleven miles northeast of Praga.

The entry into Bucharest followed twelve days of ferocious fighting through the Balkan country, and even as the dusty soldiers strode down the Calea Victorei, the city's main thoroughfare, the news was announced by Premier Stalin in a broadcast Order of the Day.

The way to the capital was all but wide open after the Germans had been routed from the Ploesti oil fields, last major source of Nazi oil in Europe.

"Our troops thus liquidated the German threat to the Romanian capital from the north," Stalin said.

Advancing against disorderly German resistance, mobile Russian columns had advanced to within seventeen miles of Bucharest last night. They drew within sight of the city's tinted plaster houses this afternoon and apparently entered without major opposition.

The victory rated a salute of twenty-four salvos from 324 of Moscow's guns—duplicating the biggest salutes of the Russo-German war.

Third Capital Set Free.

Bucharest was occupied by the Russians in 1828 and again in 1848 and from 1853 to 1854. Tonight they spread through twenty square miles of the city as partners of the Romanians, who last week changed sides in the war, turning against the Nazis and fighting on the side of the Allies instead.

King Michael's capital, the Paris of the Balkans, thus became the third major European capital entered by United Nations troops.

Moscow reported a few days ago that the Romanians themselves had driven the Germans from most of the city, and German warplanes have been bombing the capital ever since.

Russian Entry In Bucharest

Announced

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Red army has entered Bucharest, Marshal Stalin announced tonight.

Moscow, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Red army was believed today to have entered Bucharest, capital of Romania, after capturing the great Ploesti oil fields and preempting perhaps a third of the German petroleum supply.

At midnight the Russians were 17 miles from the city of 648,000 after an advance of nearly 40 miles in a day.

An official announcement was not yet made, but Muscovites kept their radios tuned for an order of the day.

Oil Fires Stemmed

Izvestia reported from captured Ploesti that the abrupt Red army drive had prevented destruction of the Ploesti oil fields, but added that serious damage had been done. Romanian oil workers helped put out tremendous fires and civilians directed Soviet troops to a group of Germans dressed as civilians, applying the torch.

The dispatch added that a plane trip over the fields, greatest in Europe except for those in Russia itself, disclosed that the Germans did everything possible to destroy the installations.

Meanwhile, forces of Gen. Fedor I. Tolbukhin were pushing through level plain country along with those of Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky and were believed already to have joined hands.

Another arm of Malinovsky's big command turned directly north through a pass leading to Brasov (population 61,800) on the trunk line railroad from Bucharest to Budapest and Vienna. Large groups of Germans and Hungarians are known to be massed in Hungary held Transylvania in the path of this force.

Romanian Army Still Strong

Even after the Romanian Army's big defeats on the Russian steppes in the Crimea and at Odessa, Red Star said it still had 30 to 35 divisions.

"German divisions in Romania are doomed," the usually conservative army organ added. Red Star said five to six German divisions in Greece and the Aegean Islands were cut off from the main German army and that Marshal Tito's divisions had handed the Germans defeats in Yugoslavia.

A Russian war bulletin said General Malinovsky's army captured more than 200 towns yesterday around Ploesti and northeast of Bucharest, including Meriuta, only 17 miles away.

Antonescu Believed Prisoner in Palace

Radzymin Is Recaptured as Red Army Smashes to 9 Miles of Warsaw

By Joseph Morton

BUCHAREST, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Russian Army entered Bucharest from the east and northeast today and moved through to the west, the direction of the Bulgarian frontier.

Standing in the heart of the city at noon, I watched a motorized Soviet column speed through the streets. Dusty and perspiring, the crew men wasted little time waving to the sidewalk throngs, appearing more interested in getting to their destination.

Every single vehicle was American-made, including jeeps, amphibious "ducks," command cars, trucks and even a pale-blue Ford sedan covered with a camouflage net.

A Romanian captain standing near by told me the first Russian patrols reached the city yesterday from the direction of Constanta. The main body of troops in this area, he said, was skirting the city en route westward, apparently with no intention of passing through.

Romanians watching the spectacle had little to offer in the way of greeting, the great majority of them staring silently. Anxiety over the proximity of Russian troops was obvious among many of Bucharest's wealthier people, an American resident told me. He said a member of the nobility had approached one of his friends with an offer to take jewels out of the country.

Although badly torn up by a four-day indiscriminate German bombing starting Aug. 24, Bucharest seemed to be getting back to normal after the excitement over the change of position in the war. All stores were open, all utilities were restored and there apparently was abundant food.

In the German air raids, I learned, seven hospitals were hit. Damage throughout the city was far greater than from all Allied operations in this area combined.

EISENHOWER SEES VICTORY IN 1944

Gen. Bradley Promoted to Full Field Commander of Army.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 31.—(AP) Gen. Eisenhower, bronzed and smiling, voiced anew tonight his confidence that victory over Germany was possible in 1944, attributed the Nazis' utter defeat in France to their land-greedy defense strategy, and announced a change in his staff set-up.

The Supreme commander said that Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, whose American armies are dashing head-long toward Belgium, had been made a full field commander of U. S. forces in northern France, a command post equal to that of British Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, whose promotion to the rank of field marshal was announced later in London. Montgomery commands the British and Canadian armies in northern France.

Manpower Shortage

Eisenhower asserted the fight would be carried into Germany and he appeared convinced the Nazis were running out of manpower for their breached western defenses.

Underscoring Eisenhower's words was a huge battlemap behind him blazing with huge red arrows indicating the latest Allied advances toward Belgium and the German border in an invasion which he declared was already fully five days ahead of schedule.

Asked when he expected complete victory, the Supreme commander said he would stand by his statement in Algiers just before he left for England to take over the invasion job. At that time he said Germany could be beaten in 1944 if everyone on the battlefront and at home did their duty.

The four-star general brought his Scotty pup with its four-star studded collar along to the press conference. This man with the greatest weight of war responsibility any American general has ever had was in high humor.

Looking very boyish with his broad grin and twinkling eyes Eisenhower spoke to the men before him of utter destruction of the German military might.

He forcefully declared the battle must and would be carried home hard and decisively into the Reich, and he scorned the vaunted Siegfried line by not being able to remember its name.

Announces New Setup

In announcing the new set-up in field command in France elevating Bradley to an equal footing with Montgomery, Eisenhower, with a ringing note of defiance in his voice, told press representatives who sometimes seem critical that Montgomery and he were close and warm friends and the British general was one of the greatest soldiers of this or any war.

Turning to the progress of the Allied forces in France, the Supreme commander predicted that if the American and British troops entered the low countries the Germans would probably be forced to pull out of Denmark and Norway.

Eisenhower declared that Field Marshal Von Kluge's crushing defeat in France was partly a result of the German land-greedy strategy of inflexible defense—a do-or-die stand on a flank south of the Seine.

Commenting on the power of the German army, the General seemed convinced that the Germans were scraping the bottom of the barrel for forces to brace their broken Western front. About the much-talked-of German fort chain around the Reich frontier Eisenhower declared that no defense system is better than the men who defend it.

Montgomery One Of Greatest

In announcing the new setup in field command in France elevating Bradley to an equal footing with Montgomery, Eisenhower, with a ringing note of defiance in his voice, told press representatives that Montgomery and he were close and warm friends and the British general was one of the greatest soldiers of this or any war.

Answering questions on the new command setup, the supreme commander explained that he had regarded it as essential to have a single field commander with full responsibility until the breakout after the invasion, and that Montgomery was his choice and it was fully approved by the Americans.

Now that the breakout has occurred, it is possible to effect the final stage of the command system as planned all along, he added.

Praised By London Paper

In London, the Evening News, commenting on the change in command in France, praised Eisenhower for his "direct and manly" explanation of the new setup. In an edittorial the News said "he has done well, for we all were becoming a little muddled by reports and denials and renewed reports."

The News praised "Ike" for his fine expression and regard for Montgomery and added that Eisenhower has a potent and tough team to handle. "He has to be a diplomat and chairman as well as a soldier," the newspaper continued.

Eisenhower Says Foe Lost 400,000; Yanks to Carry War Into Germany

SEP 1944

General Says Offensive in France Is 5 Days Ahead of Schedule.

Long

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Gen. Eisenhower announced today that Lieut-Gen. Omar N. Bradley had taken his place as a full field commander of American armies in northern France in equal status to Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, and declared confidently his forces would carry the fight into Germany inevitably and decisively.

DAY

Gen. Bradley, mild Missouri infantry specialist, hitherto has been officially subordinate to Gen. Montgomery, who commanded all ground troops in northern France under Gen. Eisenhower. Gen. Bradley, however, has assumed great stature by directing his First and Third American armies in the breakthrough from St. Lo across the Brest Peninsula, beyond Paris and to the approaches of Belgium and Germany.

Gen. Eisenhower, smiling and bronzed, said that operations were five days ahead of schedule. His eyes twinkling, he stood before a huge battle map of northern France streaked with red arrows of his troop gains toward Belgium and the Rhine and spoke with a firm voice of confidence in victories won and others yet ahead.

Gen. Eisenhower said that the crushing defeat administered to Field Marshal Von Kluge was due partly to the land-greedy Nazi strategy of inflexible defense—a rigid stake-all stand on a flank south of the Seine.

Gen. Eisenhower did not permit direct quotations from his talk—his first to his main press headquarters since D day—observing with a wry smile that generals get into trouble whenever they talk.

Praises Montgomery.

In announcing the new setup of field command, he paid high tribute to Gen. Montgomery, describing him as a close and warm friend and one of the greatest soldiers of this war or any other. He emphasized the change was in no way the slightest reflection upon "Monty" nor a demotion for him.

The exact time when the division of responsibility was reached was not specified, but Gen. Eisenhower said that it was not effective at the time that the report of the division first came out a fortnight ago.

Gen. Eisenhower said he regarded it as essential to have a single field commander with full responsibility until the breakout after invasion, hence Gen. Montgomery was appointed with full approval of the Americans.

Now that the breakout has occurred, it is possible to effect the final stage of the command system as planned all along, Gen. Eisenhower said.

The commander said the French had come to him with an urgent request that troops in strength parade through Paris at once last week end, when fighting still was going on in the city suburbs, as a means of reassuring the people. Originally, it had been planned to let the French Second Armored Division do the parading with only a handful of British and Americans. But due to the urgency of the request, he had to send in what was available—the French division and the American Fourth Infantry. Gen. Eisenhower said even these were not parading so much as marching through the city on the shortest route to the battlefields. The British were not represented by a division, only because none was near enough.

Gen. Eisenhower said he regretted greatly that Gen. Montgomery could not be there with him to see the liberation but that the British commander was too busy on the fighting front.

Out of a desire to keep the Germans guessing about his intentions in Pas de Calais, the General declined to comment on German robot bombs except to say that personally he didn't like them. He recalled with a chuckle that he had been accused of moving his advance command post to France just to get away from them.

Commenting on the vaunted German frontier fort chain, he said no defense system is better than the men who defend it. Gen. Eisenhower seemed convinced that the Germans were scraping the bottom of the barrel for forces to brace their broken Western Front.

Answering a question, he said that if the Allies drove into Belgium and the Netherlands, the Germans probably would be forced to pull out of Denmark.

Commenting on a Washington report that the whole French operation—northern and southern invasions—soon would be brought brought under his command, the Supreme Commander said this was a matter for the decision of the combined chiefs of staff.

From the first five days after the Normandy landings the Allied command has been able to foresee the whole German strategy, one of rigid defense in which the enemy staked all and lost all, he said.

The Supreme Commander added that before the invasion the Allied chiefs had thought it would be more likely—and better strategy for the Germans—to withdraw when they saw they were unable to hurl the invaders into the sea, fighting a delaying action back to some better defense system with more direct lines of supply and reinforcement.

Instead, the Nazis fought in and out at Caen on a plan of strategy which made every foot there more important than ten miles anywhere else among the line. Every piece of dust there had the value of a diamond, so bitter was the enemy's determination to hold on well south of the Seine.

Gen. Eisenhower praised efforts of the French Forces of the Interior as more effective than most people had thought they could be.

The General wanted once to refer to the Siegfried Line—the Germans' hope for defense of their homeland frontier—but he could not remember its name. He grinned sheepishly and let correspondents prompt him.

Gen. Montgomery Is Raised To Rank Of Field Marshal

SEP 2 1944

Night

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, whom many consider Britain's best general and who is certainly the nation's most spectacular field commander, tonight was appointed Field Marshal supernumerary by King George.

The announcement of the appointment which will become effective tomorrow, came only a few hours after Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower revealed that Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley had been given equal status with Montgomery as field commander of an army group. However, unofficial sources emphasized the Montgomery appointment had no connection with this and had been planned for some time as recognition for his "invaluable services to the empire."

Precedence Not Involved

Neither will the appointment involve precedence in the field, these sources said. Montgomery as field marshal will carry no more authority than General Bradley.

Montgomery, whose rise in fame began at El Alamein on the western desert and who at present is commander of the 21st Army group which broke the German Seventh Army in northern France, becomes the 14th living British field marshal. Because army regulations specify there shall be only eight field marshals, he is officially listed as the latest of six supernumeraries who achieve full title when deaths create vacancies.

Others Of Same Rank

Other supernumerary field marshals are: Jan Christiaan Smuts, Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Sir John G. Dill, Sir Alan Francis Brooke and Lord Gort.

Field marshal appointments are bestowed either in recognition of highly meritorious services on the field of battle or solely as a compliment.

Nazi Losses Top 400,000 In France, Says Eisenhower

SEP 2 1944

General Reports 'Great Victory' Over Enemy, Two German Armies Defeated.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—(AP) General Dwight D. Eisenhower, reporting on what he called "this great victory" in northern France, told the War department today that German casualties in the swirling battles are more than 400,000, with two whole armies and the main strength of two more decisively beaten.

The general's total of Nazi losses, for the northern France action alone since the June 6 debarkation on the Normandy beaches, ran some 50,000 more than the total of American casualties in all armed services and in all theaters since Pearl Harbor.

Cost Remains High

But the cost still is grievously high in men as well as materials, Eisenhower's report and a news conference statement from Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson showed.

Patterson's announcement listed 23,249 new American army casualties for the approximate period of heaviest action when Allied forces were making their breakouts through fixed German defenses into the main area of France. His report was for all theaters.

General Eisenhower reported some representative totals of material used and lost, topped by the announcement that in support of the northern France operations the air force has lost some 3,000 planes and used up the equipment of 225 more in replacement parts and spares. The fliers, he said, dropped more than 55,000 tons of bombs and used 44,000,000 gallons of aviation gasoline.

The general's figures were six days old and probably were far out of date in view of the thrusts by American, British and Canadian forces toward Germany, Belgium and the robot coast since they were compiled Aug. 25. The report took no account of action in southern France which has ruined a German army there.

No comparative figures on American or Allied losses in northern France accompanied the Eisenhower report, the nearest approach to a parallel being a recent announcement that as of Aug. 6 American killed, wounded and missing totalled 112,673 since the invasion forces hit Normandy beaches June 6.

Total Casualties Released

However, shortly before the General's figures were made public at the War department, Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson announced total army casualties of 284,838 in all theaters since Pearl Harbor.

Reflecting, as Patterson said, the period of heaviest action in northern France, the total was up 23,249 from the report just a week earlier. Such reports run three weeks or more behind action at the front, based on notices delivered to next-of-kin. The newly-reported American casualties thus would be for the period toward the end of July, when Allied forces were power-driving through fixed German positions.

Coupled with the latest Navy casualty list of 58,353, the new army report of American losses makes an over-all total of 343,191, compared to 317,846 a week earlier.

For August 13, Patterson at his news conference reported the following breakdown of army casualties: 53,101 killed, 44,643 missing, 44,408 prisoners, 142,686 wounded of which 60,314 have gone back to duty.

For August 6 the figures were 48,880 killed, 42,956 missing, 43,822 prisoners, and 125,931 wounded.

General Eisenhower said his overall figure on German casualties included more than 200,000 prisoners of whom 135,000 have been taken since July 25 "and the total continues to mount."

25 Divisions Destroyed

In knocking that gaping hole in German military manpower, the European Supreme commander reported his forces had destroyed the equivalent of 25 enemy divisions and "very badly cut up" another 18.

In the destroyed category he placed five panzer divisions and 20 infantry divisions, with six panzer and 12 infantry divisions heavily mauled.

Three crack parachute divisions were included in the total, Eisenhower reported, adding:

"In addition, one parachute division and two infantry divisions have no hope of escape from the fortress ports of the Brittany peninsula in which they are marooned. One infantry division is isolated in the channel islands."

Summing up on the basis of larger enemy units, Eisenhower said:

"The German Seventh army and the newly formed Fifth panzer army have been decisively defeated, and into this defeat have been drawn the bulk of the fighting strength of the First and Fifteenth armies. Three field marshals and one army commander have either been dismissed or incapacitated by wounds. One army commander, three corps commanders, 15 division commanders and one fortress commander have been either killed or captured."

In the air the General asserted, "the Luftwaffe has taken a fearful beating," with the destruction of 3,545 planes, 2,378 of them in the air. Another 270 were probably destroyed and 1,028 damaged in the air.

Lose 300 Vessels

At sea he said the enemy has lost some 300 vessels of all classes sunk or badly damaged by Allied action, in addition to many ships the Germans themselves have been forced to scuttle.

Eisenhower said the enemy has been unable, in spite of his former boasting, to interfere seriously with the invasion forces" at sea.

Paying tribute to the French Forces of the Interior, and to units from other countries fighting beside the Americans and the British, Eisenhower asserted:

"Allied teamwork, extending through all services, has again demonstrated its ability to overcome the most adverse kind of conditions in defeating the enemy."

In the mountain of enemy materiel captured or destroyed, Eisenhower listed 1,300 tanks, over 20,000 motor transports, about 500 assault guns, 1,500 field and heavier artillery guns, and "very great" amounts of coast artillery equipment.

In southern France, Patterson reported, army casualties from the invasion Aug. 15 to Aug. 24 were 1,247 killed and missing, with 5,090 wounded. They were not in his total, he said, since they occurred after Aug. 13.

Eisenhower's Victory Report

SEP 1 1944

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 (AP).—The complete text of General Dwight D. Eisenhower's report to the War Department on the results of operations in northern France between D Day, June 6, and Aug. 25, follows:

The equivalent of five Panzer divisions have been destroyed and a further six severely mauled, including one Panzer grenadier division. The equivalent of twenty infantry divisions have been eliminated and a further twelve very badly cut up and have suffered severe losses. Included in this total of infantry divisions are three of the enemy's crack parachute divisions. In addition, one parachute division and two infantry divisions have no hope of escape from the fortress ports of the Brittany peninsula, in which they are marooned. One infantry division is isolated in the Channel islands.

Total enemy casualties amount to more than 400,000 killed, wounded and prisoners of war, of which more than 200,000 are prisoners of war. Of these prisoners, 135,000 have been captured since July 25. The total continues to mount.

One thousand three hundred enemy tanks and more than 20,000 motor transports have been captured or destroyed. About 500 assault guns and 1,500 field and heavier artillery guns have been captured or destroyed. In addition, the enemy has suffered very heavy losses in coast artillery equipment.

The German 7th Army and the newly formed 5th Panzer Army have been decisively defeated and into this defeat have been drawn the bulk of the fighting strength of the 1st and 15th Armies. Three field marshals and one army commander have either been dismissed or incapacitated by wounds. One army commander, three corps commanders, fifteen divisional commanders and one fortress commander have been either killed or captured.

Luftwaffe Beaten

In the air the Luftwaffe has taken a fearful beating. Since June 6 2,378 German aircraft have been destroyed in the air and 1,167 on the ground. In addition, 270 aircraft were probably destroyed and 1,028 aircraft were damaged in the air.

At sea the enemy has been unable, in spite of his former boasting, to interfere seriously with the invasion forces. Enemy attacks on convoys have been driven off on very many occasions, and losses to Allied shipping have been small. Of the enemy's naval losses, some 300 vessels of all classes have been sunk or heavily damaged by Allied action. In addition, a number of enemy merchant ships have been sunk and the Germans themselves have been forced to scuttle, in their harbors, large numbers of all types of shipping, both naval and mercantile.

A large proportion of the enemy's effort has been devoted to attack by mine laying. The sustained work of minesweepers has resulted, within three months, in a "mine bag" off the French beaches which totals one-tenth of all mines swept in five years in all theaters of war.

Allied teamwork, extending through all services, has again demonstrated its ability to overcome the most adverse kind of conditions in defeating the enemy. Allied units from other countries have fought effectively alongside American and British forces and the F. F. I. (French Forces of the Interior) have done much valuable work.

The command system has functioned smoothly in spite of difficulties due to enforced separation of commanders and of poor signal communications due to distances and rapidly changing situations.

Many factors are woven into the warp and woof of this great victory. Among these a few are listed below, with no attempt to give their order of importance.

Elements of Victory

One was meticulous care in planning and preparation, supported resolutely in all important aspects by the combined chiefs of staff.

Another was the fact that we achieved some degree of surprise involving place, timing and strength of the attack. The excellence and sufficiency of amphibious equipment, with measures for dealing with beach defenses and obstacles, was also important.

The brilliant preparatory work of the air forces, a belief in the effectiveness of which was the very cornerstone of the original invasion conception, began months ago and reached its highest intensity at the very moment of landing. It is my conviction that except for this aerial preparation, including as a specific mission a prolonged campaign against the transportation systems of northwest Europe, the venture could not have logically been undertaken. The air support of ground forces has been most effective throughout the campaign. The supply and maintenance services have performed miracles.

But the greatest factor of all has been the fighting qualities of the soldiers, sailors and airmen of the United Nations. Their valor, stamina and devotion to duty have been beyond praise. They will continue to be.

Without any particular stress, the cablegram records the loss of 3,000 airplanes in air force support of the French invasion, and the use of the equivalent of 225 more in replacements and spare parts.

Pointing out that all American units went to France with full equipment, the general's message continues:

"Nevertheless, during the first 70 days of the operation, United States ground forces required more than 900 tanks to replace battle casualties.

"In that same period we replaced other losses in the following amounts: 2,400 automatic rifles, 1,750 quarter ton trucks (jeeps), 1,500 mortars, and 83,000 miles of field wire."

General Eisenhower said he was giving only a few examples which "do not take into account expenditures in the British army, in which many items, especially tanks, are manufactured in the United States. All French divisions are equipped exclusively with American models."

As representative of normal expenditure, the General reported:

"At our present strength, and on a basis of strict rationing, we are using 150,000 tons of ammunition per month. This includes 40,000,000 rounds of .30 caliber, 800,000 rounds of mortar, and 900,000 rounds of 105-MM ammunition."

The Air force, he said, has dropped more than 55,000 tons of bombs and used 44,000,000 gallons of aviation gasoline in support of the northern France operations.

EISENHOWER CITES NEED OF SUPPLIES IN FRENCH BATTLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—(AP) General Dwight D. Eisenhower urges "maximum rate" delivery across the Atlantic of "all those things, including spare parts, that a modern army and air force require in battle."

He cites 3,000 airplanes lost since D-day and 150,000 tons of ammunition expended a month as samples of the need.

The General's message to Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, head of the army service forces, made public by the War department today, singles out heavy duty trucks as "important" and tires as a "special item."

The Supreme commander of the Allied expeditionary force cabled the commander of the service forces in response to Somervell's request for a forecast of needs in the future phases of the north France campaign.

HUNGARY SEEN NEAR CRACKUP

Railway Strikes Reported To Have Paralyzed Traffic

London Aug. 31 (AP) — Hungary, new keystone of Adolf Hitler's southeastern defenses, seemed on the edge of a crackup as neighboring Slovakia fell rapidly under the control of Czechoslovak armed forces and Rumanian and Bulgarian peace delegates waited in Moscow and Cairo, respectively, to sign terms of capitulations.

Moscow radio said information had reached Switzerland that railway strikes had broken out in Hungary and traffic on the three main lines into Budapest was paralyzed. The report said the whole country was "on the verge of a general strike."

German Troops Hold Capital

The United Nations radio at Algiers said German troops had occupied all strategic points in Budapest, and that all official buildings in the Hungarian capital were under guard of German machine gunners.

Hungarian newspapers carried customary last-ditch appeals but also mentioned the growing peril from "military deserters, escaped prisoners of war, enemy mercenaries, criminals with no home land who are capable of anything, partisans and saboteurs infesting the roads."

Bulgaria closed the Turkish-Bulgarian frontier, a step taken to mean that German diplomats awaiting exchange in Turkey would be unable to depart by land or sea.

Croatia Cabinet Revamped

In the Nazi puppet state of Croatia, Ante Pavelic, chief of state, shook up his cabinet, replacing the Minister of War and the Interior with military men and putting two of his Ustashi men in key police positions.

The extent of the crisis in Austria and Bavaria—which are next in line if Hungary falls — was hidden under Nazi censorship. Swiss reports, however, told of widespread arrests in these regions as unrest increased, despair deepened and Berlin officialdom tried to keep its nerves steady.

Slovakian Revolt Admitted

The German radio said "political developments behind the southern flank of the Eastern front are being closely watched." The radio blamed "Soviet agents" for the Slovakian revolt which it admitted involved parts of the Slovak army.

The German radio expressed confidence in Hungary's new Cabinet which Budapest newspapers characterized as a "Government of soldiers" which would adapt itself to the "iron laws of war."

[The Federal Communications Commission heard a report from the Nazi Transkontinent Agency that former Premier Doeme Sztojay of Hungary "died today at noon."

[At the time of his resignation Tuesday Berlin said he gave way to the new military government of Gen. Geza Lakatos because of "the state of his health."]

Czechs Battle For 6 Cities

In an effort to combat the Czechoslovak underground forces, which have seized almost all Slovak territory except border areas, the Germans have thrown tanks into the heavy fighting which has spread over their puppet state.

The Czech commander in Slovakia announced through London headquarters that battles were raging for the towns of Zilina, Trnava, Galanta, Lucenec, Levoca and Kezmarck. Zilina changed hands twice and is now in possession of the Czechs.

Lucenec and Galanta are in territory given to Hungary after Munich.

Bulgars Wait At Cairo

With a stern rebuke from Moscow ringing in their ears, the four Bulgarian armistice delegates waited in Cairo. They were held incommunicado to prevent them from making any unofficial contacts or receiving reporters, pending the return from Washington of Lincoln MacVeagh, United States Ambassador to the refugee Greek and Yugoslav governments, within the next few days.

There likely will be additional consultation with other Allies, particularly the Yugoslav and Greek governments in exile, before the armistice is concluded.

Moscow announced without comment that the Romanian peace delegation, led by Prince Barbu Stirbey, had arrived in the Soviet capital. The position of these emissaries was strengthened by reports of pitched battles between Romanian and German troops.

Romanian Armistice Soon

An Associated Press dispatch from Ankara said the Russo-Romanian armistice was expected to be signed within 48 hours.

The Romanian news agency reported General Gestenberg, head of the German military mission in Romania since 1938, had been made a prisoner. The Ankara report said Gestenberg promised a peaceful retreat but later took Romanian hostages and sent bombers over the Bucharest residential district.

A German news agency report attempted to discredit the Bulgarian armistice delegation in Cairo." "Berlin political circles do not believe this intermediary is invested with powers to accept terms," the dispatch said.

[Moscow radio, heard by United States government monitors, said the proclaimed Bulgarian neutrality was a ruse to allow Germans to take refuge in Bulgaria "from Allied pursuit." The broadcast said there was "verified information" that German ships and submarines were hiding in the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas. Some of these, it said, already had been scuttled "with the aid of the Bulgarian authorities."]

NEUTRAL POLICY OF BULGARIA IS SHOT BY RUSSIANS

SEP 2 1944

NIGHT

MOSCOW, Aug. 31 — (AP) Russia got tough with Bulgaria today and let it be known that if Sofia's leaders want to save themselves and their country they better get into the war against Germany with speed and energy.

Bulgaria, it was asserted by a writer in the newspaper Red Star, has fooled no one with her declaration of neutrality but has, in fact, under the present circumstances followed a course convenient to Hitler.

Protestations of neutrality and assertions that she will disarm Germans within Bulgarian boundaries are wholly insufficient to Russia. Serious military operations against the Nazis are the only sounds from Sofia that will reach Moscow's ears.

Russia also pointedly reminded the Bulgars that the United Nations have not only not forgotten but will remember the part played and being played by their troops in Yugoslavia and Greece.

Bulgaria's conclusion of an agreement with the Germans whereby—according to Tass—Hitler has been allowed to withdraw troops and munitions had created considerable feeling against Sofia.

The country's failure to intern armed Germans, ships and crews in Bulgarian waters has forced the Soviet to look upon her neutrality declaration as just another piece of double dealing.

"The maneuvers of Bulgarian rulers are not going to fool anyone," wrote Professor Alexander Yerusalimsky in his international review in Red Star.

The authoritative writer said it would be interesting "to know what Bulgaria is going to do with her own troops, particularly those which are fighting against the people of Yugoslavia." He recalled that the Bulgarian foreign minister "justified the criminal deeds of the Bulgarian occupants of Yugoslavia and called their conduct 'exemplary'. Yugoslavian and Greek people who experienced and know the feel of Bulgarian bayonets are of quite a different opinion."

Bulgaria Aiding Nazis, Reds Charge

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Moscow today accused Bulgaria of aiding the Germans after professing neutrality, with the Russian press declaring the only hope for the Bulgars to save themselves would be by active war against the Nazis.

This sharp rebuke came as a Bulgarian armistice delegation was held virtually prisoners in Cairo, awaiting Allied terms. The formal presentation was delayed pending return from America in a few days of Lincoln MacVeagh, United States Ambassador to the exiled Greek and Yugoslav governments.

Talks Believed Continuing

Consultations with some of the Allies, especially the Greeks and Yugoslavs, whose lands have been occupied by Bulgarian troops, were believed not yet completed.

Moscow press articles charged that Bulgaria, after declaring her neutrality, had made an agreement with the Germans whereby Hitler would be allowed to withdraw troops and munitions from the country.

Sofia's failure to intern armed German ships and crews in Bulgarian waters, and the role Bulgars played and are playing in Greece and Yugoslavia will not be forgotten, they asserted.

Russia and Bulgaria are not at war.

"The maneuver of the Bulgarian Government will not fool anybody and the Allies are taking this into full account," a Moscow broadcast said.

Ankara reports said the Germans bombed Bucharest, causing heavy damage in residential districts. These same reports said General Gestenberg, head of the German air mission in Romania, was taken prisoner, but escaped.

Subterfuge Alleged

Quoting a Tass dispatch from the Romanian port of Constanta, where Soviet troops stand only 29 miles from the Bulgarian border, the Moscow radio declared that by all indications Bulgaria announced herself a neutral "in order to enable the Germans to hide in Bulgaria from prosecution by the Allies."

Moscow declared Bulgarian troops still were fighting along with Germans against the Yugoslav Partisans and the Greeks.

Says Policy Not Altered

"This additional evidence of the real aims of the Bulgarian Government confirms, as all other factors do, that the Government of Premier Ivan Bagrianov in reality doesn't think of bringing about a radical change in policy," Moscow declared.

". . . Bulgarian propaganda, in raising a big noise around the declaration of neutrality, attempts at the same time to put into circulation all sorts of rumors, even going so far as to act as if Soviet circles had approved of the present position. These maneuvers have been exposed."

The German radio today quoted a dispatch from Sofia as saying that Bulgaria had recalled her Minister to Vichy "owing to the situation in France."

CHURCHILL SAYS V-DAY NEAR

LONDON, Aug. 31—(AP) Prime Minister Churchill, in a message to Poland on the eve of the fifth anniversary of the German attack, declared tonight the day of liberation was drawing near and "a new Poland will be born" from the sacrifice of Poles at home and abroad.

Polish Premier Reveals Plan For Reaching Russian Accord

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Premier of Poland, today revealed his terms for reaching an accord with Russia while guaranteeing the nation's sovereignty, and appealed for United States and British backing as a "test case" involving hopes for a lasting peace.

His program called for formation of a coalition government as soon as Warsaw is liberated, with equal representation for the country's five political parties—including the one which is the mainspring for the rival, Soviet-sponsored National Liberation Committee.

His appeal, on the eve of the fifth anniversary of the German invasion of Poland, was made at a press conference during which he called anew for increased aid to patriots within the capital.

Problem Linked To Peace

The Premier told the press conference that it had been forgotten throughout the world that the Polish question concerns Poland's future political system and "its future sovereignty and independence." He added that "it concerns the permanent settlement of relations in Europe such as will guarantee harmony, and is closely linked with bases of a future lasting peace."

He reported that his proposal to Russia contained "methods" by which the frontier questions shall be approached, but declined to discuss their nature.

The National Liberation Committee, set up in Moscow and since moved to Lublin, in Poland, has advocated acquisition of east Prussian territory as compensation for loss of land in the east.

Points Of Plan Listed

As the Premier spoke, the plan, approved by the Cabinet of the exiled Polish Government in London, was en route to Moscow.

The nine points of the plan are:

1. The Polish Government to be reconstructed when Warsaw is liberated.

2. Mikolajczyk himself to go to Warsaw to consult the political parties and obtain their candidates for Government posts.

3. The new Cabinet to give equal representation to Popular, Social Democratic, National Democratic, Christian Labor and Polish Workman's political parties. The latter is the Russian-sponsored group.

4. Known Fascists to be excluded from the Government.

5. A new "unity" council to replace the present three councils—sponsored by the London Government, the liberation committee and the underground.

6. Diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union to be renewed.

7. Administration of civilian affairs behind the Red army lines to be arranged by agreement with Russia.

8. Election machinery to be set up.

9. Military forces to be governed by a war cabinet and the commander in chief to be abolished. This was designed to meet Russian antipathy to Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski, present commander in chief.

Speaking slowly and cautiously, obviously attempting to avoid saying anything which might snap the thin thread of informal negotiations between London and Russia, Mikolajczyk said he had been promised in Moscow that help would be sent to free Warsaw.

Not Up To Expectations

In response to questions he could not or would not say why that help had not reached Polish expectations.

The Premier went into detail on the way plans had been prepared for an uprising of the underground as the Red army advanced. He said those plans had been laid before President Roosevelt and he was understood to have disclosed them to the Soviet through the combined military boards.

He denied that the uprising differed in any manner from the procedure elsewhere in the country. He said that in some areas the Poles fought alone for as long as three months when Russian progress had been slower than expected.

Pole Exiles Suggest Coalition Cabinet

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Prime Minister Mikolajczyk of the Polish Government in exile announced today an offer to Russia to form a coalition cabinet with equal representation of Poland's five parties.

On the eve of the fifth anniversary of the German attack on Poland that started this war, the Prime Minister said his nation's fate was a "great test case for the world." He said Warsaw again had called for help but that the Russians had not yet granted permission for Allied shuttle planes to land on Soviet soil in order to support General Bor's still-fighting Patriot army in the capital.

Near End Of War

"We are near the end of this war," Mikolajczyk said, "and the ideological principles of the war, comprised in the Atlantic Charter and four freedoms, have somehow depreciated in value in favor of power politics."

As a result, he said, such states as Poland "cannot conduct their policy in the seclusion of diplomatic conferences but must conduct it honestly and openly in the light of the day before the public opinion of the great powers."

Underground Approves

The exiled Government's plan for accord with the Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation has been approved by the Polish underground and by his cabinet and is en route to Moscow, the Prime Minister said.

Under its terms:

1. The Government would be reconstructed when Warsaw is liberated.

2. Mikolajczyk would return to Warsaw and consult various political parties and get their candidates for Government posts.

3. A cabinet would be formed with equal representation of the Popular, Social Democratic, National Democratic, Christian Labor and Polish Workman's political parties. The last is a Russian-sponsored group.

Fascists Outlawed

The Government would include no person known to be a Fascist.

5. The new Government would renew diplomatic relations with Russia, and agree with Russia on administration of civilian affairs behind Red army lines.

6. Preparations would be instituted for elections.

7. A war cabinet would be created on the pattern of the British, to govern military forces, and the post of commander in chief would be abolished.

This provision was designed to meet Russian antipathy to General Sosnkowski.

AMERICAN FLAG FLIES IN POLAND

Moscow, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—American and British flags flew in Poland today for the first time since the German conquest of 1939. Together with those of Russia and Poland, they were unfurled at Lublin at the unveiling of a monument to Red Army fighters.

Germans Admit Slovak Revolt

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Berlin acknowledged today that a revolutionary movement had broken out in its puppet state of Slovakia and that some garrisons had deserted.

The official German news agency, DNB, said riots occurred at several places in Slovakia and quoted a German Foreign Office spokesman as saying they could be traced to activity of Partisans and agents of Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

DNB said the outbreaks "had rather the character of Bolshevist terror," starting with murder of priests and violation of women.

Nazis Send Aid

The agency reported that Joseph Tiso, President of Slovakia, had appealed to Germany for aid and that it had been given.

Czechoslovak sources in London had announced the uprising yesterday and said it was the work of the Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior. The London announcement said the forces had launched concerted attacks in several areas against important communications points.

DNB said Tiso addressed an appeal to soldiers and farmers, "upon whose initiative the action was started." It quoted "Berlin circles" as predicting "an early end of the riots and punishment of those responsible for them."

Czechs In Control

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Czechoslovakian underground forces have seized almost all Slovak territory with the exception of border areas, and the Germans have thrown tanks into heavy fighting, the commander of Czech forces in Slovakia reported today through London headquarters.

The announcement said heavy fighting raged for the towns of Zilina, Trnava, Galanta, Lucenec, Levoca and Kezmarck. The Germans threw tanks into the fighting for Trnava. Zilina changed hands twice and now is in possession of the Czechs.

Czech forces fighting in Lucenec and Galanta were in territory ceded to Hungary after Munich.

ALLIED BOMBERS HAMMER GERMAN ROBOT PLATFORMS

SEP 2

LONDON, Aug. 31.—(AP) Hundreds of British heavy bombers and American Marauder mediums ripped German ammunition and flying bomb fuel dumps in the channel coast area today in the path of encroaching Allied land armies, and also struck twice at tiny Cezembre island whose Nazi gunners are preventing Allied use of St. Malo harbor in Brittany.

Poor weather restricted daylight operations after night blows by British Mosquito bombers which swept through low storm clouds into Germany, loosing blockbusters on Frankfurt and battering rail transport leading back into the French border area.

Hit Cezembre Island

Twin-engined U. S. Marauders opened a morning attack, their second in 18 hours, on Cezembre island, a small rocky bit of land several miles off captured St. Malo, where German 150-MM batteries have been shelling the captured port. None of the Marauders was lost.

Then up to 750 RAF four-engined Halifaxes bombed the islet in the afternoon, from an altitude of 2,000 feet. This was the fourth attack in a week on the stubborn Nazi garrison.

Lancasters and Halifaxes, supported by Spitfire fighters, made an afternoon attack on what were described as "long-range weapon supply depots" in northern France. Marauders also spilled their tons of explosives along the coast.

Fuel and explosives for the flying bombs and also launching ramps certainly are located in the area attacked, but there is a strong belief here that supplies for even heavier German rocket weapons and their installations have been building up in that region.

Neither fighters nor enemy anti-aircraft fire were encountered on these missions, and no losses had been reported at a late hour.

Land advances were opening up the possibility of using new airstrips north and east of Paris, especially along the Reims-Aimens line. Two fields near Laon, one at Montdidier, and another at Amiens are likely to be put to good use by Allied fighters and light bombers.

At the specific request of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, American Havocs struck a German ammunition dump in the Forest D'Arques, five miles southeast of Dieppe, exploding shells used by enemy artillery covering the German retreat.

Blast Oil Depot

The Havocs had blasted a large German oil storage depot Wednesday in the same forest, scarcely more than 20 miles ahead of Canadian forces outflanking Rouen.

The speedy all-purpose RAF Mosquitos in their night attacks left strings of enemy rolling stock burning along the railways extending beyond the Ardennes gap down to Metz and Saarbrucken. One crew, finding a large concentration of large etaoinshrdlu cmfwyp schrdfl freight cars in the yards at Sedan, where the Germans broke through into France in 1940, called for help and soon a whole formation of Mosquitos swarmed over the target and left it a mass of flames.

One train was wrecked at a crossing of the Somme river between Amiens and St. Valery, and in these widespread night operations which included sowing mines in enemy waters, not a plane was lost.

The German News agency Transocean said Nazi bombers also were active over France during Wednesday night, attacking Soissons only a short time after its capture by American troops.

Planes Blast Munitions Dump Close To Dieppe

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—American Havoc dive bombers exploded an ammunition dump five miles southeast of Dieppe today in an operation ahead of the fast-moving British and Canadian armies made at the request of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery.

The dump was in the Darques forest where Havocs bombed a large German oil depot yesterday.

Marauder mediums made their second raid in 18 hours on the fortified island of Cezembre, barring access to the mouth of St. Malo harbor.

A strong force of heavy British Halifax bombers returned to the attack on Cezembre Island later in the day, letting down through overcast to 2,500 feet to beat at the heavy gun batteries.

Rail Hubs Bombed

Mosquitos struck at transport and industry in northern France and Germany last night despite the handicap of poor weather.

While some of them bombed the industrial center of Frankfurt without loss, others operating as fighter-bombers battered rail targets from the front to the German border.

They plowed through storms and clouds as low as 500 feet and wrecked trains and tracks directly in the path of the retreating Germans.

Strings of rolling stock were left burning in widespreaad operations extending beyond the Ardennes Gap, down to Metz and Saarbrucken.

One crew, finding a large concentration of cars in the yards at Sedan, called for help. Soon a whole formation of Mosquitos swarmed over the target, which was left a mass of burning wreckage.

One train was wrecked at a crossing of the Somme between Amiens and St. Valery by bombing and strafing.

The German news agency Transocean said German bombers were also active over France during the night, attacking Soissons only a few hours after its capture by Americans.

Fifteenth Smashes German Planes

ROME, Aug. 31 (AP)—Strafing attacks by American Fifteenth Air Force Mustangs yesterday destroyed scores of German transport planes, gliders and bombers massed on Rumanian and Hungarian airfields to support desperate efforts to extricate the German armies from Rumania.

Negro pilots made five separate strafing asaults on an airdrome just outside Oradia, Rumania, which was covered with many types of German planes.

Oil tank cars were fired.

Heavy bombers of the Fifteenth Air Force devoted the day to hammering two railroad bridges in Yugoslavia on the main routes from Hungary to Belgrade.

Liberators cut a thousand-foot bridge at Cuprija, over the Moravia River, and Flying Fortresses knocked out a crossing over the Danube northwest of Belgrade.

ROBOTS HIT LONDON FROM NEW SITE

LONDON, Aug. 31—(AP) Flying bombs possibly aimed from the low countries thrashed in London and southern England today while the Nazi uncorked a propaganda campaign boasting of the V-1's mobility in an apparent attempt to offset heartening news that dozens of robot roosts have been captured by Allied armies in France.

Sweating out the war's last mile, British civilians were cheered by the Allies' sweep through robot land across the channel, but they also noticed that today's periodic barrages, although on a reduced scale, came from the most northerly sites so far used—in extreme north France or Belgium and possibly even Holland.

Dispatches from France said that in addition to dozens of launching sites already captured, at least 100 more are expected to be grabbed between Le Havre and the Somme.

But Prime Minister Churchill's warning still held—the buzzbomb plague could not be counted as ended until Germany is crushed.

DNB, German news agency, said captured sites in France meant little. "V-1 is not tied to fixed bases and is being adapted to war movement," it said. "Bunkers and earthworks captured by Anglo-Americans are only empty sheils. Vital parts of equipment and the secret V-1 itself nowhere have been captured."

It was obvious the Nazis were adapting their weapon to new conditions, preparing to reduce its weight to get longer range.

The chief of one German V-1 formation was reported to have said that construction and arrangement of a German long range weapon have been simplified to such measures that shifting of its bases is possible at any time, no matter whether from Normandy or from the depth of the Continent.

The Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet was quoted in a London broadcast as saying a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman "has admitted the Allies have invented an effective defense weapon against flying bombs."

Britons also noted with satisfaction the admission by propaganda Minister Goebbels that the Nazis' promised new wonder weapons have been delayed and his acknowledgement that they could not work miracles anyway.

Germans Resume Buzzbomb Attacks

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Germans resumed their flying bomb attacks upon London and the southern counties early today, and an official British announcement acknowledged both damage and casualties.

The early part of the night was comparatively quiet, periodic salvos with which the Nazis had hammered southern England tapering off at dusk.

Robot Launching Platform Is Described

Near Rouen, France, Aug. 31 (AP). Among the many robot bomb sites now behind the lines of the Canadian First Army is one hidden on the grounds of Chateau, a little village northeast of Rouen, which Frenchmen said the Germans abandoned three weeks ago.

The launching platform consisted of two steel rails about 12 feet apart and about 200 feet long, on ties. This was sunk about two feet below ground level. Bombs shot off of this and out through an opening in the trees.

The rails were circled by a narrow-gauge railway for little handcars carrying the bombs to the launching point. The rest of the installation consisted of storage sheds and shelters.

GUNS DUEL ACROSS CHANNEL

FOLKESTONE, England, Friday, Sept. 1—(AP) German big guns near Boulogne, France, opened fire across the Channel early today and British batteries replied briefly. For a time the sky was lighted with brilliant flashes as the Germans threw out shells in salvos of five to eight.

Nazis Report Capture Of N. Y. Correspondent

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Berlin radio declared today that an injured American war correspondent from New York had been captured by German troops during fighting in a small town on the Marne, but did not identify him by name.

"When German sappers attacked an American column with mine-explosive charges and hand grenades, a fully laden car blew up in the midst of the column," said the broadcast. "A correspondent from New York was rescued by German Red Cross personnel from his burning vehicle. He is suffering from numerous burns."

Doriot, French Nazi, Reported In Berlin

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Jacques Doriot, collaborationist leader of the French Popular party, has arrived in Berlin, the Moscow radio said today, and has been given an important post in connection with the employment of war prisoners and foreign workers.

The broadcast was recorded by the Soviet monitor.

DE GAULLE SETS UP REGIME IN PARIS

Paris, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—The French National Committee of Liberation has announced the formation of a Provisional French Government headed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, as President of the Council. It also includes some Communists and men whose identity is cloaked under assumed war names. The regime is expected to remain substantially unchanged until war prisoners and Frenchmen deported by the Nazis to work inside Germany have returned to vote in a general election.

Principal members of the new Government, and the posts they occupy, include:

Andre le Troquer, former Socialist Deputy, Commissioner of Liberated Territories; Quartus Cerat, former Senator Henri Queuille and former Deputy Francois Billoux, Commissioners for Territory to Be Liberated; former Deputy Andre Phillip, liaison between the Provisional Government and the Temporary Assembly; Gen. Georges Catroux, Coordinator of Moslem Questions.

'War Won,' Says Briton

WITH BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, Aug. 30 (Delayed) (AP).—A senior British officer declared today "we won the war on the Orne and now we are reaping the harvest." The enemy is fighting all the time with what he has, but so far he hasn't made any organized battle attempt."

WAR GUILT LIST

London, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—The list of war criminals being compiled by the United Nations War Crimes Commission already has reached an impressive length, according to Chairman Sir Cecil Hurst, but their identity and number cannot be disclosed now.

The commission's function, he explained, is limited to investigation and preparations for punishment of actual war crimes—violations of the laws of war by belligerents—such as massacres of prisoners, shooting of hostages, and other atrocities.

He stressed that the competence of the commission "does not cover treasonable behavior or collaborators with the Axis—the so-called Quislings." Such persons will be dealt with by the nations concerned.

Sir Cecil suggested that such cases as Adolf Hitler, if he is captured, might be dealt with through direct decision of the Allied governments, as was done with Napoleon.

Wodehouse Says He Made Mistake

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Author P. G. Wodehouse, who made five broadcasts over the German radio during his internment in the Reich, was quoted in a dispatch from Paris today as saying he believes he made "a terrible mistake" but meant no wrong.

In an interview with a London Daily Sketch correspondent at the French capital, the 63-year-old Wodehouse said:

"While I was in camp I had received 50 letters or more from readers in the United States, and I thought I would like to answer them more or less in a broadcast about how I got along in camp.

"I arranged for a series of five broadcasts describing my life in the five camps where I had been. I never intended to do any more than these and never did."

The British author, creator of Jeeves, the all-wise butler, was caught by the Germans late in May, 1940, in his villa at Le Touquet, France, and spent nearly a year in prison and internment camps, but then was allowed to move around in Berlin on his own.

"I assume it was mainly because I reached the age of 60," he said today. "At Loos prison all men of 60 had been told they were free."

He said he requested his transfer to Paris a year ago and was allowed to go.

NAZI USE OF GAS SEEN UNLIKELY BY BRITISH

LONDON, Aug. 31 — (AP) The Allies with their air fleets could retaliate a hundred-fold against Germany if the Nazis should resort to gas warfare, military men declared tonight, but they added they thought it unlikely gas would be used in this war.

If Nazi extremists bent on ruling or ruining should employ gas against civilian populations in a bitter-end resistance, the Allies would be in a position through their air strength to drench German cities, one Briton in a high position observed.

If the Germans should use gas on a limited scale, such as spreading blistering gases to hold up Allied troops, the Allies would be able to turn that into a bad battlefield bargain because of their mechanical and air superiority.

Recurrent rumors that the Germans are preparing to initiate gas warfare bring no official reaction here.

Nazi Defeat In Air Laid To Obsolete Plan

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The new 1943-44 edition of the authoritative "Jane's All the World's Aircraft" said today that Germany is on the verge of disaster because her air force was designed ten years ago as an army cooperation force rather than for strategic purposes.

Nazis Control Raid System

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Adolf Hitler has ordered the Nazi party to take control of the nation's air-raid precaution services.

This move announced by the German radio today, means the air-raid wardens henceforth will take orders from Gauleiters and trusted local group leaders of the party. Apparently many non-party personnel had been cracking under the strain.

In a companion decree in Dr. Goebbels' "total mobilization" drive, all theaters were ordered closed in Germany, Czechoslovakia and Alsace, the province annexed from France in 1940.

NAZIS ENFORCE LAWS ON WAR-WEARY PEOPLE

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 1—(AP) Nazi Germany entered the sixth year of the war today, straining against a landslide of military and political defeats and scraping the bottom of her manpower and material reserves.

On the eve of the fifth anniversary of Germany's lightning blow at Poland which ignited the blaze of a globe-girdling war, Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian, chief of the Nazi general staff, last night warned the punch-drunk German people that even boys will be sent into last ditch frontlines in an effort to "stop the onslaught of the enemy."

German newspapers carried bleak reminders of the anniversary with excuses for its length and failure.

On the harassed German home front Propaganda Minister Goebbels ordered all theaters closed in Germany, and Hitler put all air raid precaution services under the Nazi party to bolster morale of the bomb dizzy public.

News Of Allied Drive Used To Rally Germans

SEP 2 1944

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—An analysis of Nazi high command communiques indicates the German people are being kept informed of Allied advances in the East and West, apparently as a means of rallying them in a maximum effort for defense of the homeland.

The high command acknowledges the Allied gains, then Nazi propagandists stress the need for harder work in the factories, from which they promise will come secret weapons that will mean a German victory.

Often Ahead Of Allies

Frequently the German communiques are ahead of Allied reports. Almost invariably the Eastern front retreats are announced before the Russians claim advances.

When Lieut. Gen. Curt Dittmar, German military analyst, said recently that the gravity of the German situation in the West could not be disguised, he slipped in the soothing assertion that the Nazis are trading space for time—time to bridge the gap caused by shortcomings and weaknesses in the military field.

Blame Allied Superiority

Allied superiority, especially in the air, is stressed constantly as the main reason for the Germans' undoing.

Dittmar confessed the last two months had cost Germany spoils in the East and West which took years to gain. But he offered the Germans hope that a tooth-and-claw fight might make the Allies stop to consider if their sacrifices are worth the victories achieved.

Through all this "unvarnished truth," as Dittmar calls it, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels drums his desperation theme: It is now a question of either self-preservation or annihilation for the German people.

Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reich plenipotentiary for the total war effort, urged patience in an article in his newspaper, Das Reich, which was broadcast to the home front and the armed forces.

Goebbels' article declared "our war morale at present is far ahead of our war potential" and warned that the new weapons could not be used offensively in all fields until the present Allied technical material superiority is overcome.

Canteen Premiere Attended by Edens

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Foreign Secretary and Mrs. Anthony Eden were welcomed enthusiastically by American soldiers and other United Nations service personnel when they appeared at the opening of the Piccadilly Stage Door Canteen tonight.

In a brief speech Eden hailed the project as "doing far more for friendly relations of all countries than all the Foreign Offices and State Departments do by driving their quills from one year's end to another."

Among the performers participating in the canteen's premiere were Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire.

Nazi Weapons Not Enough

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The German people, fed on propaganda that new secret weapons would turn the tide of battle swirling ever closer to the Reich, were told today that it would be "very foolish" to expect even these to change the course of the war immediately.

CAPTURE OF LYON REPORTED NEAR

Yanks Take Nice Near Italian Border, Nazis Continue Flight.

ROME, Aug. 31. — (AP) Allied capture of the great French city of Lyon, 170 miles from the Mediterranean beaches, appeared imminent tonight after survivors of the German 19th army broke off the unequal fight in the Rhone valley and resumed their headlong flight before Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's American forces.

Nice, largest of the Riviera's famed playgrounds, fell without a fight to an American force driving east toward the Italian border, about 12 miles away. The famous resort city of 200,000 population was virtually undamaged except for Nazi demolitions in the harbor area.

Fall of Lyon Imminent

Indication that the Yanks had punched to the immediate vicinity of Lyon, largest French city still in Nazi hands, came in today's official announcement that "from the vicinity of Livron to Lyon (a distance of 70 miles) the Germans are fighting where they are forced to, and are delaying and blocking at a heavy cost in men and equipment."

In their pursuit of the fleeing enemy the American forces occupied Valence, 55 miles down the Rhone valley from Lyon. French troops, fast cleaning up the Mediterranean coast line, occupied the city of Montpellier and passed through Narbonne, the latter only 60 miles from the Spanish border.

From "near Lyon" Sid Feder, Associated Press War correspondent, reported seeing three railroad carloads of American Red Cross supplies—plainly marked — that had been looted by the fleeing Germans. He said smashed and torn cartons of food and medical supplies were scattered over a wide area.

The bag of German prisoners rose so steadily that a total of 50,000 announced today was obsolete before it could appear in print. Amid the litter of abandoned enemy equipment on the roads south of Lyon were many hundreds of German bodies—men sacrificed in a desperate gamble to get some portion of the shattered 19th army back to Germany.

Retreat Through Belfort

Few of the Nazis streaming northeastward out of Lyon appeared destined to reach the fatherland. Their escape route would lead them through the old French fortress city of Belfort near the northern Swiss frontier—160 long, hard miles from Lyon. An American armored column of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's northern invasion armies, dashing eastward from Paris to intercept the beaten enemy force, was last reported at Dizier, only 110 miles from Belfort.

What few Germans—if any—succeeded in running the gantlet were due to reach Germany with little more than their personal baggage. They already had left behind thousands of motor and horsedrawn vehicles, and acres of guns and supplies strewn along the roads marked the flight of what was left of a once-proud army.

If the escape roads out of Lyon were not crowded the credit was due to the terrible persistence o American troops. In addition to forcing the enemy into a hurried retreat which necessitated abandonment of the bulk of his artillery and other equipment, the Yanks incessantly hacked off and devoured additional chunks of the German force.

Yesterday morning the Nazis turned and fought sharply against an American column in the vicinity of Livron, on the north bank of the Drame river 11 miles south of Valence. In the afternoon, however, the enemy broke off contact abruptly and fled northward when threatened with entrapment by another Yank column which punched into Chabeuil, only six miles east and slightly south of Valence.

"By accepting heavy losses of the last several days, a substantial portion of enemy personnel has succeeded in reaching the Lyon area," an Allied statement conceded.

Nazis Lose 2,000 Vehicles

In a pocket little more than 11 miles long between Livron and Montelimar the Nazis lost 2,000 motor vehicles, 1,000 horses, 67 antitank guns, a dozen 77-millimeter guns, three batteries of field artillery, six railroad guns and eight self-propelled guns. Two hundred German dead were found in the same area.

Swift French assault forces, punching up the west side of the Rhone valley, were reported to have made contact with enemy rearguards near Bourg-St. Andeol, 14 miles north of Bagnols. In and near Lyon French patriot forces were said to be ambushing and inflicting sharp losses on the fleeing Nazis.

Allied warplanes took a continuous, bloody toll of the hapless enemy. Spitfire fighters around Lyon yesterday destroyed or damaged eight locomotives, 39 motor vehicles and 30 rail cars. French air force Thunderbolts destroyed six trucks and one tank car.

Allied headquarters reported that in the Alps along French-Italian frontier 'enemy forces have been showing signs of nervousness and have been moving out of the frontier passes, particularly the Larche and Mt. Genevre passes, to try to contact our forward elements.

YANKS SEIZE NICE IN DRIVE TOWARD ITALY

Other Americans Capture Valence and French Push Into Montpellier.

Rome, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—American troops pursuing the fleeing Germans up the Rhone Valley have occupied Valence while other American units moved through the French Riviera metropolis of Nice toward the Italian frontier, Rome twelve miles away, and French forces pushed on to enter Montpellier, six miles inland near the mid-point of the French Mediterranean coast.

Valence is twenty-seven miles north of captured Montelimar.

Twenty-five miles west of Montelimar the French reached l'Argentiere. O ther French columns sweeping southwest from the mouth of the Rhone penetrated ninety miles beyond the river without opposition, Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters announced tonight. Besides Montpellier, which is the capital of Herault Department and a city of 80,000, they also punched through Beziers and Narbonne—the latter only sixty miles from the Spanish border.

Nice Goes Undefended.

American-held Nice, a city of 200,000 and the largest of the Riviera's playgrounds, was taken without any opposition. Damage was confined chiefly to the harbor area, headquarters said.

[The F. F. I. announced today the capture of Bordeaux, last great port in southern France held by the Germans. The F. F. I. previously had declared the city occupied, but later said the announcement was premature. A communique said the towns of Chambery, in the Department of Savoy, and Tonnerre in Yonne also had been liberated, while cleaning up operations was progressing in central, southeastern and southwestern France.]

50,000 Nazis Captured.

The total of prisoners captured by the Seventh Army since it swarmed ashore on the beaches of southern France passed the 50,000 mark, with additional thousands rounded up from Nazi units intercepted in the Rhone Valley pockets south of the junction of the Rhone and Drome rivers.

Equally impressive were the materiel losses of the enemy. In a pocket of slightly more than eleven miles south of Livron "losses inflicted by our ground forces included 2,000 motor vehicles, 1,000 horses, twenty-seven five-millimeter antitank guns, twelve 77-millimeter guns, three batteries of field artillery pieces, six railroad guns, forty 20-milimeter antiaircraft weapons, eight self-propelled guns and a trailer with a printing press," Lieut.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters said.

Additional hundreds of vehicles and guns knocked out by Allied planes littered the roads throughout the valley and 200 enemy dead were found in the same area.

Yesterday morning the Germans locked in sharp battle with an American column in the vicinity of Livron on the north banks of the Drome River, eleven miles south of Valence. In the afternoon the enemy broke off contact and fled north when the avenue of escape was threatened by another Allied column that reached Chabeuil, six miles southeast of Valence.

Driven Out Of Village

During the course of one of the most violent Nazi rear-guard actions in the Montelimar area, the Germans drove Patch's doughboys out of the occupied village of Clary, five miles northeast of Montelimar, last Monday night. The Americans retook it the following day, SEP 2 1944 against light opposition.

Farther north in the Alps of the Franco-Italian frontier south of Switzerland "enemy forces have been showing signs of nervousness and have been moving out of frontier passes, particularly the Larche and Mt. Genevre passes, to try to contact our forward elements," said an official report.

It was one of these thrusts in force that compelled the small American garrison to withdraw into the outskirts of Briancon, five miles from the border.

Patriots Ambush Nazis

Swift French assault forces punching up the west side of the Rhone river valley today were reported to have made contact with enemy rear guards in the vicinity of Bourg-St. Andeol, 14 miles north of Bagnols, their farthest point of advance the preceding day.

The Germans lucky enough to escape to Lyon had a long, hard road ahead to the safety of the German frontier.

In and near Lyon small fleeing enemy columns have been raided repeatedly by French patriots. Nazi losses from these ambushes have been extraordinarily high, reports reaching Rome said.

In the Lyon area Allied warplanes were taking a steadily mounting toll of Germans who escaped to that communications center and who were trying desperately to muster transportation for a continued flight.

3 Red Cross Rail Cars Rifled By Nazis

With the Seventh Army near Lyon, France, Aug. 31 (AP)—Troops in this area found three railroad cars, labeled "Not To Be Opened, International Red Cross Property," broken into and rifled.

All around the area of a side track onto which the cars were shunted were torn cartons of food and medical supplies, which the French said were taken off when the Germans fled this sector several days ago.

POLISH TROOPS CAPTURE PESARO ON ADRIATIC SEA

SEP 2 1944

ROME, Aug. 31—(AP) Polish troops in two days of fierce fighting with infantry and tanks have stormed and captured the German Adriatic stronghold of Pesaro, an outpost of the Gothic Line, and with British help have forced crossings of the Foglia river along a 16-mile front inland from the sea, Allied headquarters announced today.

Nazi forces counter-attacked strongly in an effort to drive the Poles from their first foothold in Pesaro, but were repulsed with heavy losses. In just over two months the vengeful Polish corps has pushed 150 miles up the Adriatic coast, burying 2,500 Germans and capturing 3,170.

(A German news broadcast reported that a major Allied tank force had penetrated into the "small bathing resort" of Pesaro, but declared it had been thrown back by concentrated fire of Nazi artillery).

In smashing across the Foglia river the British and Poles reached points within 2,000 yards of the enemy's main Gothic Line fortifications, into whose concrete casements virtually all Nazi troops had been withdrawn. Allied combat patrols were reported probing into these defenses from just north of Pesaro to the bend of the Foglia above Urbino, about 16 miles inland. The Germans hold all high ground north of the river.

Lynn Heinzerling, Associated Press war correspondent accompanying the Eighth army's advance, reported that the drive up to the Gothic Line had been made mostly against light resistance, but cautioned that "the main obstacles of the line, of course, have not yet been reached."

Allied troops who captured Urbino, an important art center, advanced to a point nearly five miles northwest of the town through difficult Apennine mountain terrain.

Thick, choking dust everywhere hindered the Eighth army's push, enabling Nazi artillerymen to spot the movement of Allied vehicles for miles. Roads behind the front line were plastered with signs saying "dust draws shellfire."

Enemy resistance was reported stiffening northeast of Florence on the central sector of the front as Allied patrols thrust deeper into the mountainous approaches of the Gothic Line. The American Fifth army front from Florence westward to the Tyrrhenian sea remained quiet.

Anchor Of German Line In Italy Falls

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Adriatic port of Pesaro, one of the eastern anchors of the Germans' Gothic Line, has fallen to Polish troops, and Allied forces now are in contact with strong enemy positions farther inland after storming across the Foglia river on a broad front, it was announced today.

Pesaro fell only after a bitter fight. The Germans counterattacked fiercely yesterday after the Poles had invested part of the city, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

The Poles announced they had taken a sizable bag of prisoners.

Germans Surprised

Dispatches from the front said that in some places farther west Eighth Army troops drove across the Foglia so swiftly that the Germans had not even had time to lay mines.

Headquarters said, however, that the forces already at grips with positions in the Gothic Line—on which the enemy is expected to make his main stand in defense of northern Italy—were meeting stiff resistance.

Reports from the field said that not a Nazi was left on the south bank of the Foglia for a distance of 16 miles inland from the Adriatic.

Other Eighth Army forces farther inland, headquarters said, were approaching the Foglia after occupying the town of Urbino and pushing on five miles beyond in an advance through difficult mountain terrain in the Appennines. Urbino is an important art center.

On the central sector of the front further advances in the upper Tiber and Arno Valleys also brought Allied troops close to the Gothic Line.

North of Pontassieve, which is just east of Florence, several important features were captured, headquarters said, but enemy resistance was reported becoming stronger hourly in this sector.

The situation on the Fifth Army front in the west remained unchanged.

Italians Accuse Nazis Of Killing 320 Hostages

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—An official Italian investigating commission accused Nazi Germany today of killing more than 320 hostages at the Ardeatine caves near Rome last March 24, and recommended that the full facts be referred to the Allied War Crimes Commission so that the guilty persons might be punished.

An interim report of the commission, appointed by Col. Charles Poletti July 11, said the executions were in reprisal for deaths of some Nazi troops on the Via Rasella March 23 and were believed to have been ordered by Field Marshal General Albert Kesselring.

The investigation disclosed, said the report, that the hostages were shot separately with revolvers or tommy guns fired at very short distances into the heads or necks of the victims. From the positions of the bodies, it continued, it was presumed the victims were forced to climb upon the bodies of others already shot.

Among the victims were many Jews and many innocent of any political activities, the report related, including "two 14-year-old boys and a priest."

British Advancing In Chin Hills Of Burma

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 31 (AP)—British troops slogging through monsoon rains made further gains in the Chin hills of Burma, headquarters announced today. Patrols on the road to Mandaya stabbed south of Pinbaw and in the Kazu area. Rain sheets limited air operations to ... ks in central Burma.

CHINESE CRUSH JAPS NEAR ICHANG

CHUNGKING, Aug. 31 — (AP) Chinese forces have crushed enemy defenses five to seven miles northeast of the Yangtze river port of Ichang in a driving offensive to prevent the Japanese from sending reinforcements to the Hengyang front, it was announced tonight.

This represented a setback for the enemy's campaign to control the entire Canton-Hankow railway, now stalled more than three weeks.

The Chinese high command also reported its troops repulsed enemy attacks 10 miles southwest of Hengyang, on the Siang river in Hunan province, and 60 miles to the east broke into the town of Chaling, where street fighting was progressing.

The Japanese offensive southwest of Hengyang—where two of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's finest divisions are astride the Hunan-Kwangsi railway—is aimed at eliminating the main Chinese threat to Hengyang, which the invaders captured Aug. 8.

In Hupeh province more than 320 Japanese were killed when Chinese smashed the invaders' defenses northeast of Ichang, a communique said. The enemy rushed in reinforcements from Ichang for a counterattack and fighting was reported in progress.

Supporting the Chinese in Hunan, Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's airmen destroyed or damaged 49 enemy planes.

In the Hengyang area, 100 enemy trucks were destroyed.

Aid To Relieve Famine Sought

Chungking, Aug. 31 (AP)—Shansi province authorities appealed to the Chungking Government today for emergency appropriations to relieve a famine as swarms of locust ravaged crops. A press dispatch said more than 170,000 persons were fleeing from the devastated area of Shansi, in East Central China.

5 JAPANESE SHIPS ARE HIT AT CELEBES

Catalinas Sink or Damage Destroyer and 4 Merchant Craft—Many Bases Bombed

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Friday, Sept. (AP)—Catalina flying boats damaged or sank a Japanese destroyer and four merchantmen in another raid at heavily hit Celebes Island, headquarters announced today.

Two tankers and two freighters were included in the new shipping damage at Celebes, where at least seventeen other Japanese vessels have been sunk or damaged in recent raids.

Celebes lies northwest of New Guinea and is an integral part of the Moluccas, which Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen have been pounding consistently.

Liberator bombers struck again at Palau, eastern approach to the Philippines, causing heavy damage to installations during a raid Wednesday.

During a heavy attack on Celebes on Aug. 24, Allied airmen probably sank a light cruiser among eight craft hit off Manado, Japanese harbor on the northeastern arm of the island.

Today's communiqué also reported the bombing and strafing of Davao, main city on Mindanao Island in the Philippines in a night raid.

The assault on Davao, Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, was the eighth direct attack on the city since the current aerial offensive engulfed it Aug. 6. Numerous strikes also have been directed against near-by shipping. The latest raid was aimed at supply areas and installations. Explosions resulted.

The Liberator thrust at Palau, at mid-day Wednesday, caused heavy damage among harbor installations, hit with seventy-one tons of bombs. There was no interception. An eighty-five-ton daylight raid was made on Palau five days before.

Other Allied raiders attacked often-bombed targets from Bougainville in the Solomons to Timor. Strong Navy, Marine and Army bombers hit Rabaul, New Britain. Three Allied planes were lost in all operations.

Allied Flyers Knock Out 23 More Jap Ships

Southwest Pacific Headquarters, Aug. 31 (AP)—Allied airmen stalking Japanese ships from the Kuriles northeast of Nippon to the Dutch East Indies have knocked out 23 more vessels, ten of them sunk.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique today listed nine enemy craft destroyed, small freighters coastal vessels and barges—the types which he has said were the sole supply carriers for many Japanese East Indies garrisons.

Halmahera Hit Again

These and the ten or more ships damaged, including a 7,000-ton freighter-transport, were found by bombers which ranged from Mindanao Island, in the southern Philippines, southward to Celebes, Ceram and Kai islands.

Halmahera, south of Mindanao, was given a 113-ton bomb drubbing Tuesday by heavy and medium bombers. The attackers met no interception as they concentrated on coastal defenses, supply and barracks areas on Wasile and Kaoe bays.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz at Pearl Harbor said one enemy patrol vessel was destroyed and another one, along with a tanker and a cargo ship, damaged when army and navy planes Sunday attacked Paramushiro and vicinity, in the Kuriles.

Oil Installations Hit

MacArthur said the planes which struck Ceram sank or severely damaged nine enemy coastal vessels and divebombed oil installations, gun positions and bivouacs at Boela, on the east coast.

Nimitz said that army Liberator bombers also hit an airfield on Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, 750 miles south of Tokyo; Pagan Island in the Marianas; air fields on Moen Island in Truk atoll, and Ponape Island in the eastern Carolines.

Navy planes also attacked Nauru Island and islands in the Marshalls.

JAP OUTPOSTS HIT BY U. S. BOMBERS

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 31 — (AP) Ranging from the Equator to the Bering sea, American Army and Navy fliers during the first three days of this week continued small raids to harass the Japanese around their empire perimeter.

The Navy's report today said the latest aerial strikes were staged Aug. 27, 28 and 29.

A Sunday night sweep over Paramushiro, in the Kuriles, followed two daylight attacks on island installations and shipping in nearby waters. The night raiding Army Liberators and Navy Venturas met only light ack-ack fire. All returned safely.

Yap and Woleai in the western Carolines were hit by single 7th AAF Liberators on Aug. 28 and 29.

Other Liberators maintained the pace of daily attacks against Iwo Jima, in the Volcano islands 750 miles south of Tokyo, striking Monday night.

Pagan island in the Marianas, below the Volcanos, was raided Monday night and against Tuesday. Gun positions and storage facilities were targets. Several fires were started.

Nauru, Phosphate island west of the Gilberts, was attacked Monday night and Tuesday. It has been raided daily since August 13.

Neutralizing raids into the Marshall islands were continued through Aug. 29. Mili atoll was the only specific target mentioned.

ARMY-NAVY PLANES RAID PARAMUSHIRO

Washington, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—The Navy has added another bombing raid against Paramushiro Island to the pounding that northern Pacific Japanese base received recently. Army and Navy planes, flying out of the Aleutians, carried out the latest reported attack on Sunday night and encountered only meager anti-aircraft fire, the Navy said today.

The Navy reported yesterday two other raids made on Sunday in which one Japanese patrol vessel was sunk and three other enemy craft damaged off Paramushiro. Other bombers, meanwhile, operating over a front extending south some 4,000 miles again bombed Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, and attacked gun positions and storage dumps on Pagan Island in the Marianas.

To Study U. S. Price Control.

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—Prof. Douglas Berry Copland, Australian price commissioner and economic adviser, will visit the United States, Canada and Great Britain soon to inquire into problems of price control and plans for liquidating subsidy arrangements under price stabilization.

Watch Is Kept On Rawson

Buenos Aires, Aug. 31 (AP)—The residence of former President Arturo Rawson, under house arrest by the Argentine War Department, is being watched by several plain-clothes policemen to enforce the detention order.

The revolutionary leader, arrested for participating in a public demonstration on the liberation of Paris, is allowed to receive visitors, however.

The War Department objected to his presence at the celebration August 24 in his uniform of brigadier general. During the demonstration he was lifted to the shoulders of the crowd and carried off by a column of people shouting for new elections.

The police accused him of leading the demonstration and he was ordered to remain at home for eight days.

Mexico Aids Property Shifts

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 31 (AP)—A Presidential decree just published grants tax exemptions to help Mexicans acquire enterprises owned or controlled by foreigners. The decree exempts payment of the property transfer tax on all operations in which Mexican interests take over enterprises owned or controlled by foreigners.

British Seek Airport Facilities In Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 31 (AP)—British negotiations to use Mexican airports were said today by military authorities to be under way here in an effort to facilitate the flight of Canadian planes to the Pacific in the expected eventual intensification of the war against Japan.

British Major J. L. Johns, who flew here yesterday from Bermuda in a British war plane, came to confer with Gen. Cristobal Guzman

30.24 — 1841

Cardenas, Mexican chief of staff, regarding the plan and Major Johns later will inspect Mexican fields and port facilities.

YUGOSLAVS REACH BELGRADE

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(AP) The British radio broadcast reports today that Yugoslav Partisans of Marshal Tito had reached the vicinity of Belgrade and that the sound of guns could be heard in the capital.

The broadcast, recorded by the FCC, followed an earlier one by the free Yugoslav radio declaring Tito's forces were moving northward on a broad front, seeking a junction with Soviet armies driving through Romania.

Nephew Of Goering Killed

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The German radio broadcast a Transocean dispatch tonight saying that Lieut. Helmut Goering, a nephew of Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, had been killed in an aerial dogfight over Normandy.

The propaganda agency said this was Goering's "fifth nephew to be killed in action in the present war."

343,191 U.S. Casualties

SEP 2 1944

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP) — Reflecting the period of heaviest fighting in northern France, total army casualties jumped to 284,838 on August 13, an increase of 23,249 over those reported just a week earlier.

Coupled with navy casualties of 58,353, the latest over-all figures for the armed services is 343,191, compared with 317,846 a week ago. All figures are on the basis of those officially reported to next of kin and represent a lag of three weeks or more behind action in the field.

MURPHY TO AID IN REICH RULE

Veteran Diplomat To Help Set Up Military Regime

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—The State Department disclosed today that work has started on organizing an Allied military government to run Germany once its armies have been beaten.

The disclosure gives positive evidence that the Allies have no intention of giving Germans a voice in their own immediate post-war future and are going ahead instead with arrangements to handle Germany in their own way.

Murphy To Represent U. S.

Robert D. Murphy, diplomatic veteran of the North African invasion, was named to be America's top diplomatic representative to help set up and operate the Allied military government over the Reich. He will have the personal rank of Ambassador, and for the time being apparently will be attached to the staff of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

One of its first assignments probably will be to attend the forthcoming conference between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, where the problems of controlling Germany and rendering her helpless to make future war are expected to be discussed.

The decisions to be reached by the Anglo-American leaders, if accepted and dovetailed into Marshal Stalin's plans, may furnish many of the terms to be imposed on Germany after unconditional surrender.

Allies Appeal To People

Meanwhile Allied propaganda pouring into Germany and directed at the German army is stressing three points:

1. The longer the Germans stay in the war tougher will be the peace imposed on them.

2. Continuation of the war is exhausting the German nation, costing the German people terrifically in lives and wealth. They have much more to gain than the Allied powers by getting it over with.

3. The Nazi leaders, having no hope, will try to fight on to complete destruction but the German soldiers can counter this madness by surrendering individually and in small groups until there is very little organized German resistance left.

Council Likely To Be Set Up

What to do with Germany once she is defeated has been the main concern of the European Advisory Commission since its creation at Moscow last fall. The commission, however, is responsible for all sorts of European political problems. The appointment of Murphy now indicates that machinery is being set up for concentration on German problems alone.

The top piece of this machinery is expected to be a military council having at the outset American, British and Russian membership, and possibly French, and later very likely including also representation of the smaller countries around Germany which are expected to share in the task of occupation.

The American representative on this council will be a military leader. Murphy evidently will be his principal political adviser. Should a mixed military and civilian organization later be set up Murphy might become the civilian member.

Halifax Denies Recall Report

After the State Department announced recently that Phillips would sever his connection with Eisenhower's staff, Senator Chandler (D., Ky.) said he had been informed that the British Government had requested that Phillips be relieved of his assignment because he had criticized British policy in India. This was denied today by the British Ambassador, the Earl of Halifax.

"I should like to make one fact absolutely plain," the Ambassador said in response to an inquiry by the Associated Press, "and that is that his Majesty's Government have never represented to the United States Government that Mr. Phillips was persona non grata or made any request for his withdrawal.

"It is also untrue that his Majesty's Government have at any time challenged the right of any representative of the United States to report freely to the President of the United States Government."

Halifax also said he thought it was "regrettable that assertions should be made which are quite untrue and which mislead the public."

PROBLEM CONFRONTS WORLD PEACE PARLEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—(AP) Russian, British and American delegates to Dumbarton Oaks, now working primarily on deciding what system of force can best maintain world peace, have come to the question of whether they should define aggression or leave the definition to the security organization when it is set up.

One Russian idea includes in the test for membership in the agency a prohibition against nations practicing Fascist, racial, religious, or nationalistic theories.

The American and British tendency is to leave specific definitions, apart from [illegible] invasion, for the future.

The role of the council of the future organization will be determined in part by whether its charter lays down specific acts which must be labeled as destructive of world peace, or whether large discretion will be left to the council as a situation arises.

It is believed that the smaller nations will push for a strict definition as an added assurance that their interests will be safeguarded.

HOUSE REJECTS DINGELL BILL BY HEAVY VOTE

Teller Count Is 188 to 54 Against Federalized Post-war Benefits.

LABOR BACKING IS IGNORED

Opponents of Legislation Framed by Ways and Means Body Concede Fight Is Lost.

Washington, Aug. 31 (A. P.).—The House defeated overwhelmingly today an effort to liberalize post-war jobless benefits, and then turned to consideration of legislation leaving unemployment compensation entirely in the hands of the States.

The action came on a substitute demobilization and reconversion bill offered by Representative Dingell (D.-Mich) which, while leaving administration to the States, would have set Federal standards for jobless payments—running up to fifty-two weeks at $25 weekly. It was rejected on a teller count of 188 to 54.

The vote was the first test in the House on the question of how far the Government should go in underwriting the job security of the working man in the post-war reconversion period.

Provisions of Bill.

The Dingell bill proposed minimum standards for jobless compensation at $25 a week for fifty-two weeks within a two-year period, and a raise in veterans' benefits to a top of $35 instead of $20 weekly.

It was offered as a substitute for the bill which the Ways and Means Committee received from the Senate and rewrote to erase provisions for retraining of war workers, their transportation back home, and the blanketing of 3,500,000 Federal employees into the unemployment compensation program.

Opponents of the Ways and Means Committee's bill, battling for more liberal benefits, conceded that theirs apparently was a losing fight.

Representatives Dingell and Celler (D.-N. Y.) told the House that the substitute bill had the backing of the A. F. of L., the C. I. O. and the railroad brotherhoods.

Rejects Amendment.

The Dingell bill embodies many provisions of the so-called Kilgore bill rejected by the Senate.

The House later voted down, 89 to 41, an amendment to the Ways and Means Committee bill, offered by Representative Eberharter (D.-Pa.), to restore to the measure a provision that the Government pay the cost up to $200 of transporting war workers back home or to places of new employment.

This provision was embodied in the Senate-approved bill, but was ripped out by the House Ways and Means Committee.

F. D. R., Churchill Talks Due Soon

SEP 2 1944

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—It now seems certain that within a month President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill will meet to make plans for control of Germany and immediate post-war security of the western world.

Also expected to be discussed are arrangements for Britain's full participation in the final phases of the war against Japan once Germany is out of the way. This British help was promised by the Prime Minister when the President and he met in Quebec a year ago.

London Implies Meeting Coming

Little remanied to be announced of the forthcoming session except the time and place. President Roosevelt has answered every recent press conference inquiry with the comment that he would meet Churchill soon. London reports said today that Churchill would not remain long in England following his trip to Italy and his conference with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

This will be the eleventh session of the British and American leaders with their political and military advisers. They last had three sessions in the middle East, meeting at Cairo with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Stalin at Teheran and again at Cairo with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey.

Changes Since Last Meeting

The intervening eight months have constituted the longest period since their original 1940 Atlantic Charter meeting that they have not conferred. That period has brought a number of political plans to fruition, notable among them the four-power conferences now under way here at Dumbarton Oaks on creation of a world security agency. But the expected meeting of the "Big Two" threatened to steal even the security spotlight away from the meetings of the representatives of the Big Four nations.

It is recognized that one of the Allies' most urgent immediate problems is that of short-range security in Europe, calling for continued political cooperation of the Allied powers after the necessity for cohesive military efforts has vanished.

What About Stalin?

This calls for continuation and expansion of the European Advisory Commission—a war agency created by the United States, British and Russian Foreign Ministers in their meeting at Moscow last fall. But that highlights another problem which the President and Prime Minister will encounter: What about Stalin?

In the past the three powers have been able to agree on military and political questions because England and the United States operated on one side of Europe while Stalin operated on the other.

Now the Anglo-American armies are within possibly a few weeks of meeting Russian armies in Germany and Anglo-American diplomacy must meet Russian diplomacy in every corner of Europe.

Some observers here are privately expressing surprise that none of the reports from Washington or London have spoken of Russian representation.

Italy Fears New War, Bullitt Says

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—William C. Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to France and Russia, says in the current issue of Life magazine that the Italian people believe "the failure of the United States and Great Britain to stand strongly for independence for all the states of Europe has made certain a new world war."

Writing from Rome, the former ambassador said Italians were haunted by a fear that the war will result in "the subjugation of Europe by Moscow instead of by Berlin."

"The Romans expect the Soviet Union to dominate Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia," and the eastern part of Germany, Bullitt declared.

He said Italy was "terrified" by the prospect that two of its neighboring states—Yugoslavia and Austria—might fall under control of Moscow.

$41,000,000 Relief Is Sent To Greece

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Food and other relief materials valued at more than $41,000,000 have been sent to Greece by the United States and four other nations, the Foreign Economic Administration said tonight.

Turkey early in the war cooperated in the program, FEA said in a report issued "in cooperation" with the State Department, adding that in August, 1941, the Turkish Government agreed to grant licenses to the United Kingdom Commercial Company for export to Greece of 50,000 tons of food.

The agency said that since such aid was provided from within the blockade area, it did not constitute any violation of blockade regulations.

Delivered in Turkish relief organization ships, the shipments were terminated early in 1942 because further supplies were not available in Turkey.

At that time the job of providing aid in terms of food, medical supplies and other materials was taken over by relief organizations and the Governments of this country, Great Britain, Canada, Switzerland and Sweden.

Through the first three months of this year contributions from the United States topped the list, amounting to $20,809,788. More than three fourths of this aid was in lend-lease, with the rest from the American Red Cross and the Greek War Relief Association.

Canada's contributions amounted to $12,534,768; Great Britain's $6,448,880; Sweden's, $818,328, and Switzerland's (to January 1), $771,786.

ROOSEVELT ORDERS 10 MINES SEIZED

Government Takes Over Penn. Collieries to End Work Stoppage.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—(AP) The government reached into western Pennsylvania today and took possession of ten bituminous coal mines were a strike of supervisory employes newly-organized by the United Mine Workers has caused 4,200 persons to stop work.

President Roosevelt, on request of the War Labor board, ordered the Interior department to seize the properties of:

Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal company, Indiana, Pa., eight mines, 3,200 men.

Ford Collieries company, Curtisville, Pa., two mines, 1,000 men.

The Solid Fuels administration of the Interior department announced that the mines will reopen for work Monday morning and said "every man is expected to be back on the job."

The presidents of the two companies were appointed as operating managers under the American flag. There will be no outward change in operations. But the employes will be legally working for the government and anyone promoting a strike would be subject to prosecution under the Smith-Connally anti-strike law.

Nine Members Quit P. A. C. in Rhode Island

Say Policy of Committee Is 'Detrimental to the Best Interests of Labor'

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 31 (AP).—Nine members of the Industrial Trades Union's Political Action Committee have announced their resignations in the belief that the P. A. C. policy is "detrimental to the best interests of labor."

The announcement was contained in a statement, made public last night.

The Industrial Trades Union is affiliated with the United Labor P. A. C., Rhode Island's counterpart of the Congress of Industrial Organization-P. A. C. The Industrial Trades Union is an independent union comprised of locals in Woonsocket and surrounding cities and towns in Rhode Island and near-by Massachusetts. The United Labor Political Action Committee includes these independent unions as well as several C. I. O. unions and one American Federation of Labor.

In the statement the resigning members said that "after careful deliberation we have come to the conclusion that we would benefit by leaving politics alone. As free men we wish to have our rights to vote for whom we please.

"We have many laws today favorable to working men and women," the statement continued, "and it was not Sidney Hillman or the C. I. O. who got them for us."

Those resigning were: Arthur J. Richards, chairman of the P. A. C. of the I. T. U. of Woonsocket; Joseph Bell, president of the Joan Plush local; Eugene Thibeault, president of the Falls-Yarn local; Mrs. Marie Vandal, council delegate; Eugene Joly, one of the seven vice-presidents of the I. T. U.; Octave Hantis, president of the Masurel Worsted local; Mrs. Blanche Lemieux, president of the Bunn Worsted local; Gaetan Hemond, secretary of the Sidney Blumenthal local, and Peter Recore, secretary of the Dale Worsted local.

N.A.M. Turns Down Proposal To Form Political Committee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31—(AP) The National Association of Manufacturers has turned down a suggestion from its ranks to set up a political committee like that of the C.I.O., its president, Robert M. Gaylord told the House campaign expenses committee today.

The proposal was advanced by a member, he said, after Attorney General Biddle ruled that the C.I. O. Political Action committee is not violating the law by seeking funds to promote candidates.

Gaylord said he wrote to the unnamed member:

"The fact that an attorney general has approved the actions of the C.I.O. Political Action committee has not changed that law. The Federal Corrupt Practices act prevents organizations such as ours from making political contributions.

"Even if the law did not exist, the course would be highly improper. The money collected by the National Industrial Information Council and the N. A. M. has been collected from Democrats, some Republicans and some New Dealers. It would be grossly unfair to even consider using these funds in a political campaign."

Gaylord said the N. A. M. and its subsidiary, the N. I. I. C., has not solicited, received or contributed any money, time or effort for a political candidate and doesn't intend to.

Representative Murphy (D-Pa.) asked Gaylord what he thought of 29.6 per cent of the 1936 Landon campaign funds coming from manufacturers. Gaylord said it was their individual privilege to contribute but no corporation did it.

Representative Brown (R-Ohio) then asked if that was the same campaign in which the "United Mine Workers gave or loaned $625,000 to the Democratic National committee" and the witness said he read that in the newspapers.

Wiley Says Many Press and Radio Men Forget Duty to Public

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 (AP).—Asserting that "the glory of America is her free press and free radio," Senator Alexander Wiley, Republican, of Wisconsin, told the Senate today they must be kept "free and untrammeled." He said that while the nation does not have any "kept press," it does have "some newspaper men and radio commentators who are paid to represent certain lines of thinking.

"Many such," he asserted, "become mired in the pursuit of accomplishing the result and forget their responsibility to the public welfare." A free press, he added, will have a "lot to do with getting out the facts and truth" about issues in this year's political campaign.

Jap Saipan Chief A Suicide

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 31 (AP)—Lieutenant General Saito, commander of Japanese forces on Saipan, asked his men to take "seven lives to repay our country," then died leading a suicide charge, it was disclosed here today.

Marine Corporal Joseph A. Black, Jr., in a letter to his wife, copied a marine translation of Saito's final message before the remnants of his screaming troops were wiped out by invading Americans.

"We Have No Materials"

"For more than 20 days since the American devils attacked, the officers and men of the imperial army and navy have fought well and bravely," said the message, taken from a dead Jap intelligence officer.

"Everywhere they have demonstrated honor and glory. Heaven has not given us an opportunity. We have not been able to utilize the terrain fully. . . . We have no materials with which to fight. . . . Our artillery has been destroyed. Our comrades have fallen one after another (but) the barbarous attack of the enemy is continuing.

"Whether we attack or whether we stay here, there is only death. Despite the bitterness of defeat, we pledge 'seven lives to repay our country.'

"I will advance with those who remain to deliver another blow to the American devils, and leave my bones on Saipan as a bulwark of the Pacific."

Navy Catalina Squadron Sets Mark in Pacific Rescues

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31 (AP)—Rescue of fifty-two aviators and PT-boatmen adrift in the Pacific by pilots of a Navy Catalina flying boat squadron was revealed tonight by the Navy.

The rescues were made in twenty open sea landings over a period of three months. Thirteen of those rescued were survivors of a "mistaken incident" between our own planes and boats, the Navy said.

Those participating in the rescues included:

Lieut. Chester I. Hawkins of Lake Ronkonkoma, N. Y.; Pilot Teddy Miller of Carthage, N. Y., and Radioman Carl Joseph Jendruczak of Erie, Pa.

CARS AND 30 AMMUNITION CARS ON A SINGLE MISSION.

THE IDEA HAS SPREAD TO THUNDERBOLT AND LIGHTNING GROUPS.

THE MOST SPECTACULAR ATTACK SO FAR WAS MADE AUG. 26 BY LT. HUGH MOOREHOUSE, 130 WEST PALM LANE, PHOENIX, ARIZ., WHO DROPPED A TANK INTO THE FIRE BOX OF A NAZI LOCOMOTIVE.

"THERE WAS A BOLT OF FLAME AND THE ENGINE BLEW UP," HE SAID.

MOOREHOUSE AND THREE OTHER MUSTANG PILOTS THEN DESTROYED THE TRAIN

AND ITS LOAD OF 20 TANKS AND ARMORED CARS.

THE TECHNIQUE CALLS FOR COORDINATION AND TEAMWORK. WHEN THE FLIGHT LEADER DROPS HIS RESERVE TANKS HIS WING MAN RIGHT BEHIND HIM SPRAYS THE FLOWING GASOLINE WITH INCENDIARY BULLETS. TANKS OF ALL FOUR PLANES IN THE FLIGHT CAN BE DROPPED ON ONE OR SEVERAL TARGETS.

"HIGH OCTANE GAS MAKES THE MOST BEAUTIFUL FIRE YOU'VE EVER SEEN," SAID LT. HORACE HOWELL, 302 AUDBOBON AVE., WAYNE, PA.

"A RAILROAD YARD MAKES A SWELL TARGET," SAID LT. COL. IRWIN DREGNT, VIROQUA, WIS. "YOU GET A GOOD FIRE GOING AMONG THE CARS AND THE FIRST THING YOU KNOW THE WHOLE YARD IS IN FLAMING RUINS."

MAJ. THOMAS L. GATES, ARCHIBALD, LA., EXPLAINED THE "FIRE BOMB" WAS NOT INTENDED TO TAKE THE PLACE OF THE STANDARD INCENDIARY BOMB.

"WE ARE JUST UTILIZING TANKS AND GAS WHICH THE FIGHTERS WOULD DROP ANYWAY ON THEIR MISSION," HE SAID.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS NEAR THE SEINE, AUG. 31-(AP)-THE BRITISH SECOND ARMY ENTERED AMIENS TODAY.

THE SWIFT BRITISH ADVANCE COVERED MORE THAN 60 MILES IN TWO DAYS AND CARRIED TO THE SOMME RIVER, ON WHICH AMIENS, A CITY OF 94,000, IS SITUATED. IT IS 53 MILES DUE EAST OF DIEPPE, SCENE OF A BLOODY COMMANDO ATTACK, AND 62 MILES FROM BELGIUM.

AN ARMORED COLUMN ENTERED AMIENS THIS MORNING AFTER CUTTING THROUGH LIGHTLY HELD ENEMY COUNTRY.

THIS LIGHTNING THRUST STARTED FROM THE VERNON BRIDGEHEAD ON THE SEINE AT DAYBREAK TUESDAY AND PUSHED INTO THE BIG INDUSTRIAL CENTER ON THE RIVER SOMME SOON AFTER FIRST LIGHT TODAY.

A SECOND COLUMN WHICH STARTED FROM VERNON AT THE SAME TIME CAPTURED THE SIZEABLE CITY OF BEAUVAIS, MORE THAN 30 MILES NORTHEAST OF ITS

SEINE STARTING POINT. WHILE ARMORED TROOPS MOPPED UP, A COLUMN WHICH STARTED ONLY YESTERDAY MORNING PUSHED FROM VERNON THROUGH TERRITORY ALREADY CLEARED AND PRESSED ON TO BROVINLEIEU BETWEEN BEAUVAIS AND AMIENS.

G841AEW

STILL ANOTHER COLUMN, WHICH BROKE OUT OF THE SEINE BRIDGEHEAD EAST OF LOUVIERS, CAPTURED AND PUSHED BEYOND GOURNAY-EN-BRAY, 15 MILES WEST OF BEAUVAIS.

THUS, IN THE SPACE OF 48 HOURS, LT.GEN.SIR MILES C.DEMPSEY'S SECOND ARMY MOVED FROM THE SEINE HALFWAY TO THE BELGIAN BORDER AND THREW A HOOK AROUND THE PENINSULA AREA FROM LE HAVRE TO DIEPPE.

CANADIANS SWEEPING AROUND AND BEYOND ROUEN WERE DRIVING WEST FOR THE CLEANUP OF GERMANS SCATTERED THROUGH THE LE HAVRE PENINSULA.

ONLY MODERATE RESISTANCE OR NONE AT ALL HAS BEEN ENCOUNTERED ON THIS FRONT.

CLEARING WEATHER AFTER 48 HOURS OF RAIN LET THE AIR FORCES LOOSE AGAIN TODAY. THE RAF SPOTTED A COLUMN OF 200 GERMAN VEHICLES FLEEING NORTHEAST FROM AMIENS AND SENT BACK WORD THAT THIS GROUP COULD BE COUNTED AS WIPED OUT.

AMIENS, CAPITAL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF SOMME, IS 81 MILES NORTH OF PARIS. THROUGH THE CENTURIES THE CITY HAS BEEN A BATTLEGROUND AGAIN AND AGAIN.

IN THE LAST WAR THE NAME, BATTLE OF AMIENS, WAS GIVEN TO AN OFFENSIVE BEGUN AUG. 8, 1918 BY THE BRITISH FOURTH AND THE FRENCH FIRST ARMIES UNDER SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S ORDERS. THIS SUCCESSFUL OFFENSIVE, WHICH CAUGHT THE GERMANS BY SURPRISE SHORTLY AFTER THE ALLIED COUNTERSTROKE AT THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE MARNE, TOUCHED OFF AN UNBROKEN STRING OF ADVANCES WHICH CULMINATED IN THE NOVEMBER ARMISTICE.

AMIENS WAS CAPTURED BY THE GERMANS, AUG. 30, 1914, BUT AFTER THE FIRST BATTLE OF THE MARNE THE FRONT WAS ESTABLISHED ABOUT 20 MILES EAST OF THE CITY, WHERE IT REMAINED UNTIL 1918. THE GERMANS MA A FIERCE EFFORT TO TAKE THE CITY IN MARCH, 1918, AND ADVANCED TO WITHIN EIGHT MILES OF AMIENS.

THE CITY WAS BOMBARDED DAILY BY HEAVY GUNS, BUT EVEN AFTER HOSTILITIES CEASED, THE TOWN RETAINED MUCH OF ITS MEDIEVAL APPEARANCE.

AMIENS' CATHEDRAL OF NOTRE DAME, ONE OF THE FINEST GOTHIC CHURCHES IN FRANCE, WAS BUILT CHIEFLY BETWEEN 1220 AND 1288. IT WAS STRUCK BY SHELLS NINE TIMES DURING WORLD WAR ONE AND ITS ROOF PIERCED.

THE FAMOUS TREATY OF AMIENS BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN, FRANCE, SPAIN AND HOLLAND WAS SIGNED THERE IN 1802. IN THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR, THE CITY, AFTER AN IMPORTANT ACTION, FELL TO THE PRUSSIANS NOV. 28, 1870.

THE POSSIBILITY AROSE THAT THE THREE POWERS MIGHT JOIN IN A DECLARATION CONCERNING ROMANIA'S CLAIM TO NORTHERN TRANSYLVANIA, ANNEXED BY HUNGARY IN 1940 WITH HITLER'S APPROVAL.

THERE WAS A BELIEF THAT BULGARIA'S TITLE TO SOUTHERN DOBRUDJA, ALSO CEDED BY ROMANIA IN 1940, MIGHT NOT BE BROUGHT INTO the NEGOTIATIONS BY THE ROMANIAN DELEGATION, ALTHOUGH THE PARLEY BEGAN WITH RUSSIA SHOWING A STIFFENING ATTITUDE TO THE "NEUTRALITY" CLAIMS OF BULGARIA.

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, AUG. 24-(DELAYED)-(AP)-RABAUL IS THE MOST-BOMBED JAPANESE BASE IN THE ENTIRE PACIFIC.

THE BY-PASSED NEW BRITAIN STRONGHOLD, WITH ITS SPACIOUS HARBORS AND NETWORK OF AIRFIELDS, FIRST WAS REPORTED HIT IN A COMMUNIQUE ISSUED APRIL 21, 1942. SINCE THEN, COMMUNIQUES HAVE REPORTED MORE THAN 360 RAIDS ON RABAUL AND ITS MAIN AIRFIELDS, VUNAKANAU, ROPOPO, LAKUNAI AND TOBERA.

UP TO YESTERDAY THE BOMB TONNAGE REPORTED DROPPED ON RABAUL WAS 13,688. FOR MORE THAN A YEAR, TONNAGE FIGURES WERE NOT GIVEN IN REPORTS ON INDIVIDUAL RAIDS. THE GRAND TOTAL PROBABLY EXCEEDS 20,000 TONS.

AMERICAN BOMBERS AND FIGHTERS HAVE SHOT DOWN 1,102 JAPANESE PLANES IN THE RABAUL AREA AND DESTROYED OR PUT OUT OF SERVICE 439 FIGHTERS AND BOMBERS ON THE GROUND.

THE FLIERS SANK 73 SHIPS, RANGING FROM HEAVY CRUISERS TO DESTROYERS, SUBMARINES, TRANSPORTS, TANKERS AND SMALLER MERCHANT SHIPS. THEY SANK 43 SMALL VESSELS, VARYING FROM 100 TO 500 TONS, IN A SINGLE ATTACK AT RABAUL AS WELL AS MORE THAN 200 HARBOR CRAFT.

RAIDERS ALSO HAVE DAMAGED 127 WARSHIPS, TRANSPORTS, TANKERS AND MEDIUM-SIZED MERCHANTSHIPS THERE.

THE PRICE PAID FOR THIS LONG-RANGE VICTORY WAS COMPARATIVELY SMALL. COMMUNIQUES HAVE ACKNOWLEDGED THE LOSS OF 244 AMERICAN PLANES. THE TOTAL PROBABLY WAS NEARLY DOUBLE THAT FIGURE BUT ANY PLANE WHICH WAS SHOT DOWN WHERE THE JAPANESE MIGHT NOT BE ABLE TO SEE IT OR FIND IT WAS CONSIDERED A MILITARY SECRET.

JAPAN HAD RELIED HEAVILY ON RABAUL TO BAR AN AMERICAN MARCH BACK TO THE PHILIPPINES. BUT RABAUL TODAY IS JUST A "MILK RUN" USED FREQUENTLY TO TEST OUT NEW PILOTS GOING INTO COMBAT FOR THE FIRST TIME. IT HAS JUST ENOUGH STING LEFT IN ITS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS TO SERVE AS A TRAINING TARGET.

HEADQUARTERS,ARMY AIR FORCES,PACIFIC OCEAN AREAS,AUG.31-(AP)-ONE THOUSAND-PLANE RAIDS ON JAPAN, DESTROYING ITS INDUSTRIES AND BREAKING THE BACK OF ITS MILITARY POWER, WERE FORESEEN TODAY BY LT.GEN.MILLARD F.HARMON AS HE ASSUMED COMMAND OF ALL ARMY AIR FORCE UNITS IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN AREAS.

"WE HOPE ERE LONG TO SETTLE DOWN TO SOMETHING OF THE KIND OF UNREMITTING BOMBING THAT HAS TO A LARGE EXTENT BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR BREAKING THE BACK OF GERMAN MILITARY POWER," HE SAID AT A PRESS CONFERENCE.

THE GENERAL SAID HE BELIEVED JAPAN IS HOARDING HER AIR FORCES, BOTH PLANES AND PERSONNEL, AND IS NOT ATTEMPTING TO MEET AMERICAN THREATS ON OUTLYING ISLANDS. HE ATTRIBUTED THIS TO A DESIRE TO HAVE POWER IN RESERVE TO THROW AGAINST THE AMERICANS LATER, POSSIBLY IN THE PHILIPPINES.

HARMON SAID HE THOUGHT 1,000-PLANE RAIDS WOULD BE POSSIBLE AGAINST JAPAN FROM BASES IN NORTHERN FORMOSA, ALONG THE CHINA COAST AND IN THE RYUKYU ISLANDS.

"I EXPECT THE DESTRUCTION (OF JAPAN'S INDUSTRY) PER WEIGHT OF BOMBS DROPPED TO BE GREATER THAN IT WAS AGAINST GERMANY," HE SAID.

HARMON SAID THE JAPANESE WILL NOT SURRENDER.

"HIS HOMELAND MUST EVENTUALLY BE OCCUPIED AND OVERRUN BY OUR FORCES," HE ASSERTED.

"WE ARE ALL JUSTLY ELATED OVER THE EXCELLENT NEWS FROM EUROPE. WE MUST NOT, BECAUSE OF THIS, SEE VICTORY JUST OVER THE HORIZON IN THE PACIFIC. WE MUST COUNT ON MORE THAN ONE YEAR OF HARD FIGHTING AHEAD BEFORE THE END CAN BE IN SIGHT."

RUSSIAN FLIER WHO WANDERED TWO DAYS IN THE SNOW AFTER BEING PITCHED FROM AN A-20 HAVOC BOMBER BEING FERRIED TO THE RUSSIAN-GERMAN BATTLE-FRONT.

THE FREAK ACCIDENT OCCURRED JULY 2, 1943, ON BARREN WASTELAND, ABOUT 70 MILES NORTHEAST OF GALENA, ALASKA, A STOP ON THE FAIRBANKS-TO-NOME FERRY ROUTE, BUT MILITARY SECRECY FORBADE TELLING THE STORY UNTIL NOW.

THE PARACHUTE OF THE SOVIET AIRMAN, LT.CONSTANTA P.DEMIANENKO, OPENED WHEN HE WAS FLUNG OUT AND HE WANDERED TWO DAYS WITH A BADLY-INJURED LEG.

SEP 2 1944

WORD OF HIS DISAPPEARANCE WAS FLASHED TO LADD FIELD, FAIRBANKS, AND BLAKESMITH TOOK OFF AT ONCE. HE SIGHTED A YELLOW PARACHUTE BUT A LANDING WAS IMPOSSIBLE WITH HIS WHEELED PLANE. NEXT MORNING, ACCOMPANIED BY MAJ.R.C.RAGLE, OFFICER IN CHARGE OF THE A.T.C.SEARCH AND RESCUE SQUADRON, HE RETURNED IN A FLOAT PLANE.

THEY SPIED THE RUSSIAN VIGOROUSLY WAVING TO THEM AND "SAT DOWN" ON THE NEAREST LAKE. BLAKESMITH SET OFF THROUGH THE BOG LAND IN THE DIRECTION OF THE RUSSIAN. A MILE OR SO EN ROUTE, HE SANK TO HIS ARMPITS IN QUAGMIRE.

BY THE TIME HE GOT BACK TO THE PLANE, THE RUSSIAN ALREADY WAS THERE.

THREE MONTHS LATER BLAKESMITH WAS AWARDED THE AIR MEDAL IN A CEREMONY AT LADD FIELD.

AN ALEUTIAN ISLAND BASE,AUG.26-(DELAYED)-(AP)-LIBERATOR BOMBER PILOTS OF THE 11TH ARMY AIR FORCE REPORTED SEEING 25 TO 50 BUILDINGS BURNING AFTER THEIR RAID AGAINST THE KASHIWABARA ARMY DEPOT ON PARAMUSHIRO IN THE KURILES TODAY, ONE OF THE MOST ACTIVE DAYS OF

THE NORTH PACIFIC AIR WAR AGAINST THE ISLAND CHAIN GUARDING THE NORTHERN ROUTE TO JAPAN.

LTS. ELLIS F. MILLARD, BRADENTON,FLA., AND JOHN A.NIXON, JR., OMAHA, NEB., REPORTED THEY COULD SEE THE DAMAGING RESULTS FROM THEIR PLANES.

AFTER THIS EARLY MORNING STRIKE, OTHER ARMY LIBERATORS AND VENTURAS OF FLEET AIR WING FOUR STRUCK AT KURILE INSTALLATIONS AND SHIPPING IN DAYLIGHT IN A TRIPLE THREAT OFFENSIVE.

DOCKS, SUPPLY DUMPS AND BARGES AT ONNEKOTAN ISLAND, JUST SOUTH OF PARAMUSHIRO, WERE SMASHED AND LEFT BURNING BY LIBERATORS. THE NAVY VENTURAS MADE A FOLLOW-UP RAID ON THE SAME TARGETS, STRAFING SHIPPING AT LOW LEVEL.

ALL PLANES RETURNED FROM THE THREE MISSIONS.

ELEVENTH AIR FORCE MEDIUM MITCHELL BOMBERS ALSO WERE ACTIVE. TWO OF THEM, WHICH SANK A SMALL PATROL SHIP OFF PARAMUSHIRO, ROARED DOWN TO BARELY 50 FEET ABOVE SEA IN A STRAFING ATTACK. IT WAS THE SEVENTH SUCH VESSEL SUNK BY MITCHELLS OF THE SAME SQUADRON SINCE MID-MAY. SEVERAL OTHERS HAVE BEEN DAMAGED.

SEP 2 1944

THE TWO LOW-FLYING MITCHELL PILOTS WHOSE PLANES SANK THE PATROL SHIP WERE LTS.RAYMOND LIVINGSTON, GLENDALE, CALIF., AND DANIEL CAMPBELL, CHELAN, WASH.

OTHERS IN LIVINGSTON'S PLANE INCLUDED; LT.RICHARD GARDNER, BOMBARDIER-NAVIGATOR, TOLEDO,O.; S/SGT.GEORGE BURNS, GUNNER, MORRIS PLAINS,N.J., WHO WAS CREDITED WITH PROBABLY HAVING DOWNED A JAPANESE FIGHTER; S/SGT.JOHN MACDONALD, ENGINEER-GUNNER, SOUTH BOSTON, MASS.; S/SGT.LEROY A.METCALF, RADIO-GUNNER, ATTLEBORO,MASS.

OTHERS IN CAMPBELL'S PLANE INCLUDED: LT.WILLIAM LYSAUGHT, BOMBARDIER-NAVIGATOR, ROSEDALE, LONG ISLAND; T/SGT.EMMETT BLAKLEY, RADIO-GUNNER, BROOKLYN,MICH.; S/SGT.WILLIAM GAJEWSKI, LANSING, MICH.; S/SGT.RALPH CAMPITIELLO, ENGINEER-GUNNER, WELLINGTON,N.J.

SEVENTH AAF HEADQUARTERS, CENTRAL PACIFIC,AUG.30-(AP)-FIGHTER PILOTS LEARNED ABOUT GROUND FIGHTING IN THE BATTLE OF THE MARIANAS -- STRICTLY AS A MATTER OF SELF-PRISERVATION.

THE FIGHTER PILOTS OF THE SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE SPENT THEIR DAY TIME SUPPORTING TROOPS WITH BOMBING, STRAFING AND ROCKET FIRE AND THEIR FIRST EIGHT NIGHTS ON SAIPAN IN INFANTRY TILTS OF THEIR OWN.

FOUR OF THESE YOUNG FLIERS TODAY TOLD HOW THE JAPANESE BEGAN TRYING TO INFILTRATE THEIR CAMP SOON AFTER THEY LANDED THEIR P-47 THUNDERBOLTS ON ISELY AIR FIELD JUNE 22, SEVEN DAYS AFTER THE FIRST ASSAULT WAVES STORMED ASHORE.

ZI GUESS OUR WORST NIGHT WAS JUNE 25," SAID FLIGHT LEADER FIRST LT.WILLIAM B.SPENCER OF SACRAMENTO,CALIF. "ABOUT 35 OF THEM TRIED TO BREAK THROUGH AND IT GOT PRETTY HOT FOR A WHILE."

THE THREE MEMBERS OF HIS SQUAD, WHICH THEY CALL THE "BAR FLIES," MADE HIS OPINION UNANIMOUS WITH NODS AND GRINS. THEY ARE SECOND LTS.CHARLES J.FIETZ OF (27 STANDISH RD.) REVIERE,MASS., RAYMOND L.CORMIER OF (2633 ACHUSNET) NEW BEDFORD,MASS., AND WALTER K.BYERS OF (2460 28TH ST.) ASTORIA,LONG ISLAND,N.Y.

30.24-18427

ALL FOUR PRAISED THE THUNDERBOLT, MAKING ITS FIRST APPEARANCE IN THE PACIFIC WAR IN THE MARIANAS. THEY SAID IT SIMPLY WAS TOO FAST FOR ENEMY ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNERS.

IT ALSO WAS THE FIRST TIME THE JAPANESE WERE GIVEN A TASTE OF THEIR ROCKET FIRE. THE PILOTS REPORTED THE ROCKETS ACHIEVED MORE ACCURACY THAN 500-POUND BOMBS, PARTICULARLY AGAINST PERSONNEL AND LIGHT MATERIAL.

FLYING IN THE MARIANAS WAS A GRUELLING JOB WITH 7TH AAF PILOTS MAKING 5,000 MISSIONS FROM JUNE 22 TO AUG.10. ABOUT HALF OF THEM WERE COMBAT PATROLS AND THE REST BOMBING, STRAFING AND ROCKET SORTIES. THEY FIRED 1,500,000 ROUNDS OF .50 CALIBER AMMUNITION AND DROPPED 532 TONS OF BOMBS.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NAZI PROPAGANDA MINISTER PAUL JOSEPH GOEBBELS WAS QUOTED BY THE BERLIN RADIO LAST (THURS) NIGHT AS SAYING THAT GERMANY WAS NOT DEPENDING ENTIRELY ON "NEW WONDER WEAPONS" TO CHANGE THE WAR TIDE, BUT ALSO ON A FULL CIVILIAN MOBILIZATION THAT IT IS HOPED WILL TIRE OUT THE ALLIES.

THE GOEBBELS ARTICLE IN THE MAGAZINE DAS REICH THUS THREW DOWN THE VAGUE PROPAGANDA STORIES EMANATING PREVIOUSLY FROM BERLIN TO THE EFFECT THAT GERMANY HAD DISCOVERED SOME NEW MIRACULOUS AND DEVASTATING MEANS OF QUICKLY BRINGING THE WAR TO AN END IN GERMANY'S FAVOR.
